Investigators looking at Pharaon's finances

Banker's empire is heavily in debt

By Elizabeth Kurylo and Bob Luke
Staff writers

Ghaith R. Pharaon, the Saudi Arabian financier who allegedly helped a rogue bank secretly build a financial empire, appears to be unloading his U.S. investments, even as federal agencies in Atlanta probe his business affairs in one of the largest local investigations in recent memory.

Investigators are discovering that the Harvard-educated investor, who seduced Georgia's movers and shakers in the 1980s with business deals and elaborate parties at his estate near Savannah, is rich on paper but deep in debt.

By the end of the 1980s, Mr. Pharaon reportedly had become one of the largest borrowers from the scandal-ridden Bank of Credit and Commerce International, leaving some investigators wondering just who really owns the financial empire he established.

In Atlanta, the Justice Department, the FBI, the Internal Revenue Service and banking regulators are trying to unravel Mr. Pharaon's business ties as part of a wide-ranging national investigation into the bank's affairs.

The Justice Department was criticized in congressional hearings this summer for ignoring evidence of the bank's wrongdoing. But federal authorities in Atlanta say the case is now their top priority.

"We're giving this case primary attention," said Joe D. Whitley, U.S. attorney in Atlanta. He would not discuss specific aspects of the Georgia investigation.

Federal investigators also are questioning the bank's relationships with former President Jimmy Carter, former U.S. budget director Bert Lance and former Atlanta Mayor Andrew Young. Mr. Carter received more than $8 million in charitable contributions from the bank. Mr. Young and Mr. Lance, who both were BCCI consultants, received substantial bank loans.

"We'll be looking at the facts and following them where they lead us, not presupposing any individual engaged in any misconduct until we can support that with the facts," Mr. Whitley said.

A lavish life mixed with charity

Investigators are following a trail that disappears into a frustrating legal fog of offshore tax havens, holding companies and limited partnerships. But Mr. Pharaon has emerged as the common denominator in Georgia.

Mr. Pharaon was a stylish deal-maker who commuted by private jet and relaxed on a $10 million yacht, balancing lavish displays of personal wealth against equally generous charitable giving.

Now some of his choicest U.S. acquisitions are on the block. In Richmond Hill near Savannah, Mr. Pharaon's InterRedec employees are aggressively shedding some of his investments.

His American Southern Insurance Co., a $33 million Georgia-based firm, will be sold in the next several weeks. Dooley E. Culbertson, InterRedec's chief executive, said he would sell the firm's 718-room Ramada Resort hotel near Walt Disney World for $43 million.

In New York earlier this year, Mr. Pharaon's DLF Finance Inc., which traded in the debt of Third World countries, was liquidated. And last week in California, the Independence Bank of Encino, which regulators say Mr. Pharaon secretly acquired for BCCI in 1985, hired a firm of investment bankers to find a buyer.

Banks only part of global empire

No one knows the full extent of his U.S. holdings, but financial records filed in 1984 placed his wealth at $743.3 million, mostly in stocks, bonds and investments.

But he also owed $236.3 million. More than half was to a syndicate of

Fuquas own 43% of purchasing firm

By Robert Luke
Staff writer

J.B. Fuqua and his family own 43% of Vista Resources, which has agreed to buy American Southern Insurance.

A company controlled by Saudi businessman Ghaith R. Pharaon — a key figure in the worldwide Bank of Credit and Commerce International scandal — is selling Atlanta-based American Southern Insurance Co. for $33 million.

The buyer is Vista Resources Inc., which is 43 percent owned by Atlanta tycoon J.B. Fuqua and his family. Vista, whose shares are traded on the New York Stock Exchange, currently has leather tanning interests.

The proposed transaction is expected to be completed by Sept. 30, if Georgia insurance regulators approve, according to Samuel W. Norwood III, Vista's president and chief executive.

"It's a good company that's been around for a long time and occupies a good niche in property and casualty insurance," said Mr. Norwood, referring to American Southern, which was founded 50 years ago and was bought by Mr. Pharaon in 1985.

"We think it's a propitious time to be buying" property and casualty insurers, said Mr. Norwood, observing that the industry is near its cyclical low point as far as profitability. "We're not economic forecasters, but we think that industry will turn up."

American Southern, which insures commercial fleets of cars and trucks and has tangible assets of $68 million, last year earned $3.9 million on revenue of $44.5 million.

BCCI $288 million. And the majority owner of BCCI, Sheik Zayed al-Nahyan of Abu Dhabi, is trying to collect, The Associated Press reported last week.

American Southern, licensed in 13 Southern and Midwestern states, is owned by InterRedec Inc., which is controlled by Mr. Pharaon, said Mr. Champlin, indicating the sale likely will be approved.

Vista had considered buying American Southern two years ago, Mr. Norwood said.

"We had some discussions at that time, but that didn't lead to anything," he said. "Then it came up again several weeks ago when it was brought to us by Robinson-Humphrey," said Mr. Norwood, referring to the Atlanta-based securities firm.

"We've been seriously negotiating for six to eight weeks," said Rod Dowling, a Robinson-Humphrey Company Inc. managing director.

3 former Fuqua officers

Both Mr. Norwood and Mr. Dowling are former officers of Fuqua Industries Inc., as is Dooley Culbertson, chief executive of InterRedec.

InterRedec is based in Richmond Hill, Ga., near Savannah.

"That would certainly explain how the Fuquas would be informed so quickly" about American Southern, Mr. Champlin observed.

Mr. Dowling said he approached Mr. Culbertson, a friend and fellow director at Atlanta-based Superior TeleTec Inc., about American Southern.

"Vista has been looking at insurance companies for a while," Mr. Dowling said. "InterRedec buys and sells companies for investment purposes, and they've been quite successful at it."

Regulators surprised

Georgia insurance regulators, who were notified of the proposed deal last Friday, said they were surprised by the move.

"We had talked to officials of [American Southern] early last week about Mr. Pharaon's problems, and nothing was communicated to us that he was interested in selling the company," said Dan Champlin, director of regulatory services at the Office of Insurance Commissioner.

Mr. Champlin said the insurance commissioner, Tim Ryles, was concerned about Mr. Pharaon's possible involvement in American Southern's operations.

That concern arose after the Federal Reserve Board moved last month to ban Mr. Pharaon from any future involvement in U.S. banking.

The Saudi businessman, who maintains a home near Savannah, is alleged to have acted as a front for BCCI in illegally acquiring control of several U.S. banks, including the former National Bank of Georgia. NBG currently operates as First American Bank of Georgia.

BCCI was indicted last week on fraud charges by a grand jury in New York. Last month, bank regulators halted BCCI's operations in eight countries.

Mr. Champlin said American Southern's chairman, Roy Thompson Jr., assured him last week that Mr. Pharaon, the son of Saudi King Fahd's physician and a BCCI stockholder, "had nothing to do with the active management of the company."

'Absentee owner'

"Apparently, they've had little if any contact with him over the years," Mr. Champlin said. "He was an absentee owner."

Mr. Pharaon reportedly owes

CARE issued cease and desist in Nevada

The Nevada Division of Insurance issued a cease and desist order on Sept. 15, 1994, to Dr. Richard E. Busch, William A. Rose, Chiropractic Association for Research and Education (CARE), Insurance Company of Great Britain and Professional Indemnity Corporation.

The Nevada Division of Insurance received an application from Chiropractic Protective, Inc., A RRG, as a domestic risk retention group for chiropractors. The Division of Insurance instructed Dr. Richard E. Busch and Mrs. Jean I. Busch, in the presence of their attorney, to cease further unauthorized insurance business and to take care of any enforcement actions by other states before their application would be considered. In connection with their application, the Division of Insurance received additional information that CARE and the American Chiropractor magazine, entities controlled or directed by Dr. Busch, continued to solicit insurance business. It also appears that CARE changed names and is doing business as usual.

Solicitation material shows an address for CARE of 2020 Pennsylvania Ave., S.W.-Suite 675, Washington, DC.

The California Department of Insurance and Washington Insurance Department have also ordered Professional Indemnity to cease activities in their states (see Special Report Vol. IV, Nos. 2, 3 and 4).

Trial set for international fraudster

Grahame P. Sanders, wanted by the Florida Department of Insurance in connection with its investigation of Provident Capital Indemnity, Ltd., pled not guilty to charges of multiple fraud and conspiracy in connection with his operation of Griffin Insurance & Reinsurance Co., Ltd. Trial originally scheduled to begin in January has been postponed until February. Sanders' bond, set at $100,000, was posted by Lloyd D. Hutchinson, who identified himself as a limited partner of Provident Capital.

Other defendants in the Griffin case, Gary L. White and Thomas Reid Methvin, pled guilty and face a maximum sentence of five years; both are scheduled to be sentenced Feb. 10, 1995. Gene Lambert was acquitted (see related story in Special Report Vol. IV, No. 5).

Additional Teale associates are charged

In the continuing saga of the massive Alan Teale insurance fraud, federal agents are continuing their investigation of associates connected to Teale, who died in prison late last year while serving a 17-year sentence. In a bid for a lighter sentence for both he and his wife Charlotte Rentz, Teale was providing investigators with details of his fraud empire. Since Teale's death, Rentz, who received a 13-year sentence, is supplying information although published reports state that she has not made a deal with U.S. authorities for a sentence reduction (see Special Report Vol. I, Nos. 2, 4; Vol. II, Nos. 2, 6; Vol. III, Nos. 1, 6; Vol. IV, Nos. 2, 3, 4, 6; and Vol. V. Nos. 2, 3, 4 and 5).

Stephen Coker

A 35-count indictment against Stephen D. Coker has been handed down by a federal grand jury in Mobile, Ala. The indictment charges racketeering, conspiracy, mail and wire fraud and tax evasion. The suit alleges that Coker masterminded a web of bogus insurance companies, brokerages and claims offices that fleeced consumers out of millions of dollars in premiums and unpaid claims. The indictment alleges that Coker conspired with Teale to create fake reinsurance companies in Belgium. Teale also rented $5 million in assets to Coker to capitalize his companies.

According to the indictment, the scams began in 1988 when Coker bought British & American Casualty Co., Ltd., of the British Virgin Islands from Steven Weicholz and siphoned off $1 million through a sham reinsurance agreement with American Southern Insurance Company, Ltd. One of Coker's management firms collected more than $30 million in California auto premiums, funneling part of the money to a Belgium-based reinsurer Coker had set up with Teale. This money was shifted to bank accounts in the Cayman Islands and Bahamas. Every few months Coker and his friends would vacation in the islands and bring back just less than $10,000 each to avoid federal money laundering laws. Once they arrived at the Miami airport, Coker would collect the cash from his friends.

After state regulators banished Teale's companies, Teale used Coker's companies as a front to continue selling bogus insurance. When the indictment was handed down, Coker was out of the country and is considered a fugitive.

John Lindsey/Willard Hayne/ Richard Jeffers

Others named in the indictment but not charged are John R. Lindsey, a bookkeeper and co-owner of several of Coker's companies including Brokerage Management Corporation, a Mobil agency that did business as The Insurors; Willard W. Hayne, Lindsey's uncle and a silent partner in The Insurors; and Richard Jeffers, an executive with The Insurors. Jeffers Investments Corporation has been affiliated with British Indemnity Group, Inc., through The Insurors. Coker produced business for Teale and controlled or managed Victoria Insurance Company; American Trust Insurance Company, Ltd.; Apex Placement Insurance Company, Ltd.; Regency Insurance Company, Ltd.; Philadelphia Reinsurance, Ltd.; Northern Commercial Fire & General Insurance Company, Ltd.; Wilmington Marine & General Insurance Company, Ltd.; United States & Continental

CONFIDENTIAL REPORT

January 1995
Volume VI, Number 1

National Association of Insurance Commissioners

Martin Bramson captured

International fugitive Martin Bramson was arrested Jan. 19, 1995, by the Liechtenstein State Police while attempting to cross the border into Liechtenstein from Austria. At the time of his arrest, he was accompanied by his brother Carl and they had in their possession several million Swiss franks and four kilograms of gold.

Martin has been an international fugitive since October 1991 when he fled from house arrest while awaiting trial on federal charges in connection with one of the nation's largest insurance fraud schemes. Members of the Bramson family were involved in the fraud schemes since the early 1980s. Sept. 12, 1990, armed with warrants issued by a New Jersey federal court, FBI agents conducted a coordinated strike of the Bramson operations in four states and the District of Columbia, arresting Martin, his brother Leonard and other associates in their insurance operations. To date, seven defendants have pled guilty to charges stemming from the schemes, including Leonard and his father Norman. The Bramson patriarch also fled court jurisdiction in October 1991, but was apprehended after he and Martin were featured on "America's Most Wanted" in July 1993.

The Bramsons set up more than 50 bogus insurance companies in island countries throughout the world, specializing primarily in the sale of cut-rate medical malpractice coverage where claims were never defended or paid beyond a doctor's $5,000 deductible. Premium monies collected through the companies usually passed through the New World Bank in Anguilla, which Leonard owned, but in fact, was merely an account within another bank. The money went from there to more than 240 bank accounts that the Bramsons had established throughout the world.

The best known of the Bramson companies were International Bahamian Insurance Company (IBI), Professional Risk Insurers Management Exclusive Company (PRIME), Casualty Assurance Risk Insurance Brokerage Company (CARIB) and Trans-Pacific Insurance Company. Complaints from state insurance regulators eventually led to the federal investigation. The U.S. Attorney's office is initiating extradition proceedings for Martin (see related story in "Indictment and convictions" article on page 17).

The life of Riley

Ferrell Travis Riley, the subject of his own GAO report and mentioned in the Energy and Commerce Sub-committee on Oversight and Investigations report by Rep. John Dingell, has been arrested by federal authorities in Kansas City, Mo. Riley, 52, and Cheryll S. Coon, 48, were arrested Nov. 21, 1994, on charges contained in a 16-count federal indictment. The indictment includes violations under the RICO act and charges of mail fraud, conspiracy, money laundering, obstruction of justice and tax fraud. Riley and Coon have been the subject of numerous regulatory actions along with companies they owned or controlled: Meadowlark Insurance Company, Meadowlark's successor Commercial Indemnity Assurance Company, M&M Management Corporation and Magnolia Acceptance Corporation.

The indictment alleges that Riley purported to be a consultant to these companies and was not listed as an officer or director of any of them, but he actually controlled their operations. Coon, also known as Cheryll S.C. Wise, was an officer of the companies. Initially, her primary duties were to handle financial and accounting matters, later to handle overall office operations.

Financier Pharaon's U.S. Assets Frozen

Fed Seeks to Fine Saudi $37 Million for Role in Calif. Bank Deal

By Mark Potts
Washington Post Staff Writer

The Justice Department yesterday froze the U.S. assets of Saudi Arabian financier Ghaith R. Pharaon and the Federal Reserve proposed fining him $37 million for his role in helping the Bank of Credit and Commerce International (BCCI) to secretly take over Independence Bank of Encino, Calif.

The value of the assets, which the government claimed as collateral for the fine, was not immediately clear. Pharaon, who has close ties to the Saudi Arabian royal family, has extensive U.S. holdings in insurance, real estate, petroleum, cable television and other areas.

The Fed's action came a day after directors and management of Independence—most of them appointed by Pharaon—filed a $42 million suit accusing Pharaon and the bank's former chairman of racketeering, alleging that they were fronts for BCCI in the takeover of the bank.

The Fed alleged that Pharaon acted as a front man in Luxembourg-based BCCI's 1985 takeover of the bank, falsely representing himself as its owner when in fact BCCI had negotiated the takeover, financed the purchase, controlled the bank's stock, appointed a BCCI executive as chairman of Independence and had a hand in the hiring of other officials.

"Pharaon's secret, undisclosed arrangement with BCCI concerning Independence permitted BCCI to conceal its ownership of the bank in regulatory filings," the Fed said in its 32-page complaint.

The arrangement was similar to the one that BCCI allegedly used with Pharaon and several other investors to secretly take over Washington's First American Bankshares Inc.

The Fed has asked that Pharaon and BCCI be barred from the U.S. banking business for their roles in the First American takeover.

Pharaon also has been accused by the Fed of acting as the front for BCCI in the takeover of the National Bank of Georgia and as an investor in the now-failed CenTrust Bank in Miami.

BCCI was shut down by regulators around the world in July because of huge losses and questionable operating practices. The bank and its top executives have been charged with fraud, larceny and money laundering by New York officials.

Pharaon, who lives in France and Saudi Arabia, could not be located for comment yesterday. His New York attorney, Richard Lawler, did not return telephone calls seeking comment.

InterRedec Inc., the Richmond Hill, Ga.-based holding company for Pharaon's U.S. assets, said in a statement that it believed the freeze "will not have any adverse effect on its business operations." InterRedec is part of Pharaon's Saudi-based holding company, Saudi Research & Development Corp. Ltd.

The Fed charges that BCCI arranged for Pharaon to buy Independence Bank on its behalf, since American regulators were concerned that BCCI was too lightly regulated to be a responsible owner of a U.S. bank.

Pharaon purchased Independence for $23 million in 1985, but part of the deal was financed by BCCI in exchange for 85 percent of Independence's stock.

BCCI later paid off a loan to Phar-

Fed Seeks to Fine Pharaon $37 Million, Citing Saudi's Alleged Links to BCCI

By Peter Truell
Staff Reporter of The Wall Street Journal

WASHINGTON—The Federal Reserve sought to fine Ghaith Pharaon $37 million for alleged breaches of U.S. banking laws, and it moved to freeze his U.S. assets.

The Fed alleges that Mr. Pharaon, a flamboyant Saudi Arabian businessman, acted as a front man for Bank of Credit & Commerce International, helping it illegally acquire Independence Bank of Encino, Calif. Mr. Pharaon bought Independence in June 1985 for about $23 million. But the Fed says he secretly holds 85% of Independence Bank's stock for the scandal-ridden BCCI, a unit of BCCI Holdings (Luxembourg) S.A.

The Fed sought earlier this year to ban Mr. Pharaon and eight other people associated with BCCI from the U.S. banking business. It said yesterday that it wouldn't impose fines on the other individuals pending the outcome of a current Justice Department investigation.

Richard Lawler, Mr. Pharaon's New York lawyer, didn't return telephone calls, but in recent weeks he has insisted that his client has done nothing wrong. Mr. Pharaon has maintained that he bought and owns Independence Bank himself. His current whereabouts are uncertain, although former associates said recently that he was sailing his yacht off the coast of Greece.

Order for Freeze Obtained

Acting on the Fed's behalf, the U.S. attorney for the southern district of New York obtained a temporary restraining order yesterday morning freezing Mr. Pharaon's assets pending a hearing tomorrow.

Assistant U.S. Attorney Thomas Zaccaro said the Justice Department had stopped Mr. Pharaon's planned sale of American Southern Insurance Co. to Fuqua Industries Inc. The $35 million sale was scheduled to occur today. Mr. Zaccaro said he didn't know what assets Mr. Pharaon holds in the U.S.

Separately, the directors of Independence filed a federal racketeering suit against Mr. Pharaon and Independence's former chairman, Kemal Shoaib. The suit, filed in federal court in Los Angeles, seeks $42 million. The directors of Independence, a medium-sized retail bank that currently is seeking to bolster its capital by as much as $27 million, had no prior knowledge of BCCI's alleged ownership, the suit said.

Banking regulators in several nations seized BCCI July 5, alleging a history of misdeeds. On July 29, the Manhattan district attorney indicted the bank and its two top officers for fraud, grand larceny and false accounting. That same day, the Fed also sought to impose a $200 million fine on the rogue bank. Since then, the Justice Department has brought a racketeering suit against some of the bank's top officers in federal court in Tampa, Fla.

The Fed charges that Mr. Pharaon signed an agreement in May 1985 to serve as a nominee for ICIC Overseas, a BCCI unit. BCCI and ICIC, which the Fed said operated as a single entity, "intentionally and deliberately" concealed their ownership and control of Independence from the Fed from 1985 until 1991, the U.S. attorney for the Southern District of New York charged.

Curbs on Control

Under the Bank Holding Company Act of 1956, no company, individual or group may control 25% or more of the voting shares of a bank without Fed approval; nor may any bank holding company acquire control—directly or indirectly—of more than 5% of the voting shares of any bank without the Fed's prior approval.

In an affidavit filed in the southern district court yesterday, Thomas Baxter, counsel for the New York Fed, said the Fed had difficulty serving Mr. Pharaon or his lawyer with a subpoena. Mr. Pharaon, in a June 10 letter to Fed counsel Richard Small, said he had been advised by his attorneys not to provide any deposition, Mr. Baxter's affidavit said. Mr. Pharaon wrote that he didn't understand "all these technicalities" and said he had instructed his counsel "to try to work out a solution" that would protect his rights and respond to the Fed's request for information, the Fed official said.

The Fed remains concerned about Mr. Pharaon's ability to move his money out of the U.S. Mr. Pharaon has other assets in addition to American Southern, including an interest in a small California insurance company and property in Richmond Hill, Ga.

"There is a substantial risk that Pharaon will attempt to liquidate his assets and move the proceeds offshore beyond the jurisidiction of this court," Mr. Baxter said. Mr. Pharaon isn't a U.S. citizen, and isn't likely to enter the U.S. in the foreseeable future, he added.

Moreover, "some of Pharaon's assets have been dissipated since [he] learned that he might be a target of the [Fed's] enforcement proceeding," Mr. Baxter said. In June, soon after the Fed had attempted to subpoena him, Mr. Pharaon sold his 80% interest in DLF Finance Co., a debt trading company, for "more than $1 million," Mr. Baxter said.

BNL Unit Chairman Quits On Allegations of BCCI Tie

By a Wall Street Journal Staff Reporter

MILAN, Italy—Alfred Hartmann resigned as chairman of Lavoro Bank AG, the Zurich, Switzerland, subsidiary of Italy's state-owned Banca Nazionale del Lavoro. The move followed allegations that BNL had been linked through him to the Bank of Credit & Commerce International.

In a statement, Mr. Hartmann, who also was chairman of BCCI's Swiss unit, firmly denied acting as a link between the two banks, both of which have been mired in scandal.

BCCI, controlled by BCCI Holdings (Luxembourg) S.A., was seized by international regulators in early July amid allegations of widespread fraud, money-laundering and arms financing. BNL is still recovering from the unauthorized loan of $3 billion to Iraq by its Atlanta branch in 1989.

BNL didn't give any reason for the executive's departure, but a senior official of Lavoro Bank said Mr. Hartmann resigned in order "not to further fuel suspicions of connections between one bank and the other." Mr. Hartmann couldn't be reached for comment.

Mr. Hartmann had been chairman of Banque de Commerce & Placement S.A., the Swiss subsidiary of BCCI. He resigned from that post after the seizure of BCCI.

aon from his other major lender, First National Bank of Boston, and took control of the rest of Independence's stock.

The suit filed by the board and management of Independence says that they were similarly misled by Pharaon about the ownership of the bank.

Fulvio Dobrich, the bank's current chairman, said Independence's board and management hopes to recapitalize the bank so that it can run independently of its current ownership.

"My reaction to the action taken by the Federal Reserve is that I hope it assists us in the process of recapitalizing the bank and severing our relationship with the existing shareholder," Dobrich said. "We're not sure who the hell that shareholder is."

The Harvard-educated Pharaon, 50, was a high-flying financier in this country during the late 1970s and 1980s, buying banks, insurance companies and oil wells. But he reportedly has run into financial problems in recent years.

A month ago, Pharaon announced plans to sell one of his U.S. companies, American Southern Insurance Co., for $33 million to Vista Resources Inc., a New York-based leather-goods concern.

J.B. Fuqua, Vista's chairman, said yesterday that he still expects the transaction to close as scheduled at the end of this month.

"Instead of Pharaon getting the money, the government will get it, I guess," Fuqua said. "The government will get the money and we'll get the insurance company."

New Questions Raised on BCCI Entity, Capcom, During Testimony by Agent

By Peter Truell
Staff Reporter of The Wall Street Journal

WASHINGTON – The testimony of a government undercover agent raised new questions about a mysterious BCCI-related brokerage entity called Capcom Financial Services Ltd., which traded tens of billions of dollars in the Chicago financial markets in the late 1980s.

The agent, Robert Mazur, formerly of the Customs Service, said Capcom had a "gross transaction rate" totaling roughly $90 billion in an eight-month period. A number of investigators suspect that Capcom played a role as part of the efforts by BCCI and its backers to launder drug profits and obtain political power and influence in the U.S.

London-based Capcom, which had some of the same shareholders as the Bank of Credit & Commerce International, was operated by Syed Ziauddin Akbar, the former head of BCCI's treasury operation. "We came to learn that it was [Mr. Akbar's] plan to launder drug proceeds through the transactions of Capcom," Mr. Mazur testified.

Mr. Mazur, the main undercover agent in a sting operation against BCCI that led to the bank's indictment in federal court in Tampa, Fla., in October 1988, testified from behind a screen with a voice modulator. He said he has received threats on his life and the lives of his family because of his role in the sting, known as Operation C-Chase. The Senate panel heard how Mr. Mazur had been told by Colombian drug operatives that if he turned out to be a federal agent, there would be "no hole in the world deep enough to hide him."

Mr. Mazur detailed how Mr. Akbar planned to use so-called mirror-image trading at Capcom to create accounts that would use several different shell corporations—foreign corporations established in various sanctuaries of secrecy-to launder huge sums. This would be achieved by placing orders to both buy and sell a commodity at the exact same time, insuring no loss or gain, incurring fees that would be related to those transactions, and then disbursing funds through a third-party broker.

Because these transactions would be scrambled among many billions of dollars worth of transactions, "it would take forever for anyone to ever find it," Mr. Mazur said.

Capcom is also linked to Tele-Communications Inc., the nation's largest cable company, whose chairman, Bob Magness, and senior vice president, Larry Romrell, sat on the board of Capcom during the latter half of the 1980s. Among their fellow directors was Sheik Kamal Adham, who according to company papers owned as much as 17% of Capcom. Mr. Adham was also a major shareholder in BCCI and First American Bankshares Inc. of Washington, BCCI's secretly owned U.S. affiliate. BCCI is a unit of BCCI Holdings (Luxembourg) S.A. Mr. Adham, speaking through his U.S. lawyer, has denied wrongdoing.

Mr. Romrell had a small investment in Capcom and sat on the company's board from 1984 to 1988, according to John Head, a spokesman for him. He was introduced to "some of the Arabian principals of Capcom" through "friends of friends of friends," Mr. Head adds.

Mr. Head says Mr. Romrell resigned from Capcom as soon as he learned about the money-laundering indictments brought against both it and BCCI in October 1988. Even though Mr. Romrell attended a few Capcom board meetings in London, Mr. Head says, the proceedings were conducted mostly in Arabic and Urdu, and Mr. Romrell "frankly didn't understand most of what went on."

A TCI spokesman says Mr. Magness won't comment on his previous involvement with Capcom, but adds that "we aren't aware of any business dealings of any kind between TCI and Capcom, or any related entity."

Mr. Mazur explained how Amjad Awan, a senior bank officer, told him that BCCI used its Washington counsel, Clark Clifford, to try to "find out as much as they could about the potential activities of the Senate subcommittee" that was investigating the bank. He added that BCCI appeared to have a close relationship with First American, and that after laundering funds BCCI "would pass them through First American."

Mr. Mazur also accused Justice Department officials of letting investigative leads slip between their fingers through inaction. "A lot of follow-up in contacting witnesses and reviewing records was lost that might otherwise have benefitted the case," he said.

In addition, Mr. Mazur told the panel how in September 1988, BCCI had recommended that he and other money-laundering customers close their accounts in Panama because of the likelihood of Senate subpoenas relating to BCCI's operations there. The Senate Foreign Relations Subcommittee on narcotics, terrorism and international relations, before which Mr. Mazur testified yesterday, was at that time beginning to investigate BCCI because of the banks and run them due to U.S. law. Former secretary of defense Clark Clifford is one of the persons who is working on behalf of BCCI to gain control of these U.S. banks."

When asked to comment on this statement, lawyers representing BCCI in the drug-money case said that the document "mischaracterizes the referenced conversation of Mr. Awan." Altman says that Awan was wrong.

THE FIRST AMERICAN STORY TURNS ON a classic Washington question: What did the Fed know and when did it know it?

The deal to buy First American was approved because Clifford, Altman, and the Middle Eastern investors made certain representations and promises to the Federal Reserve and other bank regulators. In trying to evaluate whether the deal was proper even now, the questions that must be asked are: How complete and accurate were their representations? Were the promises kept?

Clifford and Altman have portrayed the owners of First American as "among the most substantial, respected individuals in the Middle East." At least several of them, however, are far more controversial than that. At least two of them have been accused of accepting questionable payments from American companies, one is the former intelligence chief of a repressive regime, and one heads the country that took the lead in embargoing oil to the U.S. in 1973 and is also a key financial backer of the PLO.

The Federal Reserve, however, apparently overlooked such matters. "I don't recall those issues being raised at the time at all," says a former Fed official who was involved in the deliberations. "The PLO was never mentioned. But it seems to me that if they were raised in a new proceeding, that might be the kind of thing that the Federal Reserve would take cognizance of.

"There was nothing concrete that would justify denial. There wasn't a requirement that you find them to be substantial, reputable persons of good character and standing. You just had to find that they weren't disreputable."

The only glancing reference to the PLO seems to have come in a set of questions submitted by Manfred Ohrenstein, the Democratic leader of the New York State Senate, who asked whether "any of the stockholders or the organizations for which they act as representatives" were "affiliated in any way with any international terrorist organizations" or providing them with "any financial assistance." Altman's one-word reply to both questions: "No."

Clifford minimized the role of BCCI in the deal, and the Fed apparently believed him. At least one Fed document suggests profound ignorance about the investors' ties to that bank. A letter from a Fed official to Representative Rosenthal, who was trying to get at the question of ownership and control, contains this statement: "Staff has no knowledge of loans from or other involvement in the affairs of BCCI on the part of Applicants' principals [the Arab investors]."

But the reality is that BCCI orchestrated the initial purchases of Financial General's stock and financed at least some of those purchases, that the "Applicants" also owned a significant interest in BCCI, and that BCCI's president was to be the principal "adviser" to those "Applicants" on matters relating to First American.

Clifford told the Fed that the bank would be run by a board of respected U.S citizens and that the Arabs would merely be passive investors. He became the chairman of its board and appointed several friends and associates as directors.

Clifford's own account of the events that led to First American's acquisition of National Bank of Georgia, however, suggests that the Middle Eastern owners have been more than passive investors. There is also evidence of some sort of ongoing relationship between First American and BCCI. It remains unclear whether First American is a "sister institution" to BCCI or whether the banks have simply made a cozy exchange of talent. Perhaps the best example of the exchange of talent has been the relationship of Clifford, Altman, and their law firm to the key players in this story.

Earlier this year, as prosecutors were cutting a deal with BCCI on the drug-money indictment, the Fed was reportedly talking with First American officials and expressing renewed concern over the shareholder overlap and transactions between the two institutions. According to the Financial Times, the Fed "accepted their promise that the two banks will have no future dealings."

A source at First American told the Times that in the past, "there was some business done with BCCI, but it was very small, extremely small."

The quote is reminiscent of Altman's assertion that the ownership overlap between First American and BCCI is "not as great as you might think," when in fact the overlap is considerable.

In a recent interview with Regardie's, Altman denied that the Fed and First American can have had any meetings or discussions regarding BCCI since October 1988, when BCCI was indicted. Yet a September 1989 letter from First American's attorneys to Regardie's notes: "Following the period last fall when BCCI and several of its officers were indicted on money-laundering charges in Florida, the Federal Reserve expressly confirmed again that BCCI had no involvement with the management of First American and that all prior representations about this relationship were fully correct."

And in a July 1989 interview with Regardie's, Altman said: "The reason I know that it [the business between BCCI and First American] is quite insignificant is that after the events of last October, the Federal Reserve came and reviewed our relationship to ensure that all of the commitments we had made to the Fed had been honored, and in the context of that they audited our business."

And what if BCCI were found to be exerting control over First American? The legal implications could be serious. Lawyers who specialize in banking law say that this would mean that the acquisition of Financial General was an "illegal takeover," since the investors who applied to the Fed for permission to buy the company would have been front men. Anyone who carried out such a scheme would be violating a long list of federal laws, including the Bank Holding Company Act, securities laws, and Title 18, Section 1001 of the U.S. Code, which makes it a felony to make false statements to a government agency.

Has the Fed ever done a thorough investigation of Financial American's shareholders and their links to BCCI? Or has it simply relied on assurances from the men in charge that everything's all right?

If nothing else, the First American case shows why there should be more sunshine on banks, not less. Whose interest does it serve to keep the ownership of First American secret? Not the depositors' and not the taxpayers'. With foreigners increasingly buying into U.S. banks, this case sets a bad precedent.

What was good for the Fed nine years ago may not be good enough today. Lingering questions about the owners of First American and the bank's refusal to answer them provide ample reason for the Fed—or for Congress—to take another look. ■ relate his family's version of the American immigrant saga. He describes how an ancestor came to this country imbued with the dreams of most immigrants: a better life, religious or political freedom. The final image is a group shot of the immigrant's descendants. The speaker then identifies his family—the Rogers family of Fairfax, for example, or the Portner family of Silver Spring. Other versions of the commercial have featured such notable Washingtonians as columnist Robert Novak and restaurateur Duke Zeibert. The commercials—a skillful blend of patriotism, nostalgia, and family values—end with a voice-over: "Nearly every family can trace its heritage to one bold first American. We salute the spirit of the first Americans who made this country their own. We're First American—the bank for all Americans."

It's one of the most emotional series of television commercials ever done for a bank—and an indication of the lengths to which First American Bank has gone to capitalize on the patriotic connotations of its name. Its logo, for example, incorporates the Stars and Stripes. In another television spot, the voice-over promotes the bank's "All-American CD" and "All-American Money Market Account" as a fife-and-drum corps pipes up in the background. A few years ago the bank's ads featured the ubiquitous Willard Scott clowning in the guise of such great Americans as George Washington.

Playing sentimental overtures to the American dream is a chestnut of the ad business, but in First American's case the imagery belies at best a certain insecurity and at worst a pattern of deception. The reason: First American Bankshares, the bank's holding company, is 100 percent foreign-owned.

With $11.5 billion in assets, First American Bankshares is the largest bank holding company in the Washington area—about 50 percent larger than second-place Riggs National Corporation. Yet of all the banking giants in the region, First American remains the most mysterious. A group of foreign investors acquired the company in 1982 after one of the longest, costliest, and most acrimonious takeover battles in U.S. history. The board of directors immediately jettisoned the holding company's name, Zayed, the absolute ruler of oil-rich Abu Dhabi and the president of the United Arab Emirates, owns 11.76 percent of First American Bankshares. He was the first Arab leader to use oil as a political weapon during the 1973 Arab-Israeli war, has channeled millions of dollars to the PLO, and recently branded the United States "our number-two enemy" (after Israel). Zayed's eldest son and heir apparent, Crown Prince Khalifa, owns from 5 to 10 percent of First American; the Abu Dhabi Investment Authority, which Zayed's family controls, owns another 5 to 10 percent. Zayed and six relatives own 25.23 percent of BCCI; ADIA owns 10.42 percent. The family's estimated net worth in 1989: $1.5 billion.

Financial General Bankshares, and replaced it with First American, a name that had been used by some of its subsidiary banks.

Since then First American has gone to extraordinary lengths to conceal the names and backgrounds of its foreign owners. Its lawyers persuaded the Federal Reserve Board to withhold from the public all documents that listed the company's shareholders—a seven-year veil of secrecy that was lifted only when Regardie's convinced the Fed that it should reverse its policy. And when the company was sued by some former shareholders of its Virginia subsidiary, its lawyers asked that the jury not be told the names or nationalities of the company's owners—or even that the company was foreign-owned.

After an in-depth investigation, Regardie's has learned that First American may have good reason to mask its foreign connections. Some of its major shareholders have backgrounds that could alienate or anger some of its customers and employees as well as invite renewed scrutiny by federal and state authorities.

Kamal Adham, First American's biggest shareholder, was the chief of Saudi Arabia's intelligence agency for more than a decade. During his tenure, political opponents of the ruling al-Saud family were tortured or killed, according to human rights organizations. As the head of the secret police, he played a key role in suppressing opposition to the regime. He was also a close adviser to the royal palace and a high-ranking government official at a time when Saudi Arabia had become the largest contributor to the Palestine Liberation Organization. Adham juggled his government service with a career as a businessman, from which he earned hundreds of millions of dollars. Much of his work has consisted of collecting "commissions" from defense contractors and other foreign companies that had done business in the Middle East.

Sheikh Zayed bin Sultan al-Nahayan, the ruler of Abu Dhabi and the president of the United Arab Emirates, is another leading shareholder of First American Bankshares. When Arab oil-producing nations cut off oil to the United States in 1973 (because of American support for Israel), Abu Dhabi was the first country to declare an embargo. Zayed is a major contributor to the PLO and a business partner of Libyan leader Moammar Qaddafi.

Faisal Saud al-Fulaij, a Kuwaiti businessman and another prominent shareholder, allegedly lined his pockets by taking bribes from Boeing Company when he was the chairman of Kuwait Airways. The Federal Trade Commission alleged that he accepted at least $300,000 in payoffs from Boeing. Fulaij has denied the allegation.

What's more, the investors who own First American Bankshares also own a controlling interest in Bank of Credit and Commerce International, a Luxembourg bank that has numbered among its clients former Panamanian dictator Manuel Antonio Noriega, who's awaiting trial in Florida on federal drug charges. In January of this year BCCI pleaded guilty in Florida to federal criminal charges that it had laundered drug money. Five BCCI officers are on trial on similar charges.

Both First American and BCCI say that there's absolutely no connection between the two institutions other than some overlapping shareholders. Robert Altman, the top executive of First American and a lawyer for BCCI, told the Washington Post in October 1988 that "the overlap is not as great as you might think."

Regardie's has determined, however, that the ties between First American and BCCI are much closer than either institution would have the public and bank regulators believe. Here are just a few of the links:

- BCCI used First American's Washington bank to transfer at least $500,000 worth of Noriega's funds from 1985 to 1987, according to government sources.
- Agha Hasan Abedi, BCCI's founder and president, orchestrated the takeover of First American.
- Shortly after the takeover bid was launched, Abedi told a reporter that if the bid succeeded BCCI would probably run First American.
- First American's shareholders include borrowers from BCCI, personal friends of Abedi's, a director of BCCI, and a longtime executive of the BCCI group.
- Government investigators disclosed in 1988 that a senior BCCI official had told an undercover agent that BCCI owns and controls First American.
- First American's shareholders and their families control more than two-thirds of BCCI's outstanding shares.
- Moreover, the two men who claim to run First American—Clark Clifford, the éminence grise of Washington's power brokers, and Robert Altman, his protégé at the law firm Clifford & Warnke—have represented BCCI for 12 years. When a U.S. Senate subcommittee investigated the BCCI-Noriega connection in 1988, Altman handled the negotiations with the committee. Clifford, then the chairman of First American Bankshares, and Altman, then the president of First American Corporation, also assisted BCCI in the drug-money case.

The relationship between the two banks is so close, some sources within BCCI say, that many employees regard the U.S. institution as an affiliate—a member of "the BCCI group." A few go so far as to say that First American may be secretly—and illegally—controlled by BCCI, with the Middle Eastern shareholders acting as front men. Regardie's, however, has found no evidence that this is the case.

In an effort to determine exactly who owns Washington's biggest bank holding company, Regardie's conducted dozens of interviews, reviewed court documents from some of the takeover-related litigation, and examined documents obtained from the Federal Reserve Board through the Freedom of Information Act. When it approved the acquisition nine years ago, the Fed wasn't fully aware of the controversial backgrounds of the foreign investors and the extent of their relationships with BCCI. It approved the deal based on assertions by Clifford and Altman that the leading investors were well-known businessmen with impeccable credentials. ▸

THE NORIEGA CONNECTION

In the mid 1980s Amjad Awan, who was Manuel Noriega's personal banker at BCCI, worked around the corner from First American's Washington headquarters. According to information obtained by government investigators, Awan managed the transfer of millions of dollars for Noriega through BCCI's global network, through several Swiss banks, and through First American Bank in Washington.

Regardie's has learned that at least $500,000 was transferred from several of Noriega's BCCI accounts into a BCCI account at First American. Additional amounts totaling more than $250,000 were wired simply to "BCCI Washington." In some cases, investigators say, Noriega himself signed letters that ordered the transfers to First American.

Awan later told a federal undercover agent that he considered First American to be under the control of BCCI.

In a statement to Regardie's, First American said that it "has never had any banking relationship of any kind with Manuel Noriega, nor has it ever knowingly handled any funds of Manuel Noriega." BCCI declined comment.

INANCIAL GENERAL BANKSHARES, AS FIRST AMERICAN USED TO BE KNOWN, TRACES ITS ROOTS BACK TO THE MORRIS PLAN, A PIONEERING CONSUMER-LENDING BUSIness. Arthur Morris, its founder, began his banking career around the turn of the century by making small installment loans to working people—a practice virtually unknown at the time. In 1910 he founded the first "Morris Plan" bank: Fidelity Loan & Trust Company of Norfolk, Virginia. Within 10 years Morris Plan banks were operating in 37 states. In the 1940s and 1950s the company became a financial conglomerate, with interests in such areas as insurance and mortgage banking.

Financial General was an institution with special privileges, a holding company ahead of its time. Although federal banking law sharply restricted interstate banking, Financial General, thanks to a grandfather clause, enjoyed an immensely valuable exemption. By the mid 1970s it controlled banks in Georgia, Maryland, New York, Tennessee, Virginia, and the District of Columbia.

In January 1975 Financial General installed a dynamic Georgia banker as the president of its National Bank of Georgia. During the next few years he would buy control of NBG, leave the bank for one of the most powerful posts in the federal government, quit the government in the midst of a financial scandal, sell NBG to an Arab investor, and then join forces with Arab investors in a scheme to accumulate stock in the bank's former parent company.

The banker's name: T. Bertram Lance.

Bert Lance began his banking career in 1951 as a teller at Calhoun National Bank, a small rural bank that had been founded by his wife's grandfather. Seven years later he and a group of investors bought control of the bank, and he ultimately became its chairman.

Lance backed Jimmy Carter in his 1970 campaign for governor and was later put in charge of reorganizing the state's government. In 1975, shortly after Carter had left the statehouse, Lance and a group of investors bought control of National Bank of Georgia from Financial General Bankshares.

Lance never fit the image of the conservative banker. His lending policies were very liberal—particularly, it was later alleged, when the borrowers were his friends and relatives. Lance's bank was the biggest single lender to Jimmy Carter's peanut warehouse, which once owed NBG $4.7 million. Moreover, he apparently found it difficult to draw a clear line between his personal financial affairs and the affairs of the bank. For example, he financed his purchase of NBG's stock with loans from two big New York banks and then arranged for NBG to open correspondent banking accounts with them. ▸

WHO'S BEHIND THE BANK

In response to questions from Regardie's, First American officials say that they will not comment on the names or backgrounds of the bank's owners, contending that it is not "a legitimate area of inquiry."

In one of several letters to the magazine, John W. Vardaman, Jr., an attorney with Williams & Connolly, said, "During the acquisition proceedings for First American, the various bank regulatory authorities, including the Federal Reserve, carefully examined the reputation, character and resources of the investors. . . . Similar allegations to the type you have referenced—i.e., the alleged receipt of questionable payments or support for certain groups and their activities—were considered. The banking agencies found the shareholders to be substantial, reputable persons of good character and standing."

Robert Altman, the chairman of the bank's holding company, said in an interview, "We're not in possession of facts about what their other operations are. We don't know what their political philosophies are, what their personal dealings are."

Regarding First American's relationship with BCCI, bank officials adamantly deny that they are either owned or controlled by the European bank. "This allegation is absolutely false and would, if disseminated, cause serious injury to First American," Vardaman said.

"Practically no business is done" between the two banks, he said.

First American officials wouldn't comment specifically about the common shareholders of the two institutions, except to say that the First American shareholders are "passive" and "are not active in the management of the bank."

A spokesman for BCCI also said that there's no connection with First American. "Certain of the shareholders that own First American have minority stock interests in BCCI," the statement read. "The larger shareholders of First American have relatively small interests in BCCI. The two organizations have different controlling groups of shareholders."

HOW THE BANK DOES

If First American's ownership is controversial, its management seems to be anything but. On the contrary, the bank appears to be a sober, not particularly well-performing institution that's caused little notice in the Washington banking community, other than the past year's shake-up of the bank's top managers.

Clark Clifford, the chairman of First American Bankshares, the bank's holding company, recently stepped down. He was replaced by Robert Altman, who'd been the president of First American Corporation. Jack Beddow, a longtime employee of the bank, has taken over as the president and chief operating officer. He replaced Robert Stevens, who was brought in at the time of the takeover.

Fred Bollerer, the former president of Houston's troubled First City National Bank, was brought in last year to head First American Metro Corporation, the subsidiary that runs the DC, Maryland, and Virginia banks. He replaced Milton Drewer, the bank's best-known executive in the local business community, who retired.

One reason for the changes may be the bank's lackluster performance. In Business Week magazine's recent scoreboard, First American was tied for last place with Riggs National Corporation among the area's eight largest banks. First American's return on assets, a key industry standard, was .61 percent, compared to First Virginia Banks's 1.39 percent and Sovran Financial's 1.14 percent. In 1989 the bank earned $61 million for its shareholders, down 11 percent from the previous year.

At the same time, regulators seem to be content with the way First American is run. "The bank is sound and well capitalized; it has no major problems," said Sidney Bailey, Virginia's commissioner of financial institutions, about the Virginia subsidiary. "We have had no criticism of the management and no evidence of interference or attempt to influence the policy of the bank by the Middle Eastern investors."

FIRST AMERICAN

When Carter was elected president in 1976, thanks in part to Lance's support, he appointed Lance to be the director of the Office of Management and Budget. But Lance's loose banking practices soon caught up with him and triggered the first scandal of the Carter administration. He was gone by August 1977.

After years of litigation, the Lancegate affair finally concluded in February 1986. In a settlement with the Comptroller of the Currency, Lance agreed to pay a $50,000 civil fine to the U.S. Treasury. He was also barred from serving as an employee, officer, or director—or otherwise participating in the affairs—of any federally insured bank without the written permission of the appropriate banking agencies. (The story ended on a farcical note: Lance, according to columnist Jack Anderson, paid the $50,000 fine with a rubber check. The hapless Georgia banker eventually paid the fine.)

At the time of his resignation, Lance was in desperate financial straits. He was more than $5 million in debt, and his most valuable asset—his stock in National Bank of Georgia—had plummeted in value. His only hope was to sell the stock at well above the market price. Hope soon arrived in the person of Agha Hasan Abedi, the president of Bank of Credit and Commercial International.

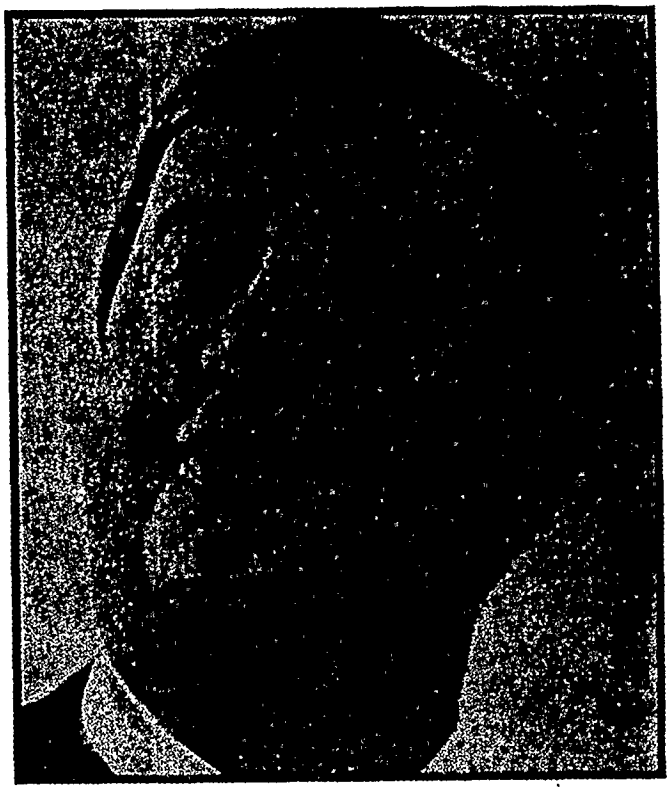
IT'S HARD TO IMAGINE A MORE UNLIKELY pair of bankers than Bert Lance and Agha Hasan Abedi.

Abedi was born 67 years ago in Lucknow, India and moved to Pakistan when the country was founded in 1947. He embarked on a career in banking, and in 1959 he cofounded United Bank Limited, which soon became one of the largest banks in Pakistan.

But Abedi was always more than a simple banker. He had an understanding of politics and a knack for making friends in high places. In the 1960s, long before the oil shock created overnight millionaires and billionaires, he courted Arab officials, notably Sheikh Zayed, the ruler of Abu Dhabi, and Sheikh Rashid bin Said al-Maktoum, the ruler of Dubai. (In 1971 Abu Dhabi and Dubai created a federation with five other sheikhdoms called the United Arab Emirates, with Zayed as its president and Rashid as its prime minister.)

Abedi's Arab connections proved to be invaluable when the Pakistani government nationalized the banking industry in 1972. Abedi moved to Europe and founded BCCI, signing up Zayed, Rashid, and other prominent Arabs as shareholders. Armed with this list of VIPs, he managed to persuade Bank of America, the world's largest bank, to buy a large stake as well, which gave BCCI instant credibility.

Today BCCI's main office is in London, but its legal headquarters is Luxembourg. Abedi has run BCCI from the start, and his management team is made up largely of Pakistani bankers. In recent years, however, he's suffered from serious health problems: he had a heart transplant operation in March 1988. His longtime deputy, a fellow Pakistani named Swaleh Naqvi, is now BCCI's chief executive.



BERT LANCE was President Jimmy Carter's banker and best friend, but by 1977 he was out of the White House and flat broke. Agha Hasan Abedi of BCCI rescued him from his financial plight, hired him as a consultant, and then triggered a hostile and protracted battle for control of First American Bankshares.

Although Abedi's bank started with only $2.5 million in capital, it has grown to be the world's fifth-largest privately held bank. During the late 1970s it was the fastest-growing bank in Britain and was touting itself as the fastest-growing bank in the world. Its total assets soared from $200 million in 1973 to $2.2 billion in 1977. During the same period its network of offices grew from 19 branches in five countries to 146 branches in 32 countries. By the end of 1988 it had more than $20 billion in assets, some 14,000 employees, and 417 offices in 73 countries.

Abedi, according to BCCI insiders, was obsessed with growth. As one source puts it: "Their objective—and they said so openly—was to become the largest bank in the world by the year 2000." With the zeal of an evangelist seeking souls, Abedi exhorted his employees to bring in deposits. He also established a vast international network, with branches and subsidiaries across the globe—even in poverty-stricken African countries that were ignored by other banks.

No banker with Abedi's ambitions, however, could ignore the world's largest economy: the United States'. While BCCI could open branches in the United States, a major acquisition would offer the quickest route to growth.

Lance and Abedi are believed to have met in October 1977 in a Washington hotel. Lance wanted to sell some of his stock in the National Bank of Georgia, and Abedi was a potential buyer.

It would have been illegal, however, for BCCI to buy the stock. Because Bank of America was a large shareholder in BCCI (it pulled out in 1980), such a deal would have violated the ban on interstate banking. But even with Bank of America out of the picture, BCCI was going to be a hard sell to U.S. regulators. Whenever a bank piles on assets very quickly, regulators wonder whether it's being prudently managed. Another cause for concern was that BCCI is incorporated in Luxembourg, which isn't noted for tough banking regulation. Luxembourg also lacks a central bank, which means that no institution is responsible for acting as a lender of last resort if BCCI suffers liquidity problems.

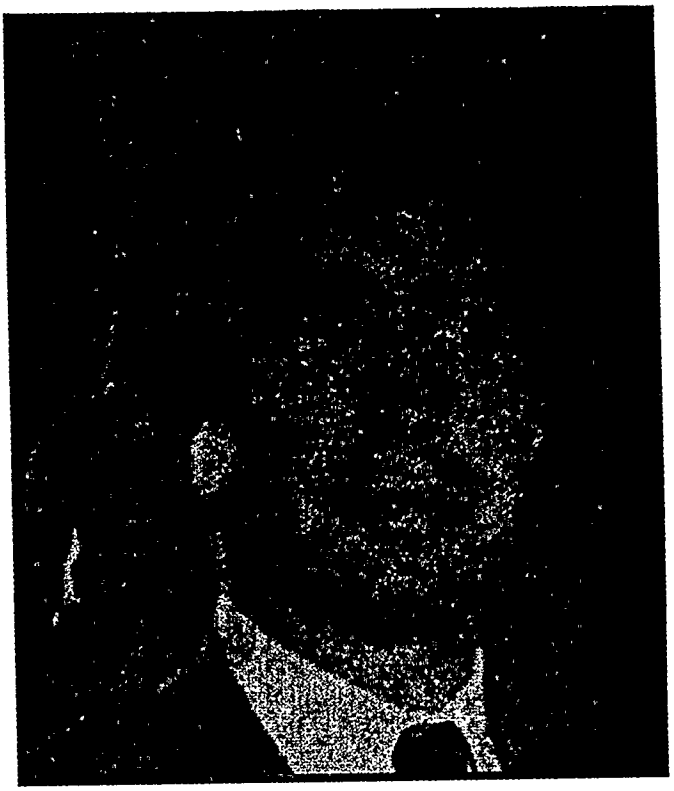
When Abedi and his Middle Eastern clients were charged with violating U.S. securities laws in connection with their stock purchases, they hired Lance's supremely well-connected lawyer, CLARK CLIFFORD. After he got Abedi and the Arab investors out of legal trouble, guess who wound up as the chairman of First American?



First American's Arab owners now rely on ROBERT ALTMAN, Clifford's protégé, as their man in Washington. Altman runs the show, tries to keep their names out of the news, and works on the side as a lawyer for BCCI. Four months ago BCCI pleaded guilty to criminal charges that it had laundered drug money.

The Bank of England later sent clear signals that it regarded BCCI as something less than a blue-chip institution. In 1978 it forbade BCCI from opening any new branches in the United Kingdom.

Although BCCI itself couldn't buy Lance's bank stock, one of its clients could, and Abedi quickly found one. In late 1977 Ghaith Pharaon, a Saudi businessman, agreed to buy 60 percent of Lance's stock at $20 a share. A few weeks earlier the stock had been trading for about $10 a share. Pharaon later acquired 100 percent of NBG.

Lance and Pharaon portrayed the deal as a routine investment, but skeptics abounded. Of the roughly 15,000 banks in the United States, it seemed odd that Pharaon happened to choose a bank that was owned by a close friend, political supporter, and lender to President Carter—and that he would pay top dollar for it. Pharaon, Business Week noted, seemed to be "bailing him out to curry favor with President Carter."

Abedi, it was later revealed, did more for Lance than arrange the NBG deal. He also hired him as a consultant and arranged to repay his biggest debt: about $3.5 million that he owed to the First National Bank of Chicago.

One of Lance's duties was to recommend investment prospects to Abedi. And this he did. During the discussions about NBG, Abedi learned that stock was available in a much larger institution: Financial General Bankshares, NBG's erstwhile parent. Some sources speculate that Lance wanted Abedi's help to gain control of Financial General, install himself as its president or chairman, and thus recover from the humiliation of the Lancegate affair. It didn't go unnoticed that FGB's headquarters on 15th Street was just around the corner from the White House.

BY EARLY 1977 A GROUP OF ABOUT 20 investors, led by J. William Middendorf II, a onetime investment banker who'd served as the secretary of the navy under presidents Nixon and Ford, had gained control of Financial General Bankshares. But Middendorf found rough seas in his first months as its chairman and president, and some dissident shareholders began to plot his ouster.

One of them was Jackson Stephens, the head of Stephens, Incorporated, a large securities firm based in Little Rock, Arkansas, who joined up with Lance. According to a complaint later filed by the Securities and Exchange Commission, they recommended to Abedi "that BCCI purchase or recommend FGB common stock to its clients."

At first Abedi wasn't interested, but he soon changed his mind. On December 1 he gave the green light. The shares were to be bought on behalf of BCCI clients.

Abedi's approval touched off a frantic buying spree carried out by Lance, Stephens, and Eugene Metzger, a Washington lawyer. They spent millions of dollars to collect blocks of FGB's stock in private purchases from large individual investors as well as on the open market. By early February 1978 they had purchased about 20 percent of Financial General on behalf of four BCCI clients.

On February 7 Lance met with FGB's top executives: B. Francis Saul II, who'd replaced Middendorf as the chairman the previous month, and Middendorf, who'd retained the title of president. What Lance said at the meeting is disputed. According to Middendorf and Saul, Lance said that he represented a group of investors related to BCCI who'd acquired 20 percent of FGB's stock and that BCCI wanted eventual control of the company.

"Lance said that he was acting as a representative of Abedi and BCCI," Saul later said in an affidavit. "Moreover, Lance stated that BCCI 'always wants control.' "

Two days after the meeting, Financial General announced that an unidentified foreign bank had bought a large block of FGB's stock "and may be seeking to obtain control of the company." When newspaper reports appeared the next day, however, Lance called Saul to say that there had been a misunderstanding. The buyers, Lance said, weren't acting as members of a group under the direction of BCCI but were merely acting as individual investors.

Abedi had orchestrated the buy-up of FGB's stock very smoothly—except for one detail. If the investors were acting as a group, they were in flagrant violation of U.S. securities laws. Any investor or investment group that buys 5 percent of the stock of a publicly held company is required to make a public disclosure by filing a 13-D form with the SEC. In what some viewed as a transparent attempt to evade the law, each of the four BCCI clients had bought slightly less than 5 percent of Financial General's stock.

The purchases triggered two lawsuits, one filed by Financial General on February 17, 1978, and the other filed by the SEC a month later. The defendants in the SEC complaint included BCCI, Abedi, Lance, Stephens, Metzger, and the four investors in whose names the stock had been acquired: Kamal Adham; Sheikh Sultan bin Zayed al-Nahayan, one of Sheikh Zayed's sons; Abdullah Darwaish of Abu Dhabi, a financial adviser who represented another of Zayed's sons; and Faisal Saud al-Fulaij.

The BCCI defendants found themselves in immediate need of legal help, and they chose the Washington lawyer whom Lance had retained when the Lancegate affair exploded: Clark Clifford.

LIKE MANY OTHER ASPECTS OF THE First American saga, the story behind Clifford's involvement is a matter of some dispute. In 1984 Robert Altman, Clifford's partner, told a reporter for the Washington Post that the relationship didn't come about via Bert Lance but stemmed from the firm's "international practice." In a recent interview with Regardie's, however, Altman said, "I think Mr. Lance recommended this firm."

Whatever the case, Abedi and the Arabs had chosen not only a top-flight lawyer but one with superb political connections.

Clifford, who's now 83 years old, came to national prominence during the presidency of Harry Truman. Although his title was counsel to the president, he was described

Former president Jimmy Carter has lobbied U.S. senators to sell arms to Saudi Arabia and has met with Yassir Arafat, the chairman of the PLO. Have his intimate ties to BCCI, a major Arab-owned bank, shaped his view of the world?

First American Bankshares and Bank of Credit and Commerce International are more than casual acquaintances; they're two banks with a close relationship. But why? What's in it for the Middle Eastern owners of First American? Is the bank simply an investment, or is it something more? Given that the BCCI clients who bought First American include current and former officials of Arab governments, the most obvious question becomes: Are there any political motives behind their investments in the U.S. banking industry?

So far there's no indication that First American has been used as a tool to acquire political influence. There are, however, some connections between the bank's owners and American politicians.

When BCCI helped to rescue Bert Lance from his financial plight, there was widespread speculation that the bank or its Arab owners were trying to get close to Jimmy Carter. Not surprisingly, Lance and his newfound friends claimed that they were involved in routine business dealings with absolutely no political strings attached.

Those denials ring hollow today. In the years since Carter's departure from the White House, Agha Hasan Abedi, who's BCCI's founder and president, and former president Carter have become close friends; Abedi has channeled large donations to the Carter Presidential Center and to Global 2000, Carter's pet project, of which Carter and Abedi are the co-chairmen. (BCCI is the organization's largest donor.) Global 2000's British office is located in BCCI's headquarters building in London.

Abedi and Carter have traveled to a number of countries on BCCI's corporate plane. When Abedi was hospitalized in 1988, Carter not only visas the most powerful figure on the White House staff. He later served as an adviser to presidents Kennedy, Johnson (whom he also served for a year as the secretary of defense), and Carter.

Clifford's political connections have led some observers to view him as a sort of high-class lobbyist/fixer. It's an image that he evidently regards as distasteful. "There is one point I wish to make clear," he once said. "This firm has no influence of any kind in Washington. If you want to employ someone who has influence, you will have to go somewhere else.... What we do have is a record of working with the various departments and agencies of the government, and we have their respect and confidence, and that we consider to be a valuable asset."

In representing the Middle Eastern investors, Clifford led a large team of lawyers that included takeover specialists from New York and Washington lawyers who had years of experience in dealing with bank regulators. His right-hand man was Altman, who'd just turned 31. The two men are so close that Altman has frequently been described as Clifford's "alter ego."

A consent agreement with the SEC was quickly negotiated. Without admitting or denying guilt, the defendants promised not to violate securities laws in the future. The Middle Eastern investors also agreed to make a tender offer of $15 a share to all of Financial General's shareholders.

The consent decree touched off one of the longest and most controversial corporate takeover battles in U.S. history. The management of Financial General Bankshares, led by Saul, fiercely resisted the takeover attempt. In addition to suing Lance and his Middle Eastern associates, it dug up plenty of dirt on BCCI, much of which found its way into the press. One of the most damaging disclosures was that BCCI had made more than $80 million in loans to "insiders"—companies and individuals that were connected to the bank. (Bank regulators have always frowned on insider lending.) Financial General's lawyers also unearthed a document from Bank of America that called BCCI's loan-loss reserves inadequate—a charge that BCCI disputed.

The two sides eventually signed an acquisition agreement in July 1980. But the deal still had to be approved by the Federal Reserve Board, which would make its decision after it heard the views of federal and state bank regulatory authorities.

WHEN A LARGE BANK HOLDING COMPANY is taken over, the new owner is usually an existing bank. In this case, however, Financial General was to be purchased by dummy companies that were owned by individual investors, none of whom was a banker. A further complication was that all the investors ited him but arranged for a renowned heart specialist, Norman Shumway of Stanford University, to fly to Britain to treat him.

Prominent Arabs have also provided support for Carter's projects, including King Fahd of Saudi Arabia (some of whose relatives are BCCI shareholders) and Adnan Khashoggi, the scandal-plagued arms dealer. Khashoggi is a former client of Clark Clifford's; a friend of First American's biggest shareholder, Kamal Adham; and a client of BCCI's. In connection with his dealing arms to Iran, Khashoggi transmitted $12 million through BCCI's Monte Carlo branch.

Carter doesn't seem to be the sort of man who'd become a mouthpiece for foreign governments, but even the most honorable man will listen sympathetically to the opinions of close friends. And in recent years Carter seems to have moved closer to the Arab point of view. In 1983, for example, he spoke movingly about the plight of Palestinians in the Israeli-occupied West Bank but said nothing about human rights abuses by Arab regimes. In 1986 he lobbied senators to sell arms to Saudi Arabia. And last year he sharply criticized Salman Rushdie for offending Moslems in The Satanic Verses.

Another U.S. politician who's popular in the Arab community is Andrew Young, the former mayor of Atlanta. Young served as Carter's ambassador to the United Nations until August 1979, when he was forced to resign for holding unauthorized talks with the PLO. Because of the incident, he's widely viewed in the Arab world as a kind of martyr to America's pro-Israel lobby. During a visit to Saudi Arabia and the United Arab Emirates in 1983, he was accorded VIP treatment. Part of his travel and hotel expenses was paid by the government of the United Arab Emirates, which is run by Sheikh Zayed bin Sultan al-Nahayan, another of First American's leading shareholders. According to a report in the Atlanta Journal, Young's hotel bill in Dubai was paid by the National Bank of Georgia, which was then owned by Ghaith Pharaon, a BCCI shareholder. A former NBG official, however, denies it.

There's also a connection between BCCI and Jesse Jackson, the American politician with the most positive image in the Arab world. In one of the more curious developments of the 1988 presidential campaign, Clark Clifford and Bert Lance sponsored a breakfast meeting between Jackson and a group of mainstream Democrats—a meeting that helped to dispel Jackson's image as a radical. Clifford praised Jackson and said that if he were elected, he'd bring to Washington "the best brains the party and the country have to offer." After the breakfast, according to a campaign aide, "Jackson frequently told reporters that Clark Clifford was among his 'top policy advisers.'"

Another prominent Democrat who gave a boost to the Jackson campaign is Fred Dutton, a former aide to John Kennedy who promoted Jackson's vice presidential prospects in an op-ed piece for the Los Angeles Times. Dutton has been a registered foreign agent for Saudi Arabia for more than a decade and is considered its leading advocate in Washington. One of Dutton's Saudi contacts is Kamal Adham. In The American House of Saud, a book on Saudi lobbying, Steven Emerson writes that when Dutton was angling to get the Saudi contract, he made it clear that he wanted to report to Adham.

FIRST AMERICAN

were residents of foreign countries. Could U.S. regulators effectively monitor the new owners?

The regulators also wanted to know what role, if any, BCCI would play in Financial General. Questions about BCCI were raised by the Federal Reserve Board, the Federal Reserve Bank of Richmond, the Office of the Comptroller of the Currency, and Virginia's commissioner of financial institutions.

The lawyers for the Middle Eastern investors had their work cut out for them. They'd have to convince the Fed that Financial General would be run by Americans who had solid banking credentials. And this is exactly what Clifford and Altman did. "The lawyers," says one source, "proposed that there be a buffer in the form of a blue-ribbon board of directors, and the shareholders would basically agree to take a walk." BCCI, they said, would have no involvement in the management of Financial General, although it could act as an "investment adviser" to the Middle Eastern owners.

Clifford and Altman discussed this formula with bank regulators at an extraordinary April 1981 meeting at the Federal Reserve's headquarters. Regardie's has obtained a transcript of the meeting through the Freedom of Information Act. Although some passages have been censored, it appears that the missing information deals with the personal finances and business holdings of the Middle Eastern investors.

If the takeover were approved, Clifford said to the regulators, control of Financial General would be vested in a board of directors that would consist of distinguished U.S. citizens, including former senator Stuart Symington. Clifford had managed Symington's 1956 presidential campaign and had enlisted his old friend's legal services during the takeover battle. To run the company on a day-to-day basis, he said, the directors would choose "a top, very well regarded commercial banker [as] president and CEO"—someone with 25 or 30 years' experience.

As for BCCI, Clifford said: "There is no function of any kind on the part of BCCI. I know of no present relationship. I know of no planned future relationship that exists." Referring to the dummy companies that would be used as vehicles for the acquisition, Altman said that "there is no connection between those entities and BCCI in terms of ownership or other relationship."

On the positive side, Clifford said that the Middle Eastern investors planned to inject additional equity into Financial General. There is, he said, "a growing feeling among many thoughtful and experienced Americans that it is in the interest of our country . . . to bring back to the United States as many of the dollars as we can that through the years we send over to the OPEC countries."

One regulator who asked tough questions at the meeting was Sidney Bailey, Virginia's commissioner of financial institutions, who opposed the takeover. Among other things, he expressed skepticism that the proposed takeover was nothing more than a routine investment. Were there political considerations behind a bid to acquire a bank in the U.S. capital?

"I felt like a voice in the wilderness," Bailey says. "The Fed paid little attention to what I had to say."

Four months after the meeting, the Fed officially approved the takeover.

IN APRIL 1982 THE MIDDLE EASTERN investors made a tender offer for the remaining shares of Financial General. Four months later the name of the holding company was changed from Financial General Bankshares to First American Bankshares. (Some of the subsidiaries had already adopted the First American name; most of the others have since followed suit.)

The new owners installed a new board of directors made up of prominent Americans, many of whom had close ties to Clifford. Altman and Symington joined the board, the latter as the vice chairman. The distinguished American chosen to be the chairman of the board: Clark Clifford.

And what about the seasoned banker who was to serve as the president of the company? That part of the understanding with the Federal Reserve was fulfilled by the appointment of Robert Stevens, the former chairman of BancOhio Corporation, a large bank holding company based in Columbus. But in an unusual twist, a new corporate entity, First American Corporation, was placed at the top of the organizational chart, with Altman as its president. Thus, of the four top positions at First American, only one was held by a banker. (Stevens retired last July and was succeeded by Jack Beddow, a veteran First American executive. Clifford also retired recently and was succeeded by Altman.)

In addition to being First American's top executives, Clifford and Altman are among the company's top lawyers. They have steered a lucrative share of the company's legal work to Clifford & Warnke, a fourth of whose 18 lawyers handle bank-related matters.

Over the past eight years the long and controversial battle for control of First American has faded from memory. The Middle Eastern investors and their links to BCCI and Lance are seldom mentioned in the press. It's probably a safe bet that most of the company's customers assume that First American is U.S.-owned—a misconception reinforced by its name and flag-waving advertising campaign.

AS A BANK HOLDING COMPANY, FIRST American Bankshares is required to provide detailed ownership information to the Federal Reserve Board. When Regardie's first tried to find out who owns First American through the Freedom of Information Act, however, the Fed declined to grant the request.

Among the documents that the Fed did provide were two letters from a lawyer for the Middle Eastern investors requesting that the Fed not disclose their names to the public.

Further evidence of First American's touchiness about the subject of its ownership was displayed when the company was defending itself from a lawsuit in 1988. The Middle Eastern investors, in taking over the company in 1982, didn't acquire 100 percent ownership of all the banking subsidiaries. In 1987 First American Bankshares decided to buy out the minority shareholders in First American of Maryland and First American of Virginia at a price of $42 a share. Several of the Maryland bank's investors complained that the price was too low and took advantage of a state appraisal system to win a higher price. In Virginia, which has no such appraisal system, the dissenting shareholders went to court. In September 1988 a federal jury in Alexandria awarded the investors $60 a share.

During the discovery phase of the case, lawyers for the plaintiffs met stiff resistance when they tried to determine who owned the company. When the question was put to Altman during a deposition, he steadfastly refused to provide any names. When the plaintiffs' attorneys persisted, Altman's lawyer snapped that the identity of the owners was "none of your business." When specific names were put to Altman, however, he did confirm their status as shareholders.

In a pretrial motion, First American's lawyers went so far as to ask the judge to forbid

the plaintiffs' lawyers from mentioning in court the names or nationalities of the company's shareholders—or even that the bank was foreign-owned. They argued that it was irrelevant to the case, largely because Clifford and Altman ran the company; the owners played no role, they said, in setting the $42-a-share price to be paid to minority shareholders. They also claimed that the disclosure that the bank is Arab-owned could stir up prejudice in some of the jurors.

The unusual requests to the Federal Reserve and to the judge in Alexandria underscore how sensitive First American is about its foreign connections. One of the stated reasons for the sensitivity—the possibility of anti-Arab prejudice—may have some validity. Another reason—that the Arab investors have absolutely no influence over the company—isn't so convincing.

The owners may give Altman and Clifford considerable autonomy, but as their employers they have the right to fire them whenever they want. Furthermore, how can the public be assured that the owners have no influence as long as their identities remain secret?

Potential customers and employees also have a legitimate interest in knowing who owns First American. Should they decide that the owners are objectionable people, for example, they might well decide not to deal with the company.

There's another important reason that the identities of First American's owners are a matter of public interest. The takeover was highly controversial. How does the public know that the Fed did its job properly if it refuses to say who was permitted to buy the company?

Among the first group of documents obtained by Regardie's from the Federal Reserve is a letter from Paul Volcker, who was then the Fed's chairman, to the late Benjamin Rosenthal, a Democratic congressman from New York. The letter is dated November 16, 1982, about three months after the Fed approved the takeover. In the letter Volcker says that the Fed had recently received a Freedom of Information Act request for shareholder information, that the disclosure had been deemed "appropriate," and that "a response is being prepared to that request that will include the shareholder information."

When the Federal Reserve refused to provide shareholder information to Regardie's, the magazine protested the ruling and brought Volcker's letter to the attention of the Fed's lawyers. The Fed then reversed itself, saying that it would release the names of the shareholders, along with each one's percentage ownership in the bank, in 10 days. Before the 10-day period had expired, however, First American complained, which led the Fed to deliver yet a third decision. This time the Fed agreed to release the names of the investors who held at least 5 percent of the stock, but it would only reveal the exact percentages for those investors who held 10 percent or more. These nine investors account for all but 1.75 percent of First American's stock.

The list (see page 69) reveals that First American's biggest shareholder is Kamal Adham, who owned 12.63 percent of the company at the end of 1988. In addition, Adham Corporation Limited owned a block of between 5 and 10 percent. The other owners included Sheikh Zayed (11.76 percent); Sheikh Khalifa bin Zayed al-Nahayan, one of Zayed's sons and the crown prince of Abu Dhabi; the Abu Dhabi Investment Authority, which Zayed controls; Faisal Saud al-Fulaij; Abdul Raouf Khalil of Saudi Arabia; Mashriq Holding Company, the personal holding company of Sheikh Hamad bin Mohammed al-Sharqi, the ruler of Fujaira, which is a member of the United Arab Emirates; Ali Mohammed Shorafa of the UAE; Sheikh Humaid bin Rashid al-Naomi, the crown prince and deputy ruler of Ajman, another UAE member state; Khalid Salem Bin Mahfouz of Saudi Arabia; and Mohammed Hammoud of Lebanon.

These are the names that First American has gone to such great lengths to conceal from the public.

An examination of the investors' backgrounds suggests that First American may have good reason to suppress their names—not because some customers and employees may be prejudiced against Arabs in general but because some Americans may take a dim view of some of these particular Arabs.

WHEN CLIFFORD AND ALTMAN MET with bank regulators at the Federal Reserve in April 1981, they were accompanied by Kamal Adham and three other investors. After describing Adham as "a prominent businessman in Saudi Arabia," Clifford lavished praise on him. "I have come to have the deepest respect for his character, for his reputation, for his honor, and for his integrity," Clifford said. "I'm proud to be an associate of his."

Throughout the proceedings, Clifford referred to Adham as "His Excellency"—a term that isn't generally applied to Saudi sheikhs. In Saudi Arabia, the term sheikh isn't a title of nobility but simply an honorific for a respected person—roughly equivalent to referring to a distinguished Spaniard as "Don." Taking their cue from Clifford, the regulators began to refer to Adham as "His Excellency."

Clifford recounted what he described as a recent conversation with B. F. Saul, the chairman of Financial General. "He [Saul] had occasion to go to London, maybe more than once," Clifford said. "He had occasion to go to the Middle East, the Persian Gulf countries. I remember later on his talking with me, and he said, 'I have looked into the reputation, particularly of the leader of the group, of His Excellency Sheikh Kamal Adham.' And he said, 'It's difficult to recall a time when I have heard such universal commendation for an international businessman. I hear it in London. I've heard the most commendatory comments. I've heard about him in countries of the Persian Gulf. I have not heard one whisper of criticism against this man.' And he said, 'I feel perfectly comfortable about this group, headed by this man, coming in and taking over our banks.'"

(Saul disputed Clifford's account in a recent interview with Regardie's: "I never did go to the Middle East to meet him. I think I met Kamal Adham in Washington once. I don't think I ever met him in London. I met him for 20 minutes. I did not try to make a judgment whether they should own a bank. That was something for the Federal Reserve to do. All I was concerned about was whether this was in the best interest of the shareholders, and I thought it was. I didn't know these people.")

When it was Adham's turn to speak, "His Excellency" provided some background information on himself. He said that he'd studied at English schools in the Middle East, including Victoria College in Cairo, and that he spoke "English, Arabic, and Turkish as well as some French and Italian." As for his business career, he said that he had "interests in a number of business enterprises, ranging from general contracting to manufacturing plants."

This portrait of Adham was incomplete. Long before he appeared at the Fed, newspaper stories had described him as Saudi Arabia's former intelligence chief. He'd held that post until 1977 and had served as a royal adviser until early 1979—two years after he started to buy stock in Financial General.

As far as can be discerned from the censored transcript of the meeting, there was no discussion of Adham's government career nor of how he'd earned his fortune.

Born in Turkey in 1929, Adham is the half-brother of Iffat, the favorite wife of the late King Faisal, who ruled Saudi Arabia from 1964 until his death in 1975. Adham and the much older Faisal were extremely close. During Faisal's years in power, Adham was one of the most powerful men in Saudi Arabia. David Holden and Richard Johns, the authors of The House of Saud, an authoritative book on Saudi Arabia, described Adham as Faisal's "closest confidant and adviser" and his "right-hand man."

Adham's most important role was to help the king set up an intelligence organization to protect the royal family from enemies at home and abroad. In the early 1960s he was put in charge of the Foreign Liaison Bureau and, in Holden and Johns's words, "given general supervision over the General Intelligence Directorate, the internal security service."

On the home front, the Saudi regime faced threats from several sources, including dissident members of the al-Saud family, foreigners who lived in the kingdom, Nasserites, religious zealots, and rebellious members of the armed forces. In 1969, for example, there were at least two coup attempts.

Faisal was capable of using brutal methods to suppress opposition. Some of his opponents, in the words of an authority on the kingdom, "were mercilessly hunted, and, when caught, they were tortured and imprisoned for lengthy periods." Some of the officers who were arrested in the wake of a 1969 coup plot were tortured by the secret police; a few of them died in prison. The repression continued into the 1970s and 1980s. In its 1977 human rights report, Amnesty International said that it knew of 200 political prisoners by name.

When it came to the kingdom's external relations, Adham acted as Saudi Arabia's liaison with the CIA, French intelligence, and other foreign spy agencies. He developed such close ties with Anwar Sadat that he was known as Saudi Arabia's "Mr. Egypt." One way that the Saudis cultivated Sadat was by showering money on him. As part of an effort to encourage Sadat to expel Soviet military advisers from Egypt, Adham channeled enormous sums—"hundreds of millions of dollars," according to one source—to Cairo.

The "subsidies" to Egypt illustrate how Saudi Arabia has used money as an instrument of foreign policy. "The Saudis don't have much to offer by way of manpower and military assets," says William Quandt of the Brookings Institution, an authority on Saudi Arabia. "What they have to offer is money."

One important beneficiary of Saudi largess has been the Palestine Liberation Organization. Saudi Arabia is widely acknowledged to be the PLO's biggest financial backer. In his 1981 book on Saudi Arabia, The Kingdom, Robert Lacey wrote: "Increasing Saudi subsidies to the PLO since 1973 have given the organization currency reserves estimated at over a billion dollars—larger than those of many Third World countries—and most inhabitants of the Kingdom are proud that Saudi oil revenues should be supporting the cause of their Palestinian brothers."

Despite his governmental responsibilities, Adham found time to engage in business activities during the 1960s and 1970s—and with impressive results. In 1981 he told the Federal Reserve Board that his net worth was $255 million.

Business acumen no doubt played a role in Adham's success. Also important, though, were his political connections. His business career is almost a textbook case of how highly placed Saudis profit from their connections.

One of Adham's first important business ventures involved oil. In the late 1950s and early 1960s Saudi Arabia's oil minister was Abdullah Tariki, an aggressive, U.S.-educated petroleum engineer. In Tariki's view, the "Seven Sisters"—the leading international oil companies—had long been taking advantage of Saudi Arabia and other oil-producing countries. Tariki did his best to extract more money from the companies, even to the point of opening negotiations with a Japanese company. (In a move that would later turn the world upside down, Tariki and his Venezuelan counterpart teamed up to found OPEC in 1960.)

But Tariki and the Japanese weren't the only parties involved in the discussions. The Japanese had engaged a well-connected Saudi as their agent: Kamal Adham. Adham's precise role in the deal is a matter of some dispute. It's clear, however, that Tariki complained vociferously that Adham was undercutting his negotiating clout. Many years later Tariki reportedly said that he'd managed to get the Japanese to cancel a secret 2 percent commission to Adham—which was to be paid on top of the commission that Adham was openly receiving. But Adham had the last laugh. In 1962 Tariki was dismissed and forced into exile, while Adham went on to become one of the most powerful men in the kingdom.

Adham has counted among his clients U.S. and European companies that manufacture arms. In the mid 1960s Kermit Roosevelt, an agent for Northrop Corporation, found that Adham appeared to be representing three foreign defense contractors simultaneously—and was trying to sign up Northrop. In a letter to Northrop, Roosevelt said he understood that Adham "already has a piece of the Lightning deal, the Mirage deal, and the Lockheed deal and is trying to complete the square by an arrangement with Northrop." Roosevelt concluded that it was probably a good idea for Northrop to engage Adham. "Without him," he said, "we are going to be weakly represented."

The Egyptian connections that Adham had acquired in his role as intelligence chief were of great value when he did business in that country. "Adham was the main intermediary in the deals whereby Saudi Arabia bought French weapons on behalf of Egypt," Holden and Johns wrote. "The commissions from these sales, including the Mirage aircraft, were understood to have been channeled through his company, Arcan."

One of Adham's American clients in the 1970s was Boeing Company, according to reports in the Wall Street Journal. Adham, the Journal said, received large commissions from Boeing in exchange for promoting sales of its jets. His link to Boeing came to light in the mid 1970s, when U.S. government agencies investigated "questionable payments" made by Boeing and other U.S. companies to Americans and foreigners, including government officials.

The SEC and the Federal Trade Commission charged that Boeing had made tens of millions of dollars in questionable payments in connection with foreign aircraft sales. Both cases were settled in 1978 with a consent arrangement. In connection with the SEC settlement, Boeing filed a report in which it admitted making such payments, although certain names and details were deleted. One such deal involved the sale of $137 million worth of aircraft to a customer in Egypt. In connection with that transaction, Boeing paid $8.7 million to corporations in Liechtenstein; Boeing said it believed that the ultimate recipients were individuals who'd arranged or provided financing for the sale.

Street Journal filled in some of the blanks in a June 1978 article, based on interviews with U.S. government sources. Boeing was assisted, the paper said, by Adham and Mahdi al-Tajir, a diplomat from the United Arab Emirates. Mahdi al-Tajir had encouraged Sheikh Zayed to lend Egypt up to $90 million to finance the aircraft purchases, U.S. officials said, while Adham had used his influence with the Egyptian government to ensure that Boeing would be the supplier. Over the years, the Journal said, "Boeing has paid millions of dollars in commissions to Mr. Adham and Ambassador Tajir."

Adham invested much of the money he earned as an agent for foreign companies in conventional businesses, among them First American. Another bank in his investment portfolio is Allied Arab Bank, a London-based institution. He's its biggest shareholder; his partners are his friend Mahdi al-Tajir and Britain's Barclays Bank.

Documents obtained by Regardie's from the Federal Reserve show that an SEC official told the Fed that the names of two of the Middle Eastern investors had come up in the Boeing investigation. In a letter to the SEC asking for more information, the two investors are referred to, but their names were excised from the version released to Regardie's. They are described as "Mr. _____ of Saudi Arabia and Mr. _____ of Kuwait." If the Wall Street Journal's reporting is correct, the Saudi in question is Kamal Adham.

There is no doubt about the identity of the other investor: only one Kuwaiti was involved in the takeover. He is Faisal Saud al-Fulaij, another major shareholder in First American.

From 1964 to 1977 Fulaij served as the chairman of Kuwait Airways, the state-owned airline. For an airline executive, he accumulated an impressive fortune—$70 million, according to a document filed with the Fed in 1981. In the late 1970s the Federal Trade Commission identified him as the recipient of at least $300,000 in bribes. The commission's draft complaint said: "The payment, at the direction of a Boeing Co. officer, was made through a fictitious Swiss consulting firm." Fulaij has denied the allegation.

Since the late 1970s Fulaij has been the chairman of Kuwait International Finance Company, which has been listed in BCCI's annual reports as an affiliate. Fulaij told the Federal Reserve that he was also the president of Kuwait Sanitary Wares Company, which, he said, "manufactured plumbing and ceramic equipment."

INVESTORS FROM ABU DHABI—SHEIKH Zayed, his son Sheikh Khalifa, the Abu Dhabi Investment Authority, and Ali Shorafa—own a large chunk of First American. Because Zayed is the absolute ruler of Abu Dhabi, the Abu Dhabi Investment Authority, a government investment fund, is widely regarded as his personal property.

Sheikh Zayed came to power in 1966 by deposing Sheikh Shakhbut, his older brother. Shakhbut reportedly had peculiar attitudes about the proper way to invest money. There have long been rumors that he didn't believe in banks and kept gold bullion and millions of dollars in cash at home. He was eventually persuaded to put some of his money in the bank, the story goes, when he learned that rats had nibbled away a fortune in bank notes.

Shakhbut had refused to spend the sheikhdom's oil wealth to raise the living standards of his people. Thus, when Zayed replaced him, the change in power was widely welcomed.

Zayed, unlike his brother, is a big spender. He's spent vast sums on lavish construction projects, some of which are regarded as white elephants. The largest chunk of the sheikhdom's money, however, has gone into his pocket. Fortune magazine has estimated that Zayed is worth about $1.5 billion—not including the billions of dollars in assets held by the Abu Dhabi Investment Authority. The ADIA is a joint owner—along with the Libyan Treasury Secretariat and the Kuwait Ministry of Finance—of the Arab Banking Corporation, one of the Arab world's largest banks.

Zayed has a large family to support. In the late 1970s it was reported that he'd been married as many as 14 times—although, of course, he's presumably never had more than four wives at any one time (the limit under Islamic law). He reportedly has 22 daughters and 19 sons.

His wealth derives from Abu Dhabi's oil revenues, which shot up dramatically after the 1973-74 OPEC price increase. Around the same time, a number of Arab countries cut off shipments of oil to the United States, along with a few other countries, to punish them for their support of Israel during the 1973 Yom Kippur War. Abu Dhabi was the first Arab country to declare an embargo against the United States.

Over the years Zayed has also channeled tens of millions of dollars to the PLO. He's been an outspoken critic of the United States and its relationship with Israel. "Israel is our number-one enemy," he told reporters last December, "and America is our number-two enemy." Two days later he reportedly met with PLO leader Yassir Arafat and assured him of his support for the Palestinian uprising on the Israeli-occupied West Bank.

Up until sometime in late 1981 or early 1982, the man in charge of managing Zayed's personal fortune was Abdullah Darwaish. As "Chairman/Director General of the Department of Personal Affairs of H.R.H. Ruler of Abu Dhabi and Chairman of the Abu Dhabi Investment Company," he'd acquired shares of Financial General as a sort of trustee for Zayed's young son Mohammed.

In March 1982, several months before the takeover was consummated, Sheikh Zayed brought two suits in U.S. courts charging that Darwaish had been involved in an elaborate scheme to defraud him of $96 million. Darwaish had already been under house arrest in Abu Dhabi for several months; his chief deputy, Riaz Saleem Aslam, had been jailed there in late 1981.

"Documents filed in that case," the Washington Post's Jerry Knight reported in August 1982, "indicate Darwaish's troubles in Abu Dhabi were known weeks and perhaps months before he and his partners bought control of Financial General but were never disclosed to bank officials, stockholders, or regulatory agencies.

"Neither the Securities and Exchange Commission, which regulates corporate acquisitions, nor the Federal Reserve Board, which has authority over bank holding companies, has been informed of Darwaish's troubles in Abu Dhabi, sources at the two agencies said."

The same day that the story appeared, Michael Bradfield, the general counsel to the Federal Reserve Board, wrote to Clark Clifford to ask for more information. Clifford responded in a letter dated August 16. In it he stressed that Darwaish owned no shares in the company but was merely representing Zayed's son Mohammed, and he added that Mohammed would be handling his own investments in the future. He denied that any information had been withheld from regulatory agencies. In one passage he branded the Post's story "inaccurate, misleading, unwarranted, and irresponsible" and said that he had informed Benjamin Bradlee, the executive editor, of "the gross inaccuracies in the article." The Post, however, published no correction, letter to the editor, or follow-up article.

One important issue was lost in the shuffle. The formal tender offer for Financial General Bankshares, filed with the SEC on March 3, 1982, listed Abdullah Darwaish as one of the three controlling shareholders in the takeover group (along with Adham and Fulaij) and described him as the chairman of the Abu Dhabi Investment Company and the chairman of Sheikh Zayed's Department of Personal Affairs. At the time, however, he'd already been stripped of his official duties and placed under house arrest.

In March 1989 the New York Court of Appeals ruled unanimously that Zayed couldn't press his claim because he'd refused to be deposed in the case. Riaz Aslam, Darwaish's deputy, was reportedly still languishing in an Abu Dhabi prison. As for Darwaish, Regardie's has been unable to ascertain his whereabouts.

Khalid Salem Bin Mahfouz, one of Saudi Arabia's most prominent businessmen, first bought shares in First American in 1986. His family controls the largest bank in Saudi Arabia, National Commercial Bank, and has a net worth estimated to be more than $1.5 billion. Khalid's father is the bank's founder; Khalid and his brothers run it.

Like many of Saudi Arabia's super-rich, the Bin Mahfouz family has benefited from royal patronage. King Saud granted permission to establish the bank in 1954. Another apparent privilege was granted much more recently. In the late 1970s the Saudi government ordered the nation's private-sector banks to sell stock to the public. Only one bank didn't do so, presumably because of a special exemption: National Commercial.

First American was by no means Bin Mahfouz's first investment in the United States. In 1977 he teamed up with former treasury secretary John Connally, Texas banker Fredrick Erck, and Ghaith Pharaon to buy Main Bank, a small bank in Houston, Texas. The following year Connally introduced Bin Mahfouz to Nelson Bunker Hunt and his brother, Herbert, who were on the lookout for partners as part of their effort to corner the world's silver market. In 1979, according to British journalist Stephen Fay, the Hunts and Bin Mahfouz established an offshore company to serve as a vehicle for silver investments, but the silver scheme collapsed, and Bin Mahfouz was rumored to have suffered huge losses.

ASIDE FROM BEING WEALTHY ARABS, Kamal Adham and the other principal owners of First American Bankshares have one thing in common: all of them are closely associated with BCCI.

The owners of First American are connected to BCCI in many other ways. All of them have been described as "BCCI clients," in the sense that the bank provides investment advice to them. Sheikh Zayed is a close friend of Abedi's and a partner with BCCI in its UAE subsidiary, Bank of Credit and Commerce (Emirates). Adham has been a BCCI depositor and borrower. Fulaij is a longtime executive of the BCCI group; when he first bought stock in Financial General, he was the chairman of Kuwait International Finance Company, a BCCI affiliate. (BCCI owns 49 percent of KIFCO.) BCCI's annual reports show that Fulaij served on the board of BCCI's Italian subsidiary, Italfinance International S.p.A., from 1982 to 1986. Bin Mahfouz has served on BCCI's board of directors.

These close ties to BCCI and Abedi, its president, raise an obvious question: What is the relationship between First American Bankshares and BCCI?

ABEDI'S KNACK FOR FORGING POLITIcal connections has been controversial, partly because BCCI has sometimes employed highly questionable techniques. The bank has entered into business partnerships with political figures, provided jobs for them and their offspring, paid their travel expenses, and given them loans.

In many of the countries in which BCCI has made powerful friends, it has received certain privileges or outperformed other foreign banks. BCCI spokesmen say this is a coincidence; other bankers are skeptical.

The United Arab Emirates, for example, has been described as the most overbanked country in the world; it has a huge number of branches that serve a population of less than 1.5 million. In 1982 the UAE decreed that foreign banks would be limited to eight branches apiece. BCCI managed to get around the rule by setting up a separate bank, Bank of Credit and Commerce (Emirates). It didn't go unnoticed that Sheikh Zayed and his relatives own stock in both BCCI and BCCE.

Many foreign banks have abandoned Nigeria in recent years, amid complaints that economic travails and government restrictions have made it extraordinarily difficult for them to generate profits. But BCCI's 40 percent-owned Nigerian subsidiary has been expanding rapidly and making so much money that it's now one of its most profitable units. The chairman—and one of the shareholders—of BCCI's Nigerian subsidiary is Ibrahim Dasuki, a wealthy businessman who's so close to Nigerian president Ibrahim Babangida that he's been described as Babangida's "political godfather."

BCCI's most impressive political connections were forged in Pakistan during the 10-year rule of Mohammad Zia ul-Haq, the repressive dictator who died in 1988. Sources in Pakistan say that Abedi was one of Zia's closest friends and a key adviser. BCCI hired a long list of senior Pakistani officials who'd served under Zia.

BCCI's image has also suffered because of its involvement in flight capital—money moved abroad by people who live in unstable countries. Most flight capital is exported by rich people in Third World countries, and they usually have to violate foreign exchange controls to accumulate their money abroad.

Most big banks are happy to accept deposits from customers who've smuggled the money abroad, but they generally avoid violating exchange controls. In at least six developing countries, officers of BCCI have been accused of exchange-control violations; they've been found guilty in three of them.

But all of BCCI's previous controversies have been dwarfed by the issue of drug money.

One former BCCI customer who was allegedly involved in the drug trade is Manuel Noriega, the former Panamanian dictator. In February 1988 Noriega was indicted in Miami and Tampa on federal drug charges. Around the time of the indictments, two convicted traffickers testified at Senate hearings that they'd dealt with Noriega—and with BCCI—in Panama. One of the traffickers, Leigh Bruce Ritch, testified that he'd been referred to BCCI by Cesar Rodriguez, one of Noriega's closest associates. The traffickers' testimony was buttressed by José Blandon, a former Panamanian diplomat. ▸

FIRST AMERICAN

BCCI, according to Blandon, had been used for money laundering by both Rodriguez and Enrique Pretelt, another associate of Noriega's, who at the time was under indictment in the United States on drug charges.

In the wake of the Noriega hearings, the Senate Subcommittee on Terrorism, Narcotics, and International Operations, chaired by John Kerry of Massachusetts, launched a secret inquiry into BCCI. On September 30, 1988, the Kerry committee deposed Amjad Awan, BCCI's country manager for Panama from 1981 to 1984. Awan, who'd acted as Noriega's personal banker, said that the dictator had channeled millions of dollars through his BCCI account, most of the deposits had been in cash. Noriega had been so pleased with the service he'd received, according to Awan, that he'd made a personal appeal to Abedi not to transfer Awan from Panama. Abedi had gone ahead with the transfer anyway, but Awan had assured Noriega that "I would be available to him whenever he needed me."

Kerry's subcommittee wasn't the only unit of the U.S. government that was taking a close look at BCCI. At the same time that Awan was testifying, he and several of his BCCI colleagues were the targets of an undercover investigation of money laundering that had been launched in 1986 by the U.S. Customs Service. A customs agent posing as a money launderer had channeled millions of dollars in cocaine money through BCCI. Awan was one of several BCCI officers who'd allegedly been eager to help out.

In early October 1988 a federal grand jury in Tampa returned an indictment against BCCI and nine of its employees, including Awan. BCCI and eight of the bankers were charged with laundering about $14 million in cocaine money.

When the indictment was unsealed, U.S. Customs Commissioner William von Raab called BCCI "an institution that was prostituting itself to money laundering."

In April 1989 a federal grand jury in Tampa returned a superseding indictment against BCCI. The new indictment alleged that BCCI officers were involved in laundering drug money as far back as 1983—three years before U.S. Customs launched the investigation that led to the original indictment. The new indictment also alleged that the laundering of drug money was part of BCCI's corporate strategy BCCI and its Colombian subsidiary, it said, implemented "a corporate strategy for increasing BCCI's deposits by encouraging placements of cash from whatever sources, specifically including 'flight capital,' 'black market capital,' and the proceeds of drug sales, in conscious disregard of the currency regulations, tax laws, and antidrug laws of the United States and of other nations."

BCCI settled the case last January with a plea bargain. It and an affiliate pleaded guilty to money-laundering charges and forfeited $15 million: in exchange, prosecutors dropped the charges against BCCI's Luxembourg holding company as well as BCCI's Colombian subsidiary. Five officers of BCCI are now on trial in Tampa, and the U.S government is seeking to extradite another BCCI officer from London. British authorities are expected to put still another BCCI official on trial in that country

WHAT EXACTLY IS THE RELATIONSHIP between First American Bankshares and the bank that the U.S. government has branded a corporate criminal?

The official version is that there is none. The two shareholder groups overlap to a certain extent, officials of First American Bankshares say, and BCCI provides advice to some of the Arab investors—and that's about it.

"BCCI has not been involved at any time in any respect in the establishment of policy or in the control or management of First American or any of its subsidiaries," one of First American's lawyers said in a letter to Regardie's. "This has been confirmed by the management of First American and reaffirmed in regular bank examinations."

The official version of the relationship, however, shouldn't be accepted at face value. BCCI officials and lawyers for First American's owners have made numerous questionable statements over the years. In at least a few cases, BCCI officers have given false information to reporters.

Some of the most egregious examples are from early 1978, when it was first reported that BCCI might have been behind Bert Lance's efforts to buy shares of Financial General. On February 13, the New York Times reported that BCCI officials "flatly denied making any purchases of or having any involvement in efforts to acquire Financial General stock." According to the Times, Dildar Rizvi, a BCCI official, "said that he had spoken today with Mr. Abedi, who also denied any connection with efforts to purchase Financial General stock." A little more than a month later Rizvi (who is now one of BCCI's most senior officials) told a reporter for the Washington Post that Bert Lance "was paid nothing by the bank"; Allaudin Shaik, another BCCI executive, said that Lance had "received absolutely no loans from BCCI or loans arranged by BCCI."

All of these statements were later proven false. Abedi himself, in fact, later admitted that BCCI had lent Lance about $3 5 million.

During and after the takeover battle, the BCCI "clients" and their lawyers also made numerous questionable statements about the deal. Clark Clifford, for example, provided this extraordinarily terse account of Lance's role during the April 1981 meeting at the Federal Reserve: "At one time he did own a few shares of stock. He sold the stock Retired from participation in it." And Altman recently told Regardie's that Lance hadn't had "any significant role in the acquisition."

In fact, however, Lance had been a paid financial adviser to BCCI, had helped to collect the stock, and had approached the management of Financial General on the investors' behalf

In a 1979 deposition, and again at the Fed meeting in 1981, Adham said that the stock had been recommended to him by a friend who worked at the Saudi embassy in Washington. "Mr. [Hassan] Yassin advised me that the stock had become available for purchase in Financial General and that this company might provide an attractive investment opportunity," he told the Fed in 1981. "I asked BCCI to evaluate this property for me and advise me as to its suitability as an investment."

Three years earlier, however, U.S. District Court Judge Oliver Gasch had found in a civil suit that it was Abedi who had recommended the Financial General stock to Adham.

At the Fed meeting, Clifford, Altman, and Adham went to great lengths to portray the share buy-up as a routine investment. Adham and his partners weren't members of a group involved in a secret scheme to acquire control of the company, they said, but simply ordinary investors in the U.S stock market.

The assertion that BCCI wasn't involved in the takeover—that the buyers were merely several unrelated investors who happened to be customers of BCCI—had already been demolished by Gasch, who'd agreed with the SEC that the shareholders were acting as a group to take over Financial General in violation of securities law He'd found that Abedi had essentially put together the deal, assembling a group of investors and instructing Lance and others to buy stock for them.

There can be little doubt that Abedi was interested in acquiring a foothold in the United States. But major legal and regulatory obstacles stood in his way. In fact, BCCI had run into trouble with state banking regulators three years before the Financial General battle. In 1975 a BCCI client had tried to acquire the Bank of Chelsea, a small institution in New York City. But after he'd made it clear that BCCI would be involved in running the bank, New York State bank regulators withheld their approval.

At a December 1, 1977 meeting that was attended by Lance and others, Abedi, the SEC said, "discussed the possibility of acquisition of control of both FGB and NBG by Ghaith Pharaon." Pharaon's lawyer said that since his client already owned part of National Bank of Georgia (a transaction that was reportedly financed by BCCI), this could violate restrictions on interstate banking. The Financial General stock would have to be bought by someone else. Abedi immediately came up with four other BCCI clients. These four investors and the ones who joined them later were more than simply "BCCI clients." They included BCCI stockholders, joint-venture partners, friends of Abedi's, and, perhaps most important, borrowers from the BCCI group

Fulaij, for example, told the SEC that he'd paid for his stock with a $3.55 million unsecured loan from Kuwait International Finance Company, a BCCI affiliate. Fulaij was its chairman.

Fulaij wasn't the only borrower. Adham has borrowed from the bank, and other members of the group may have done so. When Financial General's management was fighting the takeover, its lawyers filed a sworn affidavit that they'd seen a Bank of America document that revealed that BCCI had made loans to two of the four Middle Eastern investors

Moreover, the names of the two shell companies that were set up as a vehicle for the acquisition of Financial General bore a striking resemblance to that of BCCI: a Dutch company called Credit and Commerce American Investment, which in turn was owned by a Netherlands Antilles company called Credit and Commerce American Holdings.

When a Federal Reserve official asked about the similarity, Clifford replied: "I think generally the term 'credit' and the term 'commerce' are terms that are used extensively in the Persian Gulf in financial affairs. . . . I know of no additional reasoning behind it." Clifford was mistaken. The only major Arab-owned bank with those words in its name is Bank of Credit and Commerce International.

THE PUBLIC RECORD SHOWS THAT BCCI masterminded the Financial General investment, provided loans and consulting fees to Lance (who facilitated the takeover), brought in close associates of the bank as investors, and financed the stock purchase of at least one of those investors. While none of this proves that the two institutions have been linked to each other since the takeover, Regardie's has found that there are a number of ongoing connections.

Before BCCI opened a branch in New York, it depended heavily on the services of correspondent banks in that city. One correspondent was First American Bank of New York—a seemingly unusual choice, since it's a relatively small, obscure institution. Odd, that is, unless BCCI regarded it as a sort of sister bank. An official at a major New York bank who's had dealings with BCCI says that when BCCI's employees made business trips to New York, they used desks and phones at First American.

There are also personnel connections. At least two of BCCI's senior officials have held posts at First American Bank of New York. Aijaz Afridi left his job as a general manager of BCCI's Swiss subsidiary to become the executive vice president of FABNY, only to return to run BCCI's Spanish subsidiary. Khusro Elley, who ran BCCI's representative office in New York, also left for a senior position at FABNY.

A source at BCCI's Spanish subsidiary says that before Afridi arrived there, employees were informed that he was a senior BCCI official who'd been posted to First American of New York "at the request of Mr. Abedi" and that Abedi had now transferred him to Spain. After Afridi arrived in Spain, this source says, he frequently referred to First American as a member of the BCCI group.

Neither Elley nor Afridi, however, completely severed his ties to BCCI while working for First American. Public records show that both men used BCCI mortgages to buy houses in the wealthy suburb of Scarsdale. Afridi received his mortgage in December 1983, just months before he'd joined First American. Elley's mortgage was granted in July 1984, while he was a First American employee. Real estate records don't indicate the interest rate on Elley's mortgage, but Afridi's was granted on what appear to be extremely generous terms, including no down payment.

PERHAPS THE MOST OBVIOUS ONGOING connection between First American and BCCI, however, is their common law firm: Clifford & Warnke. The firm began to work for BCCI in early 1978, when Abedi and the bank were sued for violating U.S. securities laws in connection with the acquisition of shares in Financial General.

Two years ago, when Senator Kerry investigated BCCI's ties to Noriega, Clifford and Altman dealt with his subcommittee on BCCI's behalf. Clifford, according to a subcommittee source, had discussions with Kerry as well as with the chairman of the Foreign Relations Committee, Senator Claiborne Pell of Rhode Island.

Following BCCI's indictment on drug charges in October 1988, Clifford and Altman played an important role behind the scenes, recommending defense lawyers, monitoring the case as it unfolded, and even approving BCCI's responses to press inquiries.

Altman has also lobbied on Capitol Hill on BCCI's behalf. In January, shortly before the proposed settlement was announced, he and three other lawyers for BCCI met with Senator Orrin Hatch of Utah. Hatch has told Regardie's that Altman and his colleagues strongly defended the plea bargain.

The arguments were evidently persuasive. After other senators criticized the plea bargain as a slap on the wrist, Hatch defended the deal on the floor of the Senate. He also minimized BCCI's relationship with Noriega, lumped BCCI together with banks that had been found guilty of less-serious charges (failure to file currency-transaction reports), and said—incorrectly—that none of the individual defendants who'd been indicted were senior officials of BCCI.

All the while, of course, Clifford and Altman have been running First American. It's a curious and awkward relationship that not only undercuts First American's claim that it's wholly independent but also presents potential conflicts of interest. Aren't there times when the interests of First American and BCCI are at odds? How do Clifford and Altman resolve such conflicts? Do they do what's best for First American or what's best for BCCI? Or doesn't it matter?

Altman says that he doesn't see a conflict. "It's not unusual that a law firm represents more than one client in an industry," he says. "We are not the primary lawyer for BCCI. We [First American] do very different kinds of business. They are an international bank; we are a regional bank."

As the chairman of First American Bankshares, couldn't Altman avoid even the appearance of a conflict of interest by simply dropping another bank that he describes as a minor client?

"I'm not anxious to distance myself from BCCI," Altman says. "I'm not defensive about it."

Clifford and Altman aren't the only lawyers used by BCCI, but they have a great deal of contact with the bank's top management, according to a BCCI insider. He says that Altman was in constant communication with BCCI officials. Altman says that he talked to Abedi "infrequently." When Regardie's asked Altman how often he talks to Abedi's deputy, Swaleh Naqvi, who essentially runs BCCI, Altman declined to comment.

Moreover, Altman claims that he and Clifford have very little contact with First American's Middle Eastern owners. For example, he stated in a deposition that he hadn't bothered to tell them when he'd decided to spend about $30 million to buy the remaining public stock in First American's Virginia subsidiary. There hadn't been, he insisted, a single meeting, letter, telex—not even a phone call. In one motion, lawyers for First American stated, "The evidence in this case is undisputed that those foreign nationals played absolutely no role in the merger transaction, and indeed, did not even know about it until after it had been consummated."

Shareholders who are so remote from a company that they're not consulted about a $30 million transaction are more than simply "passive" investors. "Comatose" might be a more accurate term.

First American is by no means the only ostensibly independent company with close ties to BCCI. Attock Oil Company, a London-based refining and trading firm, has in recent years acquired several U.S. properties. Abedi arranged the acquisition of Attock Oil in 1979, and a source close to the company says that its owners include Adham, Pharaon, and Fulaij. According to published reports, Pharaon has been the chairman of the company and Adham a director. Its main bank is BCCI.

Capcom Financial Services, a commodities and money-management firm, was indicted in Tampa as a codefendant in the BCCI money-laundering case. A source close to the company says that its leading shareholders include at least two of First American's shareholders, Adham and Abdul Khalil, as well as S. Z. A. Akbar, Capcom's managing director. Akbar is related by marriage to Naqvi, BCCI's chief executive, and before joining Capcom he was BCCI's chief trader. He was also indicted in the Florida case.

Then there's the case of National Bank of Georgia. After BCCI arranged Pharaon's acquisition of the bank in late 1977, Pharaon became an absentee owner. In 1979 he hired Roy P. M. Carlson, a former executive of Bank of America, to run NBG. Carlson had been responsible for monitoring B of A's investment in BCCI.

Carlson wasn't the only NBG official with links to BCCI. Three Pakistani bankers were recruited from BCCI to help Carlson run the bank. The most senior of them was Tariq Jamil, whose title was assistant to the chairman. A few years ago Jamil returned to BCCI as a senior official of its Hong Kong subsidiary.

At the time, however, Clark Clifford indicated that Pharaon's ties to the owners of First American may have had something to do with the transaction. "Our investors encouraged us to consider the purchase," he said. "They had known of the ownership being in the hands of Pharaon. They encouraged us to do it." Pharaon has himself acknowledged the importance of his ties to the owners of First American. "These are people we have been associated with for a long time," he said, referring to Adham and Fulaij. "We've had many contacts with them, so we know them. They said we should speak to [First American's] management in Washington, which we did, and that's how the deal came through."

Pharaon has invested in other U.S. banks, in at least some cases with BCCI's help. In 1985, for instance, he bought Independence Bank of Encino, California in a transaction that resembled the Georgia deal. Sources familiar with the deal say that the negotiations were handled by BCCI officers and that Pharaon has been a very passive investor. A BCCI executive was installed as the bank's chairman, although in 1989 the top job was taken over by an American banker who has no apparent ties to BCCI. Senior officials of the bank say that there's no connection with BCCI and that they regard Pharaon as the bank's proprietor.

One characteristic shared by all of these purportedly independent companies is that their senior executives have attended BCCI's annual management conferences. BCCI insiders say that attendees have included officials of Attock Oil, Capcom, National Bank of Georgia, and First American Bankshares.

Altman has also attended several of the conferences. The feeling among the participants, a source says, was that "everyone there was part of the BCCI group." According to sources who have attended these conferences, Altman was there not as a lawyer for BCCI but as the leader of a contingent of First American executives.

"I don't think any other First American people were there," Altman says. Was he there in his capacity as a First American executive or as a BCCI lawyer? "It wasn't specified," he says. "They asked me to come."

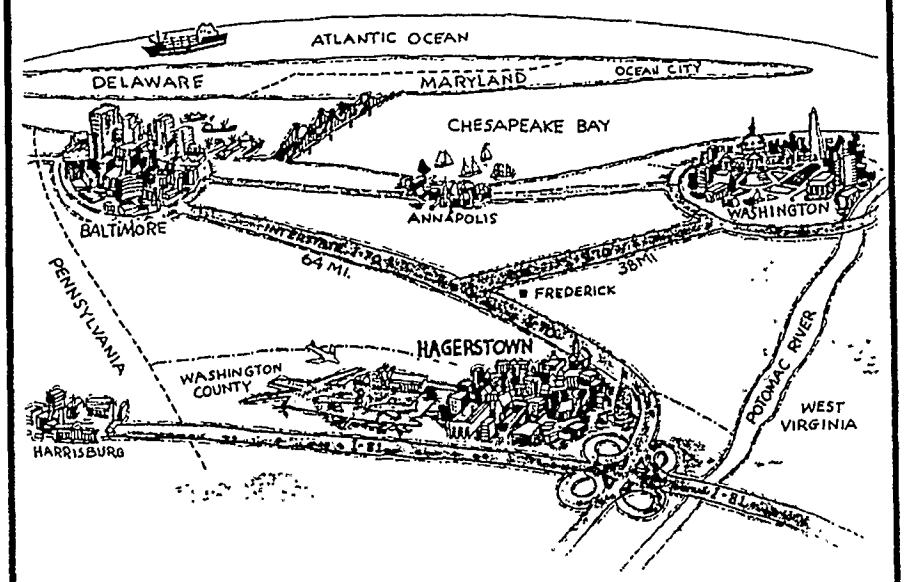
At other meetings, senior executives of BCCI, including Abedi, explicitly reinforced the notion that the firms in attendance were part of the "group." Says a former BCCI executive: "I remember at one meeting, Abedi said, 'We are now one of the largest financial groups in the world, when you take into account the BCC Group, First American, Attock Oil.' He would mention NBG and Independence Bank. He would say when you put them all together, we as a group are so big. He would throw in a figure of $28 billion or $30 billion in assets."

Indeed, a banker who attended several of the management conferences told Regardie's, "You'd be damn foolish if you didn't see the handwriting on the wall that someday they could come together." Sources say, in fact, that Abedi not only spoke of First American as an affiliate but that he planned to turn it into an official subsidiary once he got approval from the Federal Reserve. One BCCI source says that Abedi even told various BCCI executives what jobs they'd have in Washington. Altman denies that there was ever any such plan.

During the Florida money-laundering investigation, Amjad Awan described the relationship between BCCI and First American to an undercover federal agent. A government affidavit paraphrases Awan:

"Awan said that BCCI has bought and controls First American Bank and National Bank of Georgia through private individuals. The banks were bought through individual names rather than BCCI because BCCI could not buy

View From the Other Washington



In Washington County, Maryland, we look at things a little differently. And every year, more and more smart businesses are settling here to share the vision and the opportunities.

Just a stone's throw – an hour's drive – from Baltimore and our nation's capitol, the other Washington has a great deal to offer: a skilled and willing workforce, two Enterprise Zones, and a network of air, rail and interstate transportation that speeds your products to almost half of America's consumers.

Location is only one of the reasons successful businesses like Citicorp, Tandy and Rohr Industries feel at home in Washington County. Here, we're committed to cutting through the red tape that slows a company down. We'll work with you to select a site, help you discover financing opportunities, and do everything we can to have you up and running in no time.

cause of massive fraud, Clifford and Altman met numerous times with Abedi, who told them he wanted to buy a bank in the United States that would later be combined with BCCI, Rizvi said.

Former defense secretary Clifford said in the same meetings, Rizvi testified, that he thought Abedi's vision was an excellent one and would be well served if Financial General Bankshares, later renamed First American, were linked with BCCI.

Clifford and Altman represented BCCI when it openly made a bid to buy Financial General Bankshares in 1978. When the Federal Reserve rejected the bid, a second attempt by a new group of investors was approved by regulators in 1981 after Clifford and Altman said BCCI would have nothing to do with the ownership or control of the bank.

Rizvi also said that in Clifford's and Altman's presence, Abedi would refer to the investors who purchased what became First American as "friends of BCCI, nominees, BCCI or shareholders of BCCI," while Clifford referred to them as "investors" or "shareholders."

The much-anticipated testimony of Rizvi, 53, had been delayed for several days while Altman's lawyers made many motions to try to limit or exclude the testimony. Rizvi, a slight, soft-spoken man who was educated in Pakistan, will continue his testimony about Altman's role on Wednesday.

Rizvi, who was charged by federal prosecutors in 1991 with using BCCI to launder money, has made a deal with prosecutors to cooperate in the case in exchange for a dismissal of the charges against him.

In court here today, Rizvi painted a portrait of BCCI as a bank that stole its depositors' money. He recounted how in the summer of 1980 he went with BCCI President Swaleh Naqvi to visit Sheik Khalid bin Mahfouz, then head of Saudi Arabia's largest commercial bank and a major BCCI investor. Afterward, Rizvi said, Naqvi told him to transfer more than $146 million to a Mahfouz bank account.

The money, which was taken from depositors' accounts, was put on the bank's books as a loan, Rizvi testified. Asked if he was aware that he was creating false loan documents to cover those payments, Rizvi, after a long pause, replied, "yes."

Mahfouz is the target of a New York state indictment, a civil lawsuit and a Federal Reserve action.

Witness: BCCI Founder Told Altman, Clifford of 'Vision'

By Sharon Walsh
Washington Post Staff Writer

NEW YORK, April 27—A key witness in the trial of Robert A. Altman today said that beginning in 1978, the founder of the Bank of Credit and Commerce International told Clark M. Clifford and Altman that his "vision" was for BCCI to own a U.S. bank.

Diddar Rahvi, a former top BCCI official, was the first witness in the four-week-old trial with firsthand knowledge of BCCI's inner workings. He is also the first to testify who was present in meetings in New York, London and Washington when Clifford and Altman, who represented BCCI, met with BCCI officials regarding their desire to acquire a U.S. bank.

Altman and Clifford have been charged with fraud in representing to bank regulators that BCCI would have no ownership or control of First American Bankshares Inc., the bank company Clifford and Altman managed. They have denied the charges and said they were misled by BCCI founder Agha Hasan Abedi and his top lieutenants.

Clifford's trial has been delayed indefinitely because of his ill health.

State Regulators Shut Independence

By Sharon Walsh
Washington Post Staff Writer

California banking regulators yesterday closed Independence Bank of Encino, one of three U.S. banks that were illegally owned by the Bank of Credit and Commerce International, after federal regulators determined that paying off depositors was less costly than keeping the bank open.

Independence had been teetering for months on the edge of insolvency and probably would have been closed sooner, but regulators waited until BCCI pleaded guilty to an array of crimes.

Because of an unusual plea agreement by BCCI, signed a week ago by U.S. District Judge Joyce Hens Green, the failure of Independence should not cost taxpayers anything. Under the pact, court-appointed liquidators pleaded guilty on behalf of BCCI to charges that included illegal ownership of Independence, First American Bankshares Inc. of Washington and National Bank of Georgia. BCCI forfeited its $550 million in U.S. assets, half of which will be used to prevent the federal bank insurance fund from suffering losses caused by the illegally owned institutions.

First American Bankshares, the District's largest bank holding company, won't be affected by the failure of Independence, banking and regulatory sources said.

"The seizure of Independence has no effect on First American Bankshares or its customers," said George L. Davis, president of First American. "The banks owned by First American are entirely separate entities."

First American is under orders from the Federal Reserve to sell its shares that are illegally owned by BCCI front men. The bank currently has adequate capital—the cushion of cash to protect against losses—but has also suffered from real estate losses. Davis and other bank officials returned yesterday from Abu Dhabi, where they asked the bank's majority shareholders to invest more capital.

Independence, a small bank in the San Fernando Valley with $555 million in assets, $530 million in deposits and 14 branches, had a portfolio of so many bad real estate loans and such inadequate capital that it was doomed, sources said.

Fulvio Dobrich, chairman of Independence, said yesterday that in recent days he had contacted officials from the Justice Department, the Federal Deposit Insurance Corp., California banking authorities, the Federal Reserve Board and representatives for BCCI's liquidators to get funds to keep the bank open. He said they had not responded.

"The plea agreement clearly states there are funds available to recapitalize Independence and First American," Dobrich said.

The plea agreement says that the fund can be used to recapitalize the banks or to reimburse the bank insurance fund for any losses it incurs from the sale or closing of the institutions.

"The institution isn't the victim of the crime," said Ira Raphaelson, the Justice Department's special counsel for financial institution fraud. "The regulators who were lied to . . . sustained the loss. The fund is to make sure the depositors and taxpayers don't take a loss."

Deposits at Independence, like all federally insured institutions, are protected up to $100,000 per account by the FDIC, but the FDIC said late yesterday that it would fully protect depositors whose accounts exceed that amount. Because of the plea agreement, the bank insurance fund will be reimbursed by the BCCI fund.

All deposits of Independence will be transferred to First Interstate Bank of California in Los Angeles, which will act as the paying agent for depositors of Independence.

Independence already had received emergency cash to keep operating. In December, BCCI's liquidators provided the bank with $5 million to keep it open through December. But bank examiners this week found that the bank needed additional millions for its reserve for loan losses, sources said.

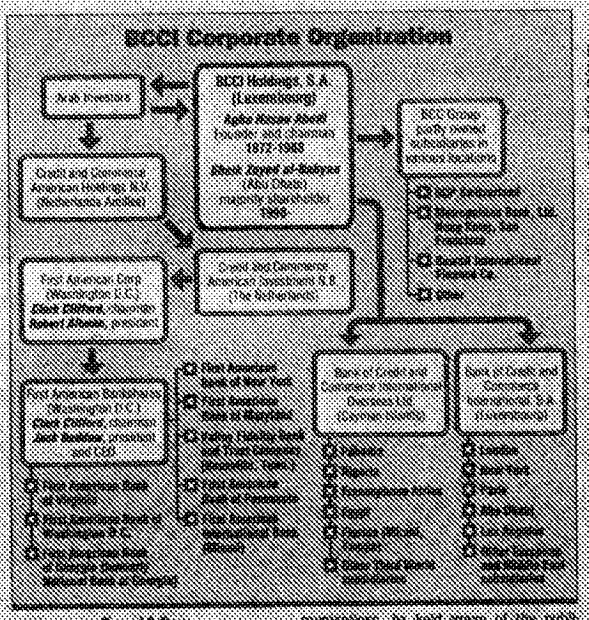
BCCI Scorecard: The Players

By James Rice Anson

Scandal rolls about the Bank of Credit and Commerce International, one of the largest and certainly the strangest privately owned banks in the world. Pakistanis run it; Arab oil sheiks own it; the Duchy of Luxembourg charters it; and until recently it made its home in London. In early 1989, it pleaded guilty to drug money laundering after a long U.S. government sting and a spectacular takedown disguised as a bachelor party for the lead undercover Customs Agent. Then it turned out the bank had been cultivating Washington influence for years, with one of the capital's best known insiders on its payroll.

Now it seems that for nearly a decade, BCCI may have secretly, and illegally, controlled First American Bankshares, the largest bank holding company headquartered in Washington, D.C. The chain, with similarly named subsidiaries in the D.C. region, New York, Georgia and Florida, is held by First American Corp., run by Clark Clifford and Robert Altman. Mr. Clifford helped a group of Arab investors acquire the chain in 1982, after a fourway hostile takeover. As acquisition vehicles, the investors used shell corporations called Credit and Commerce American Holdings, N.V., and Credit and Commerce American Investments, BV. Recent revelations that those shells were purchased with funds from BCCI and then taken as collateral for the loans has fed suspicions that it was BCCI, not the whole transaction was a front to enable BCCI to control a chain of American banks.

Investigations are continuing, but the story may be hard for the newspaper reader to follow. The bank spreads in a confusing global structure. Fraudulent memos spill out in profusion, many familiar and many foreign. The following figures have become involved, whether as goats, dupes or heroes. We offer the list as a guide to the unfolding scandal. As they say, you can't tell the players without a program.



Agha Hasan Abedi

Pakistani banker and visionary. Founded BCCI with Arab backing in 1972, after the Bhutto regime nationalized private banking in Pakistan. An inspiring leader, he attracted a generation of Pakistani bankers disaffected with nationalization. A semi-invalid since a heart transplant in early 1988, he lost control of BCCI in 1990.

Sheikh Zayed al-Nahyan

Illiterate ruler of Abu Dhabi, one of the United Arab Emirates. Very close to Abedi even before the founding of BCCI. Receives up to a billion dollars a month in oil revenues as personal income, most of it handled by BCCI. Recapitalized BCCI in 1990 and now controls an estimate 56% of the stock in BCCI Holdings.

Sheikh Zayed

Clark M. Clifford

Washington lawyer and fixer. Confidant of presidents since 1945. Senior partner at Clifford and Warnke, the ultimate insiders' law firm. Hired in 1978 by Arab investors trying to take over First American Bankshares previous incarnation, the Financial General Bankshares chain. In 1982, he was asked by Kamal Adham to become chairman of First American Bankshares.

Kamal Adham

Saudi investor in BCCI and First American Bankshares. Half-brother of Hind, ex-wife of the late King Faisal of Saudi Arabia and the most influential woman in the Kingdom. As head of Saudi intelligence, he was the late King Faisal's most trusted foreign policy adviser. In a 1978 report on the Boesky "questionable payments" scandal, The Wall Street Journal said that he was paid "many millions of dollars in commissions" by Boesky to persuade the Egyptian government to buy its planes.

Robert Altman

Law partner and protege of Clark Clifford. Handled legal work for BCCI, including defense of BCCI officers at their 1990 Tampa money laundering trial. Married to Linda Carter of TV's "Wonder Woman" series.

Jimmy Carter

The former president. Friend of Agha Hasan Abedi, who contributed heavily to his favorite service organizations.

T. Bertram Lance

Georgia banker and political adviser to Jimmy Carter. Federal budget director until forced to resign in 1977 amid investigation of his banking practices. In 1978, he was paid by BCCI to guide a group of Arab investors that tried to take over Financial General Bankshares in Washington, D.C. Later sold his National Bank of Georgia in Atlanta to Ghaith Pharaon, at one time a major figure in BCCI.

Ghaith Pharaon

Son of Rashad Pharaon, Syrian-born physician and adviser to Ibn Saud, the king who founded Saudi Arabia. Prominent investor and broker with global interests. Bought National Bank of Georgia from Bert Lance in 1978, and sold it to First American Bankshares in 1987. Also bought Independence Bank in Encino, Calif. Now under investigation as a suspected "front man" for BCCI.

Ghaith Pharaon

John F. Kerry

Junior Democratic senator from Massachusetts. As chairman of the Senate Foreign Relations Subcommittee on Terrorism, Narcotics and International Communications, he held many of the publicized hearings on the Nicaraguan contras, Panama's Manuel Noriega and the Iran-Contra affair, which led his staff to begin investigating BCCI in 1988. At the same time, Kerry became chairman of the Democratic Senatorial Campaign Committee, which received large contributions from BCCI insiders, including Clark Clifford. The BCCI investigation lapsed until last March, when Kerry held a day of hearings under the aegis of the Senate Banking Committee.

David Paul

Miami based chairman of Cropfield Barings, 50% owned by Barings, now possibly the largest of the S&L failures. BCCI is accused of parking a large loan to help keep Cropfield afloat. Ghaith Pharaon was the largest outside shareholder in Cropfield. Paul contributed $10,000 to the DSCC and became its co-chairman while Kerry's subcommittee staff was investigating BCCI.

Jack Blum

Washington lawyer and investigator. Senior staff counsel at Senate investigations, hired by Sen. Kerry's Foreign Relations subcommittee to run the contra-Noriega money laundering hearings. Prepared for public hearings on BCCI in 1988, but Clark Clifford pulled strings with Senate Foreign Relations chairman Claiborne Pell to stall production of crucial documents past the expiration date of Blum's contract with the subcommittee. The hearings were never held.

Robert W. Morgenthau

Manhattan District Attorney. Son of 1930's secretary of the Treasury. U.S. Attorney for Southern District of New York until 1978. First elected district attorney, a county position, in 1974. Opened his own investigation of BCCI and its New York operations in 1989 after a former Kerry staff member told him the federal government was stymied. As a Senate hearing in May, complained about lack of access to federal informants.

Charles McC. Mathias Jr.

Former Republican senator from Maryland. Washington lawyer and one of two outside directors on the six man board of First American Bankshares. Files the seat once held by the late Stuart Symington, former Democratic senator from Missouri.

Charles B. Shuman

Former president and chief executive officer of Kuwait Enterprises, Kuwait. The other outside director of First American Bankshares.

Jamal Khan

Pakistani associate of BCCI money laundering trial in Tampa. Found guilty of perjury and now serving a 30 year sentence. One of Abedi's longest associates. Left Bank of Credit and Commerce International (Overseas) Ltd. (Cayman Islands) to assist Abedi in founding BCCI. Reportedly handled real estate for Pakistan's immigrant Muhajir Koreshi, Zayed's President Alan Ladaki and others.

Manuel Noriega

Panama's dictator of Panama, deposed by U.S. military operation in 1989. Received cash in Miami Beach hotel on drug smuggling charges. Kept secret account in BCCI for payments to military colleagues. Pleads innocent to charges.

Nora Gorrin

Latina president of Paris from 1981 to 1986. During the term, he played hardball at millions of dollars of Paris's central bank reserves with BCCI in Panama, in shady deals that Paris's auditors in Washington at Paris's behalest. A few months before this arrangement, and in connection with other BCCI accounts, property held by members of the Gorrin family.

Carlos Menem

President of Argentina. Responsible for scandal over alleged money laundering by his former brother-in-law, the Yoma family. Also under attack for alleged favoritism to BCCI shareholder Ghaith Pharaon who is acting for Argentine diplomats.

Shareholders in First American Bankshares

These are some of the figures who contributed to or solicited investors during the Senate Committee on Financial Control Commission in 1978. No investigation was ever taken against them to find were not, but as interest and whether they were in indicted and convicted by BCCI.

Faisal Saud al-Faisal

Chairman of state owned Kuwait Airways from 1961 to 1977. Indicted by Federal Trade Commission in 1978 for an overbilling of $46,000 in airline tours. Pleaded guilty and was fined $5,000. Chairman of Kuwait International Finance Company, a BCCI affiliate which, according to Kerry staff's Washington business manager, gave $20 in unexplained fees of $1.2 million to buy First American stock.

Khalid Bin Mahfouz

Saudi scion of banking and Mahfouz, founder of Saudi Arabian al Commercial Bank, the Kingdom's largest private bank and one of the world's top 1,000 banks. Mahfouz family purchased owned 20% of BCCI and Khalid sat on the board of directors of BCCI (Overseas) Ltd. In 1986, the family sold its shares to Sheikh Zayed.

Abdulaziz Kamhawi

Until 1985, head of Abu Dhabi's Private Department, which handled Sheik Zayed's personal investments. Fired that year and joined BCCI. Mr. Adams is writing a book about BCCI.

Elderly Are Loath to Sell the Family Homestead

As families grow older, they often find that their wealth consists mainly of their house. Some of the elderly find this a single problem: They sell the house and move into an apartment or otherwise cut down their investment in housing. They wind up with money that they can invest in the market or simply the cash to enjoy their lives.

But there are problems. Many people have grown accustomed to their houses, their friends, their old neighborhoods. They don't want to move.

[illegible] circumstances, there would be little change in housing wealth on average," they write.

That conclusion is based on data from the Retirement History Survey, a venture organized by the Social Security Administration and conducted by the Bureau of the Census. The survey covered families headed by people between the ages of 58 and 63 in 1969. The families were interviewed every two years between 1969 and 1978. Then the survey was dropped, apparently partly because of concerns about privacy, concerns that hadn't been so common in 1969.

of home in many areas. And even if the exemption is adequate, the homeowner must remember that this is a one-time affair. If the move turns out to be a mistake, the next time there will be no exemption.

There are other reasons why most elderly homeowners have no interest in withdrawing the equity in their homes, either by getting a reverse mortgage or by selling the house.

The Yeah-Wise study notes that most of the elderly simply have no great need for liquidity. Their incomes generally are

Fed Seeks to Bar BCCI Leaders And Pharaon

By Peter Truell
Staff Reporter of The Wall Street Journal

WASHINGTON—The Federal Reserve sought to bar from U.S. banking three former top officers of BCCI Holdings (Luxembourg) S.A. and Saudi Arabian investor Ghaith Pharaon for BCCI's alleged illegal acquisition of Independence Bank of Encino, Calif.

The Fed, which has referred the matter to the U.S. Justice Department for possible criminal prosecution, said it has deferred assessing any civil penalties against BCCI, which was seized by regulators in several countries on July 5, and the individuals involved pending completing of the Justice Department inquiry. The Fed plans to hold a hearing in September before determining any enforcement action.

Meanwhile, government and congressional investigators are starting to focus on BCCI's links to the Central Intelligence Agency and also to the Iran-Contra affair. It has been clear for months that the CIA maintained accounts at the bank, which were used to finance covert activity.

In 1984, using Mr. Pharaon as a front man, BCCI's officers illegally acquired Independence Bank for about $23 million, according to the Fed. "Secret arrangements" were made by senior officials of BCCI to have Mr. Pharaon acquire Independence Bank on behalf of BCCI, the Fed alleged, and "to conceal the transaction from the Federal Deposit Insurance Corp., the Federal Reserve and state regulators in violation of the Bank Holding Company Act and other laws."

The three former BCCI officers concerned are Agha Hasan Abedi, the bank's founder and chairman; his protege Swaleh Naqvi, chief executive; and Kemal Shoaib, a senior officer who became chairman of Independence.

The Fed charged that BCCI, acting through one of its Cayman Islands units, International Credit & Investment Co. (Overseas), agreed under contract with Mr. Pharaon that he would hold 85% of the stock of Independence as a fiduciary for ICIC. In addition, the Fed charged that Mr. Pharaon made false statements in regard to his dealings representing himself as the true buyer of Independence.

Mr. Pharaon, who has homes in the U.S., France, Saudi Arabia and Pakistan, has recently declined to return telephone messages. His New York attorney Richard Lawler said in a telephone interview Thursday that Mr. Pharaon has done nothing wrong, but he declined to comment further. Mr. Lawler didn't return a telephone call made after the Fed released details of its planned enforcement action late Friday.

The other three men couldn't be reached for comment. Mr. Abedi, who retired from the bank after suffering heart trouble in 1988, is in Pakistan; Mr. Naqvi is in Abu Dhabi, and Mr. Shoaib is in London, according to former colleagues. A lawyer at Patton, Boggs & Blow, the Washington law firm that has recently represented BCCI, declined on Friday to comment to questions concerning BCCI, instead referring calls to the bank's receiver in the Cayman Islands. The receiver, however, said he couldn't comment until he had reviewed all the relevant paperwork.

Independence Bank's chief executive Fulvio Dobrich said yesterday that since his arrival at the bank more than a year ago, neither he nor the directors "have received any directives from either Mr. Pharaon or BCCI." He added that media coverage linking the bank through Mr. Pharaon to BCCI "has done very considerable damage to Independence." He said the attention has caused "loss of customers, inability to attract prospective customers, loss of funding and trading facilities, and loss of employees." He also said that it has scared away potential investors from the bank.

BCCI, a $20 billion private bank that was seized by regulators in Britain, the U.S. and five other nations on July 5, has come under increasing scrutiny in recent years. The Bank of England, which orchestrated the international seizure of BCCI, cited "widespread fraud going back many years," as the reason for closing the bank's British operations.

BCCI, which also covertly held a stake in the parent of First American Bankshares Inc., Washington's largest bank-holding company, has come under increasing scrutiny in recent years for a growing number of alleged illegal acts, including money-laundering, violating various banking and foreign-exchange regulations, and involvement with arms and drug smugglers.

Meanwhile, investigators are focusing on BCCI's links with intelligence agencies and the Iran-Contra affair. A Senate investigation of BCCI led by Sen. John Kerry (D., Mass.) will hold hearings later this month to look into the bank's ties to intelligence agencies, as well as the bank's considerable relationships with the central banks of many developing nations, especially in Africa and Latin America.

In recent years, it has been alleged that the CIA and other intelligence agencies used BCCI to make secret payments and that the bank had a role in helping to hide covert shipments of weapons to Iran.

Some circumstances have attracted the interest of investigators. For example, Rahim Irvani, an Iranian associate of BCCI who fled his country after the 1979 Iranian revolution, apparently set up a consultancy with former CIA Director Richard Helms in Washington in 1980, Senate investigators contend. Mr. Irvani couldn't be reached for comment yesterday.

Separately, Senate investigators are intrigued that Tampa District Attorney Robert Genzman, who negotiated BCCI's guilty plea to money-laundering charges in January 1990, had previously served as associate minority counsel on the House Select Committee to investigate covert arms transactions with Iran. Mr. Genzman couldn't be reached for comment over the weekend.

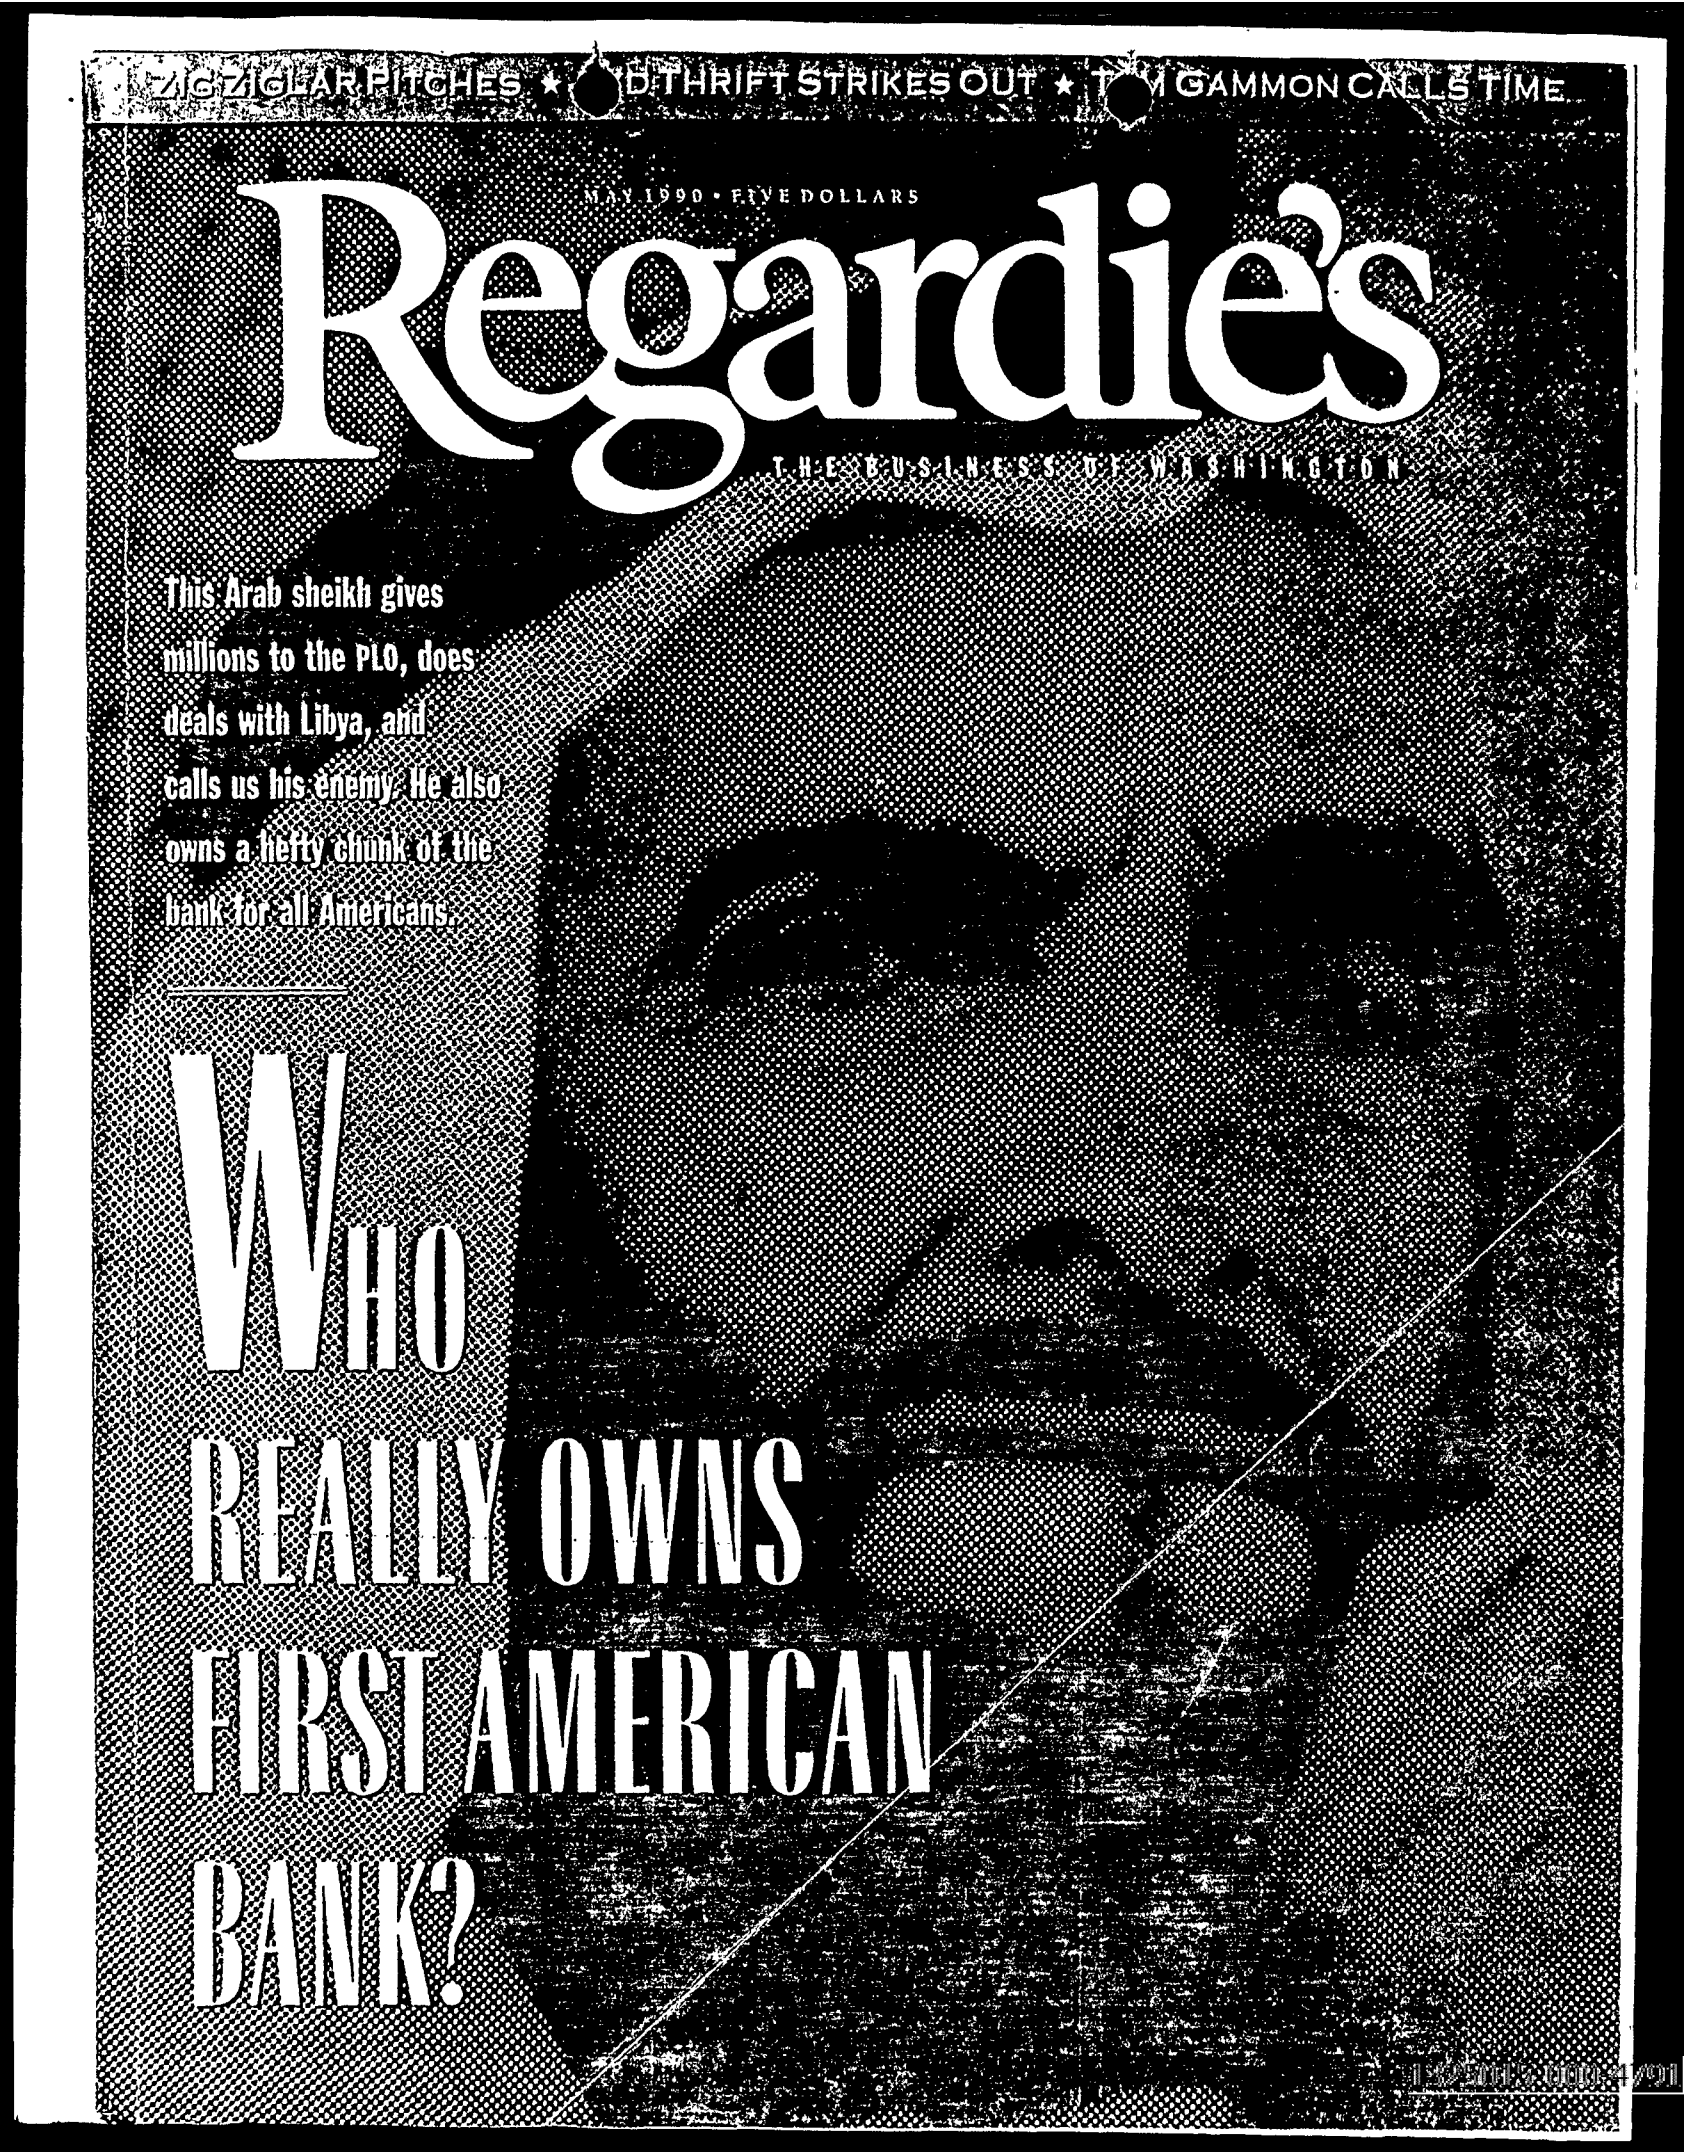
THE BUSINESS OF WASHINGTON



This Arab sheikh gives millions to the PLO, does deals with Libya, and calls us his enemy. He also owns a hefty chunk of the bank for all Americans.

WHO REALLY OWNS FIRST AMERICAN BANK?

relate his family's version of the American immigrant saga. He describes how an ancestor came to this country imbued with the dreams of most immigrants: a better life, religious or political freedom. The final image is a group shot of the immigrant's descendants. The speaker then identifies his family—the Rogers family of Fairfax, for example, or the Portner family of Silver Spring. Other versions of the commercial have featured such notable Washingtonians as columnist Robert Novak and restaurateur Duke Zeibert. The commercials—a skillful blend of patriotism, nostalgia, and family values—end with a voice-over: "Nearly every family can trace its heritage to one bold first American. We salute the spirit of the first Americans who made this country their own. We're First American—the bank for all Americans."

It's one of the most emotional series of television commercials ever done for a bank—and an indication of the lengths to which First American Bank has gone to capitalize on the patriotic connotations of its name. Its logo, for example, incorporates the Stars and Stripes. In another television spot, the voice-over promotes the bank's "All-American CD" and "All-American Money Market Account" as a fife-and-drum corps pipes up in the background. A few years ago the bank's ads featured the ubiquitous Willard Scott clowning in the guise of such great Americans as George Washington.

Playing sentimental overtures to the American dream is a chestnut of the ad business, but in First American's case the imagery belies at best a certain insecurity and at worst a pattern of deception. The reason: First American Bankshares, the bank's holding company, is 100 percent foreign-owned.

With $11.5 billion in assets, First American Bankshares is the largest bank holding company in the Washington area—about 50 percent larger than second-place Riggs National Corporation. Yet of all the banking giants in the region, First American remains the most mysterious. A group of foreign investors acquired the company in 1982 after one of the longest, costliest, and most acrimonious takeover battles in U.S. history. The board of directors immediately jettisoned the holding company's name,

AND THE OWNERS ARE...

Sheikh Zayed bin Sultan al-Nahayan and family; Abu Dhabi Investment Authority. Zayed, the absolute ruler of oil-rich Abu Dhabi and the president of the United Arab Emirates, owns 11.76 percent of First American Bankshares. He was the first Arab leader to use oil as a political weapon during the 1973 Arab-Israeli war, has channeled millions of dollars to the PLO, and recently branded the United States "our number-two enemy" (after Israel). Zayed's eldest son and heir apparent, Crown Prince Khalifa, owns from 5 to 10 percent of First American; the Abu Dhabi Investment Authority, which Zayed's family controls, owns another 5 to 10 percent. Zayed and six relatives own 25.23 percent of BCCI; ADIA owns 10.42 percent. The family's estimated net worth in 1989: $1.5 billion.

Kamal Adham; Adham Corporation. Adham, a hugely wealthy and powerful Saudi Arabian businessman, has been described as "the godfather of Middle Eastern intelligence." As the late King Faisal's right-hand man, he was in charge of the country's intelligence and security services at a time when the royal family was ruthlessly suppressing political opposition. Over the years the ultrasecretive Adham also parlayed his political connections into huge "commissions" as an agent for such major corporations as Boeing and Lockheed. Financial General Bankshares, and replaced it with First American, a name that had been used by some of its subsidiary banks.

Since then First American has gone to extraordinary lengths to conceal the names and backgrounds of its foreign owners. Its lawyers persuaded the Federal Reserve Board to withhold from the public all documents that listed the company's shareholders—a seven-year veil of secrecy that was lifted only when Regardie's convinced the Fed that it should reverse its policy. And when the company was sued by some former shareholders of its Virginia subsidiary, its lawyers asked that the jury not be told the names or nationalities of the company's owners—or even that the company was foreign-owned.

After an in-depth investigation, Regardie's has learned that First American may have good reason to mask its foreign connections. Some of its major shareholders have backgrounds that could alienate or anger some of its customers and employees as well as invite renewed scrutiny by federal and state authorities.

Kamal Adham, First American's biggest shareholder, was the chief of Saudi Arabia's intelligence agency for more than a decade. During his tenure, political opponents of the ruling al-Saud family were tortured or killed, according to human rights organizations. As the head of the secret police, he played a key role in suppressing opposition to the regime. He was also a close adviser to the royal palace and a high-ranking government official at a time when Saudi Arabia had become the largest contributor to the Palestine Liberation Organization. Adham juggled his government service with a career as a businessman, from which he earned hundreds of millions of dollars. Much of his work has consisted of collecting "commissions" from defense contractors and other foreign companies that had done business in the Middle East.

Sheikh Zayed bin Sultan al-Nahayan, the ruler of Abu Dhabi and the president of the United Arab Emirates, is another leading shareholder of First American Bankshares. When Arab oil-producing nations cut off oil to the United States in 1973 (because of American support for Israel), Abu Dhabi was the first country to declare an embargo. Zayed is a major contributor to the PLO and a business partner of Libyan leader Moammar Qaddafi.

Faisal Saud al-Fulaij, a Kuwaiti businessman and another prominent shareholder, allegedly lined his pockets by taking bribes from Boeing Company when he was the chairman of Kuwait Airways. The Federal Trade Commission alleged that he accepted at least $300,000 in payoffs from Boeing. Fulaij has denied the allegation.

What's more, the investors who own First American Bankshares also own a controlling interest in Bank of Credit and Commerce International, a Luxembourg bank that has numbered among its clients former Panamanian dictator Manuel Antonio Noriega, who's awaiting trial in Florida on federal drug charges. In January of this year BCCI pleaded guilty in Florida to federal criminal charges that it had laundered drug money. Five BCCI officers are on trial on similar charges.

Both First American and BCCI say that there's absolutely no connection between the two institutions other than some overlapping shareholders. Robert Altman, the top executive of First American and a lawyer for BCCI, told the Washington Post in October 1988 that "the overlap is not as great as you might think."

Regardie's has determined, however, that the ties between First American and BCCI are much closer than either institution would have the public and bank regulators believe. Here are just a few of the links:

- BCCI used First American's Washington bank to transfer at least $500,000 worth of Noriega's funds from 1985 to 1987, according to government sources.
- Agha Hasan Abedi, BCCI's founder and president, orchestrated the takeover of First American.
- Shortly after the takeover bid was launched, Abedi told a reporter that if the bid succeeded BCCI would probably run First American.
- First American's shareholders include borrowers from BCCI, personal friends of Abedi's, a director of BCCI, and a longtime executive of the BCCI group.
- Government investigators disclosed in 1988 that a senior BCCI official had told an undercover agent that BCCI owns and controls First American.
- First American's shareholders and their families control more than two-thirds of BCCI's outstanding shares.
- Moreover, the two men who claim to run First American—Clark Clifford, the éminence grise of Washington's power brokers, and Robert Altman, his protégé at the law firm Clifford & Warnke—have represented BCCI for 12 years. When a U.S. Senate subcommittee investigated the BCCI-Noriega connection in 1988, Altman handled the negotiations with the committee. Clifford, then the chairman of First American Bankshares, and Altman, then the president of First American Corporation, also assisted BCCI in the drug-money case.

The relationship between the two banks is so close, some sources within BCCI say, that many employees regard the U.S. institution as an affiliate—a member of "the BCCI group." A few go so far as to say that First American may be secretly—and illegally—controlled by BCCI, with the Middle Eastern shareholders acting as front men. Regardie's, however, has found no evidence that this is the case.

In an effort to determine exactly who owns Washington's biggest bank holding company, Regardie's conducted dozens of interviews, reviewed court documents from some of the takeover-related litigation, and examined documents obtained from the Federal Reserve Board through the Freedom of Information Act. When it approved the acquisition nine years ago, the Fed wasn't fully aware of the controversial backgrounds of the foreign investors and the extent of their relationships with BCCI. It approved the deal based on assertions by Clifford and Altman that the leading investors were well-known businessmen with impeccable credentials. ▸

In the mid 1980s Amjad Awan, who was Manuel Noriega's personal banker at BCCI, worked around the corner from First American's Washington headquarters. According to information obtained by government investigators, Awan managed the transfer of millions of dollars for Noriega through BCCI's global network, through several Swiss banks, and through First American Bank in Washington.

Regardie's has learned that at least $500,000 was transferred from several of Noriega's BCCI accounts into a BCCI account at First American. Additional amounts totaling more than $250,000 were wired simply to "BCCI Washington." In some cases, investigators say, Noriega himself signed letters that ordered the transfers to First American.

Awan later told a federal undercover agent that he considered First American to be under the control of BCCI.

In a statement to Regardie's, First American said that it "has never had any banking relationship of any kind with Manuel Noriega, nor has it ever knowingly handled any funds of Manuel Noriega." BCCI declined comment.

ness. Arthur Morris, its founder, began his banking career around the turn of the century by making small installment loans to working people—a practice virtually unknown at the time. In 1910 he founded the first "Morris Plan" bank: Fidelity Loan & Trust Company of Norfolk, Virginia. Within 10 years Morris Plan banks were operating in 37 states. In the 1940s and 1950s the company became a financial conglomerate, with interests in such areas as insurance and mortgage banking.

Financial General was an institution with special privileges, a holding company ahead of its time. Although federal banking law sharply restricted interstate banking, Financial General, thanks to a grandfather clause, enjoyed an immensely valuable exemption. By the mid 1970s it controlled banks in Georgia, Maryland, New York, Tennessee, Virginia, and the District of Columbia.

In January 1975 Financial General installed a dynamic Georgia banker as the president of its National Bank of Georgia. During the next few years he would buy control of NBG, leave the bank for one of the most powerful posts in the federal government, quit the government in the midst of a financial scandal, sell NBG to an Arab investor, and then join forces with Arab investors in a scheme to accumulate stock in the bank's former parent company.

The banker's name: T. Bertram Lance.

Bert Lance began his banking career in 1951 as a teller at Calhoun National Bank, a small rural bank that had been founded by his wife's grandfather. Seven years later he and a group of investors bought control of the bank, and he ultimately became its chairman.

Lance backed Jimmy Carter in his 1970 campaign for governor and was later put in charge of reorganizing the state's government. In 1975, shortly after Carter had left the statehouse, Lance and a group of investors bought control of National Bank of Georgia from Financial General Bankshares.

Lance never fit the image of the conservative banker. His lending policies were very liberal—particularly, it was later alleged, when the borrowers were his friends and relatives. Lance's bank was the biggest single lender to Jimmy Carter's peanut warehouse, which once owed NBG $4.7 million. Moreover, he apparently found it difficult to draw a clear line between his personal financial affairs and the affairs of the bank. For example, he financed his purchase of NBG's stock with loans from two big New York banks and then arranged for NBG to open correspondent banking accounts with them. ▸

WHAT THE BANK SAYS

In response to questions from Regardie's, First American officials say that they will not comment on the names or backgrounds of the bank's owners, contending that it is not "a legitimate area of inquiry."

In one of several letters to the magazine, John W. Vardaman, Jr., an attorney with Williams & Connolly, said, "During the acquisition proceedings for First American, the various bank regulatory authorities, including the Federal Reserve, carefully examined the reputation, character and resources of the investors. . . . Similar allegations to the type you have referenced—i.e., the alleged receipt of questionable payments or support for certain groups and their activities—were considered. The banking agencies found the shareholders to be substantial, reputable persons of good character and standing."

Robert Altman, the chairman of the bank's holding company, said in an interview, "We're not in possession of facts about what their other operations are. We don't know what their political philosophies are, what their personal dealings are."

Regarding First American's relationship with BCCI, bank officials adamantly deny that they are either owned or controlled by the European bank. "This allegation is absolutely false and would, if disseminated, cause serious injury to First American," Vardaman said.

"Practically no business is done" between the two banks, he said.

First American officials wouldn't comment specifically about the common shareholders of the two institutions, except to say that the First American shareholders are "passive" and "are not active in the management of the bank."

A spokesman for BCCI also said that there's no connection with First American. "Certain of the shareholders that own First American have minority stock interests in BCCI," the statement read. "The larger shareholders of First American have relatively small interests in BCCI. The two organizations have different controlling groups of shareholders."

HOW THE BANK DOES

If First American's ownership is controversial, its management seems to be anything but. On the contrary, the bank appears to be a sober, not particularly well-performing institution that's caused little notice in the Washington banking community, other than the past year's shake-up of the bank's top managers.

Clark Clifford, the chairman of First American Bankshares, the bank's holding company, recently stepped down. He was replaced by Robert Altman, who'd been the president of First American Corporation. Jack Beddow, a longtime employee of the bank, has taken over as the president and chief operating officer. He replaced Robert Stevens, who was brought in at the time of the takeover.

Fred Bollerer, the former president of Houston's troubled First City National Bank, was brought in last year to head First American Metro Corporation, the subsidiary that runs the DC, Maryland, and Virginia banks. He replaced Milton Drewer, the bank's best-known executive in the local business community, who retired.

One reason for the changes may be the bank's lackluster performance. In Business Week magazine's recent scoreboard, First American was tied for last place with Riggs National Corporation among the area's eight largest banks. First American's return on assets, a key industry standard, was .61 percent, compared to First Virginia Banks's 1.39 percent and Sovran Financial's 1.14 percent. In 1989 the bank earned $61 million for its shareholders, down 11 percent from the previous year.

At the same time, regulators seem to be content with the way First American is run. "The bank is sound and well capitalized; it has no major problems," said Sidney Bailey, Virginia's commissioner of financial institutions, about the Virginia subsidiary. "We have had no criticism of the management and no evidence of interference or attempt to influence the policy of the bank by the Middle Eastern investors."

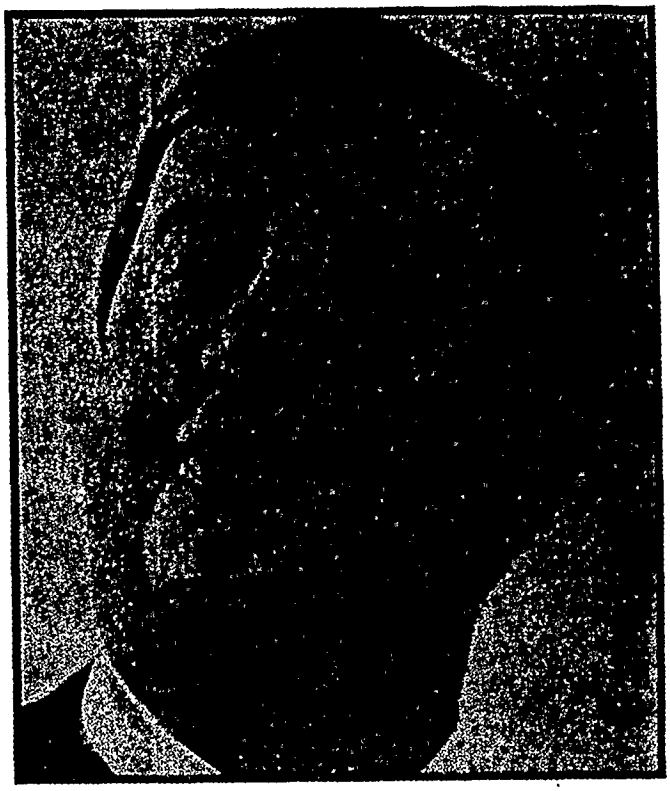
FIRST AMERICAN

When Carter was elected president in 1976, thanks in part to Lance's support, he appointed Lance to be the director of the Office of Management and Budget. But Lance's loose banking practices soon caught up with him and triggered the first scandal of the Carter administration. He was gone by August 1977.

After years of litigation, the Lancegate affair finally concluded in February 1986. In a settlement with the Comptroller of the Currency, Lance agreed to pay a $50,000 civil fine to the U.S. Treasury. He was also barred from serving as an employee, officer, or director—or otherwise participating in the affairs—of any federally insured bank without the written permission of the appropriate banking agencies. (The story ended on a farcical note: Lance, according to columnist Jack Anderson, paid the $50,000 fine with a rubber check. The hapless Georgia banker eventually paid the fine.)

At the time of his resignation, Lance was in desperate financial straits. He was more than $5 million in debt, and his most valuable asset—his stock in National Bank of Georgia—had plummeted in value. His only hope was to sell the stock at well above the market price. Hope soon arrived in the person of Agha Hasan Abedi, the president of Bank of Credit and Commercial International.



BERT LANCE was President Jimmy Carter's banker and best friend, but by 1977 he was out of the White House and flat broke. Agha Hasan Abedi of BCCI rescued him from his financial plight, hired him as a consultant, and then triggered a hostile and protracted battle for control of First American Bankshares.

IT'S HARD TO IMAGINE A MORE UNLIKELY pair of bankers than Bert Lance and Agha Hasan Abedi.

Abedi was born 67 years ago in Lucknow, India and moved to Pakistan when the country was founded in 1947. He embarked on a career in banking, and in 1959 he cofounded United Bank Limited, which soon became one of the largest banks in Pakistan.

But Abedi was always more than a simple banker. He had an understanding of politics and a knack for making friends in high places. In the 1960s, long before the oil shock created overnight millionaires and billionaires, he courted Arab officials, notably Sheikh Zayed, the ruler of Abu Dhabi, and Sheikh Rashid bin Said al-Maktoum, the ruler of Dubai. (In 1971 Abu Dhabi and Dubai created a federation with five other sheikhdoms called the United Arab Emirates, with Zayed as its president and Rashid as its prime minister.)

Abedi's Arab connections proved to be invaluable when the Pakistani government nationalized the banking industry in 1972. Abedi moved to Europe and founded BCCI, signing up Zayed, Rashid, and other prominent Arabs as shareholders. Armed with this list of VIPs, he managed to persuade Bank of America, the world's largest bank, to buy a large stake as well, which gave BCCI instant credibility.

Today BCCI's main office is in London, but its legal headquarters is Luxembourg. Abedi has run BCCI from the start, and his management team is made up largely of Pakistani bankers. In recent years, however, he's suffered from serious health problems: he had a heart transplant operation in March 1988. His longtime deputy, a fellow Pakistani named Swaleh Naqvi, is now BCCI's chief executive.

Although Abedi's bank started with only $2.5 million in capital, it has grown to be the world's fifth-largest privately held bank. During the late 1970s it was the fastest-growing bank in Britain and was touting itself as the fastest-growing bank in the world. Its total assets soared from $200 million in 1973 to $2.2 billion in 1977. During the same period its network of offices grew from 19 branches in five countries to 146 branches in 32 countries. By the end of 1988 it had more than $20 billion in assets, some 14,000 employees, and 417 offices in 73 countries.

Abedi, according to BCCI insiders, was obsessed with growth. As one source puts it: "Their objective—and they said so openly—was to become the largest bank in the world by the year 2000." With the zeal of an evangelist seeking souls, Abedi exhorted his employees to bring in deposits. He also established a vast international network, with branches and subsidiaries across the globe—even in poverty-stricken African countries that were ignored by other banks.

No banker with Abedi's ambitions, however, could ignore the world's largest economy: the United States'. While BCCI could open branches in the United States, a major acquisition would offer the quickest route to growth.

Lance and Abedi are believed to have met in October 1977 in a Washington hotel. Lance wanted to sell some of his stock in the National Bank of Georgia, and Abedi was a potential buyer.

It would have been illegal, however, for BCCI to buy the stock. Because Bank of America was a large shareholder in BCCI (it pulled out in 1980), such a deal would have violated the ban on interstate banking. But even with Bank of America out of the picture, BCCI was going to be a hard sell to U.S. regulators. Whenever a bank piles on assets very quickly, regulators wonder whether it's being prudently managed. Another cause for concern was that BCCI is incorporated in Luxembourg, which isn't noted for tough banking regulation. Luxembourg also lacks a central bank, which means that no institution is responsible for acting as a lender of last resort if BCCI suffers liquidity problems.

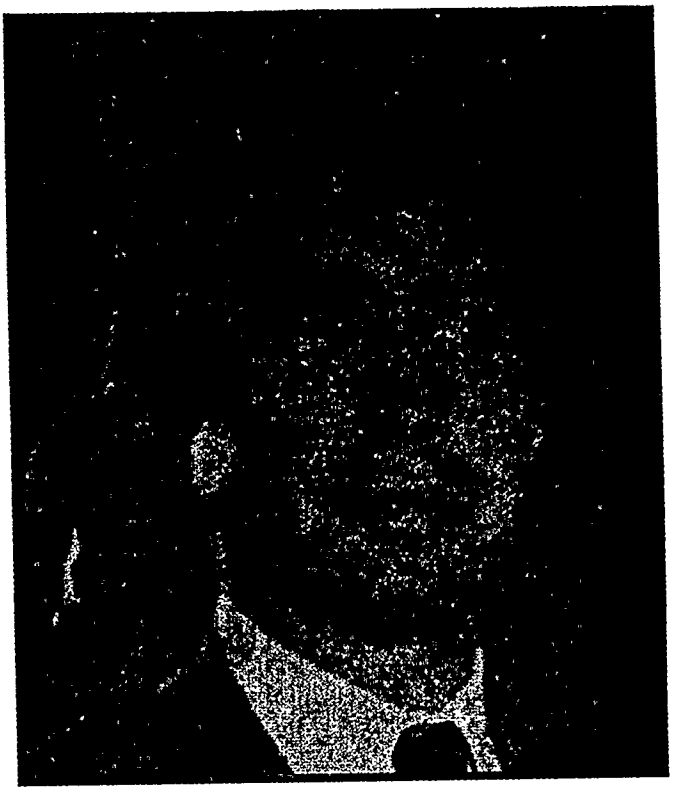
When Abedi and his Middle Eastern clients were charged with violating U.S. securities laws in connection with their stock purchases, they hired Lance's supremely well-connected lawyer, CLARK CLIFFORD. After he got Abedi and the Arab investors out of legal trouble, guess who wound up as the chairman of First American?



First American's Arab owners now rely on ROBERT ALTMAN, Clifford's protégé, as their man in Washington. Altman runs the show, tries to keep their names out of the news, and works on the side as a lawyer for BCCI. Four months ago BCCI pleaded guilty to criminal charges that it had laundered drug money.

The Bank of England later sent clear signals that it regarded BCCI as something less than a blue-chip institution. In 1978 it forbade BCCI from opening any new branches in the United Kingdom.

Although BCCI itself couldn't buy Lance's bank stock, one of its clients could, and Abedi quickly found one. In late 1977 Ghaith Pharaon, a Saudi businessman, agreed to buy 60 percent of Lance's stock at $20 a share. A few weeks earlier the stock had been trading for about $10 a share. Pharaon later acquired 100 percent of NBG.

Lance and Pharaon portrayed the deal as a routine investment, but skeptics abounded. Of the roughly 15,000 banks in the United States, it seemed odd that Pharaon happened to choose a bank that was owned by a close friend, political supporter, and lender to President Carter—and that he would pay top dollar for it. Pharaon, Business Week noted, seemed to be "bailing him out to curry favor with President Carter."

Abedi, it was later revealed, did more for Lance than arrange the NBG deal. He also hired him as a consultant and arranged to repay his biggest debt: about $3.5 million that he owed to the First National Bank of Chicago.

One of Lance's duties was to recommend investment prospects to Abedi. And this he did. During the discussions about NBG, Abedi learned that stock was available in a much larger institution: Financial General Bankshares, NBG's erstwhile parent. Some sources speculate that Lance wanted Abedi's help to gain control of Financial General, install himself as its president or chairman, and thus recover from the humiliation of the Lancegate affair. It didn't go unnoticed that FGB's headquarters on 15th Street was just around the corner from the White House.

BY EARLY 1977 A GROUP OF ABOUT 20 investors, led by J. William Middendorf II, a onetime investment banker who'd served as the secretary of the navy under presidents Nixon and Ford, had gained control of Financial General Bankshares. But Middendorf found rough seas in his first months as its chairman and president, and some dissident shareholders began to plot his ouster.

One of them was Jackson Stephens, the head of Stephens, Incorporated, a large securities firm based in Little Rock, Arkansas, who joined up with Lance. According to a complaint later filed by the Securities and Exchange Commission, they recommended to Abedi "that BCCI purchase or recommend FGB common stock to its clients."

At first Abedi wasn't interested, but he soon changed his mind. On December 1 he gave the green light. The shares were to be bought on behalf of BCCI clients.

Abedi's approval touched off a frantic buying spree carried out by Lance, Stephens, and Eugene Metzger, a Washington lawyer. They spent millions of dollars to collect blocks of FGB's stock in private purchases from large individual investors as well as on the open market. By early February 1978 they had purchased about 20 percent of Financial General on behalf of four BCCI clients.

On February 7 Lance met with FGB's top executives: B. Francis Saul II, who'd replaced Middendorf as the chairman the previous month, and Middendorf, who'd retained the title of president. What Lance said at the meeting is disputed. According to Middendorf and Saul, Lance said that he represented a group of investors related to BCCI who'd acquired 20 percent of FGB's stock and that BCCI wanted eventual control of the company.

"Lance said that he was acting as a representative of Abedi and BCCI," Saul later said in an affidavit. "Moreover, Lance stated that BCCI 'always wants control.' "

Two days after the meeting, Financial General announced that an unidentified foreign bank had bought a large block of FGB's stock "and may be seeking to obtain control of the company." When newspaper reports appeared the next day, however, Lance called Saul to say that there had been a misunderstanding. The buyers, Lance said, weren't acting as members of a group under the direction of BCCI but were merely acting as individual investors.

Abedi had orchestrated the buy-up of FGB's stock very smoothly—except for one detail. If the investors were acting as a group, they were in flagrant violation of U.S. securities laws. Any investor or investment group that buys 5 percent of the stock of a publicly held company is required to make a public disclosure by filing a 13-D form with the SEC. In what some viewed as a transparent attempt to evade the law, each of the four BCCI clients had bought slightly less than 5 percent of Financial General's stock.

The purchases triggered two lawsuits, one filed by Financial General on February 17, 1978, and the other filed by the SEC a month later. The defendants in the SEC complaint included BCCI, Abedi, Lance, Stephens, Metzger, and the four investors in whose names the stock had been acquired: Kamal Adham; Sheikh Sultan bin Zayed al-Nahayan, one of Sheikh Zayed's sons; Abdullah Darwaish of Abu Dhabi, a financial adviser who represented another of Zayed's sons; and Faisal Saud al-Fulaij.

The BCCI defendants found themselves in immediate need of legal help, and they chose the Washington lawyer whom Lance had retained when the Lancegate affair exploded: Clark Clifford.

LIKE MANY OTHER ASPECTS OF THE First American saga, the story behind Clifford's involvement is a matter of some dispute. In 1984 Robert Altman, Clifford's partner, told a reporter for the Washington Post that the relationship didn't come about via Bert Lance but stemmed from the firm's "international practice." In a recent interview with Regardie's, however, Altman said, "I think Mr. Lance recommended this firm."

Whatever the case, Abedi and the Arabs had chosen not only a top-flight lawyer but one with superb political connections.

Clifford, who's now 83 years old, came to national prominence during the presidency of Harry Truman. Although his title was counsel to the president, he was described

Former president Jimmy Carter has lobbied U.S. senators to sell arms to Saudi Arabia and has met with Yassir Arafat, the chairman of the PLO. Have his intimate ties to BCCI, a major Arab-owned bank, shaped his view of the world?

First American Bankshares and Bank of Credit and Commerce International are more than casual acquaintances; they're two banks with a close relationship. But why? What's in it for the Middle Eastern owners of First American? Is the bank simply an investment, or is it something more? Given that the BCCI clients who bought First American include current and former officials of Arab governments, the most obvious question becomes: Are there any political motives behind their investments in the U.S. banking industry?

So far there's no indication that First American has been used as a tool to acquire political influence. There are, however, some connections between the bank's owners and American politicians.

When BCCI helped to rescue Bert Lance from his financial plight, there was widespread speculation that the bank or its Arab owners were trying to get close to Jimmy Carter. Not surprisingly, Lance and his newfound friends claimed that they were involved in routine business dealings with absolutely no political strings attached.

Those denials ring hollow today. In the years since Carter's departure from the White House, Agha Hasan Abedi, who's BCCI's founder and president, and former president Carter have become close friends; Abedi has channeled large donations to the Carter Presidential Center and to Global 2000, Carter's pet project, of which Carter and Abedi are the co-chairmen. (BCCI is the organization's largest donor.) Global 2000's British office is located in BCCI's headquarters building in London.

Abedi and Carter have traveled to a number of countries on BCCI's corporate plane. When Abedi was hospitalized in 1988, Carter not only visas the most powerful figure on the White House staff. He later served as an adviser to presidents Kennedy, Johnson (whom he also served for a year as the secretary of defense), and Carter.

Clifford's political connections have led some observers to view him as a sort of high-class lobbyist/fixer. It's an image that he evidently regards as distasteful. "There is one point I wish to make clear," he once said. "This firm has no influence of any kind in Washington. If you want to employ someone who has influence, you will have to go somewhere else.... What we do have is a record of working with the various departments and agencies of the government, and we have their respect and confidence, and that we consider to be a valuable asset."

In representing the Middle Eastern investors, Clifford led a large team of lawyers that included takeover specialists from New York and Washington lawyers who had years of experience in dealing with bank regulators. His right-hand man was Altman, who'd just turned 31. The two men are so close that Altman has frequently been described as Clifford's "alter ego."

A consent agreement with the SEC was quickly negotiated. Without admitting or denying guilt, the defendants promised not to violate securities laws in the future. The Middle Eastern investors also agreed to make a tender offer of $15 a share to all of Financial General's shareholders.

The consent decree touched off one of the longest and most controversial corporate takeover battles in U.S. history. The management of Financial General Bankshares, led by Saul, fiercely resisted the takeover attempt. In addition to suing Lance and his Middle Eastern associates, it dug up plenty of dirt on BCCI, much of which found its way into the press. One of the most damaging disclosures was that BCCI had made more than $80 million in loans to "insiders"—companies and individuals that were connected to the bank. (Bank regulators have always frowned on insider lending.) Financial General's lawyers also unearthed a document from Bank of America that called BCCI's loan-loss reserves inadequate—a charge that BCCI disputed.

The two sides eventually signed an acquisition agreement in July 1980. But the deal still had to be approved by the Federal Reserve Board, which would make its decision after it heard the views of federal and state bank regulatory authorities.

WHEN A LARGE BANK HOLDING COMPANY is taken over, the new owner is usually an existing bank. In this case, however, Financial General was to be purchased by dummy companies that were owned by individual investors, none of whom was a banker. A further complication was that all the investors ited him but arranged for a renowned heart specialist, Norman Shumway of Stanford University, to fly to Britain to treat him.

Prominent Arabs have also provided support for Carter's projects, including King Fahd of Saudi Arabia (some of whose relatives are BCCI shareholders) and Adnan Khashoggi, the scandal-plagued arms dealer. Khashoggi is a former client of Clark Clifford's; a friend of First American's biggest shareholder, Kamal Adham; and a client of BCCI's. In connection with his dealing arms to Iran, Khashoggi transmitted $12 million through BCCI's Monte Carlo branch.

Carter doesn't seem to be the sort of man who'd become a mouthpiece for foreign governments, but even the most honorable man will listen sympathetically to the opinions of close friends. And in recent years Carter seems to have moved closer to the Arab point of view. In 1983, for example, he spoke movingly about the plight of Palestinians in the Israeli-occupied West Bank but said nothing about human rights abuses by Arab regimes. In 1986 he lobbied senators to sell arms to Saudi Arabia. And last year he sharply criticized Salman Rushdie for offending Moslems in The Satanic Verses.

Another U.S. politician who's popular in the Arab community is Andrew Young, the former mayor of Atlanta. Young served as Carter's ambassador to the United Nations until August 1979, when he was forced to resign for holding unauthorized talks with the PLO. Because of the incident, he's widely viewed in the Arab world as a kind of martyr to America's pro-Israel lobby. During a visit to Saudi Arabia and the United Arab Emirates in 1983, he was accorded VIP treatment. Part of his travel and hotel expenses was paid by the government of the United Arab Emirates, which is run by Sheikh Zayed bin Sultan al-Nahayan, another of First American's leading shareholders. According to a report in the Atlanta Journal, Young's hotel bill in Dubai was paid by the National Bank of Georgia, which was then owned by Ghaith Pharaon, a BCCI shareholder. A former NBG official, however, denies it.

There's also a connection between BCCI and Jesse Jackson, the American politician with the most positive image in the Arab world. In one of the more curious developments of the 1988 presidential campaign, Clark Clifford and Bert Lance sponsored a breakfast meeting between Jackson and a group of mainstream Democrats—a meeting that helped to dispel Jackson's image as a radical. Clifford praised Jackson and said that if he were elected, he'd bring to Washington "the best brains the party and the country have to offer." After the breakfast, according to a campaign aide, "Jackson frequently told reporters that Clark Clifford was among his 'top policy advisers.'" were residents of foreign countries. Could U.S. regulators effectively monitor the new owners?

Another prominent Democrat who gave a boost to the Jackson campaign is Fred Dutton, a former aide to John Kennedy who promoted Jackson's vice presidential prospects in an op-ed piece for the Los Angeles Times. Dutton has been a registered foreign agent for Saudi Arabia for more than a decade and is considered its leading advocate in Washington. One of Dutton's Saudi contacts is Kamal Adham. In The American House of Saud, a book on Saudi lobbying, Steven Emerson writes that when Dutton was angling to get the Saudi contract, he made it clear that he wanted to report to Adham.

The regulators also wanted to know what role, if any, BCCI would play in Financial General. Questions about BCCI were raised by the Federal Reserve Board, the Federal Reserve Bank of Richmond, the Office of the Comptroller of the Currency, and Virginia's commissioner of financial institutions.

The lawyers for the Middle Eastern investors had their work cut out for them. They'd have to convince the Fed that Financial General would be run by Americans who had solid banking credentials. And this is exactly what Clifford and Altman did. "The lawyers," says one source, "proposed that there be a buffer in the form of a blue-ribbon board of directors, and the shareholders would basically agree to take a walk." BCCI, they said, would have no involvement in the management of Financial General, although it could act as an "investment adviser" to the Middle Eastern owners.

Clifford and Altman discussed this formula with bank regulators at an extraordinary April 1981 meeting at the Federal Reserve's headquarters. Regardie's has obtained a transcript of the meeting through the Freedom of Information Act. Although some passages have been censored, it appears that the missing information deals with the personal finances and business holdings of the Middle Eastern investors.

If the takeover were approved, Clifford said to the regulators, control of Financial General would be vested in a board of directors that would consist of distinguished U.S. citizens, including former senator Stuart Symington. Clifford had managed Symington's 1956 presidential campaign and had enlisted his old friend's legal services during the takeover battle. To run the company on a day-to-day basis, he said, the directors would choose "a top, very well regarded commercial banker [as] president and CEO"—someone with 25 or 30 years' experience.

As for BCCI, Clifford said: "There is no function of any kind on the part of BCCI. I know of no present relationship. I know of no planned future relationship that exists." Referring to the dummy companies that would be used as vehicles for the acquisition, Altman said that "there is no connection between those entities and BCCI in terms of ownership or other relationship."

On the positive side, Clifford said that the Middle Eastern investors planned to inject additional equity into Financial General. There is, he said, "a growing feeling among many thoughtful and experienced Americans that it is in the interest of our country . . . to bring back to the United States as many of the dollars as we can that through the years we send over to the OPEC countries."

One regulator who asked tough questions at the meeting was Sidney Bailey, Virginia's commissioner of financial institutions, who opposed the takeover. Among other things, he expressed skepticism that the proposed takeover was nothing more than a routine investment. Were there political considerations behind a bid to acquire a bank in the U.S. capital?

"I felt like a voice in the wilderness," Bailey says. "The Fed paid little attention to what I had to say."

Four months after the meeting, the Fed officially approved the takeover.

IN APRIL 1982 THE MIDDLE EASTERN investors made a tender offer for the remaining shares of Financial General. Four months later the name of the holding company was changed from Financial General Bankshares to First American Bankshares. (Some of the subsidiaries had already adopted the First American name; most of the others have since followed suit.)

The new owners installed a new board of directors made up of prominent Americans, many of whom had close ties to Clifford. Altman and Symington joined the board, the latter as the vice chairman. The distinguished American chosen to be the chairman of the board: Clark Clifford.

And what about the seasoned banker who was to serve as the president of the company? That part of the understanding with the Federal Reserve was fulfilled by the appointment of Robert Stevens, the former chairman of BancOhio Corporation, a large bank holding company based in Columbus. But in an unusual twist, a new corporate entity, First American Corporation, was placed at the top of the organizational chart, with Altman as its president. Thus, of the four top positions at First American, only one was held by a banker. (Stevens retired last July and was succeeded by Jack Beddow, a veteran First American executive. Clifford also retired recently and was succeeded by Altman.)

In addition to being First American's top executives, Clifford and Altman are among the company's top lawyers. They have steered a lucrative share of the company's legal work to Clifford & Warnke, a fourth of whose 18 lawyers handle bank-related matters.

Over the past eight years the long and controversial battle for control of First American has faded from memory. The Middle Eastern investors and their links to BCCI and Lance are seldom mentioned in the press. It's probably a safe bet that most of the company's customers assume that First American is U.S.-owned—a misconception reinforced by its name and flag-waving advertising campaign.

AS A BANK HOLDING COMPANY, FIRST American Bankshares is required to provide detailed ownership information to the Federal Reserve Board. When Regardie's first tried to find out who owns First American through the Freedom of Information Act, however, the Fed declined to grant the request.

Among the documents that the Fed did provide were two letters from a lawyer for the Middle Eastern investors requesting that the Fed not disclose their names to the public.

Further evidence of First American's touchiness about the subject of its ownership was displayed when the company was defending itself from a lawsuit in 1988. The Middle Eastern investors, in taking over the company in 1982, didn't acquire 100 percent ownership of all the banking subsidiaries. In 1987 First American Bankshares decided to buy out the minority shareholders in First American of Maryland and First American of Virginia at a price of $42 a share. Several of the Maryland bank's investors complained that the price was too low and took advantage of a state appraisal system to win a higher price. In Virginia, which has no such appraisal system, the dissenting shareholders went to court. In September 1988 a federal jury in Alexandria awarded the investors $60 a share.

During the discovery phase of the case, lawyers for the plaintiffs met stiff resistance when they tried to determine who owned the company. When the question was put to Altman during a deposition, he steadfastly refused to provide any names. When the plaintiffs' attorneys persisted, Altman's lawyer snapped that the identity of the owners was "none of your business." When specific names were put to Altman, however, he did confirm their status as shareholders.

In a pretrial motion, First American's lawyers went so far as to ask the judge to forbid

the plaintiffs' lawyers from mentioning in court the names or nationalities of the company's shareholders—or even that the bank was foreign-owned. They argued that it was irrelevant to the case, largely because Clifford and Altman ran the company; the owners played no role, they said, in setting the $42-a-share price to be paid to minority shareholders. They also claimed that the disclosure that the bank is Arab-owned could stir up prejudice in some of the jurors.

The unusual requests to the Federal Reserve and to the judge in Alexandria underscore how sensitive First American is about its foreign connections. One of the stated reasons for the sensitivity—the possibility of anti-Arab prejudice—may have some validity. Another reason—that the Arab investors have absolutely no influence over the company—isn't so convincing.

The owners may give Altman and Clifford considerable autonomy, but as their employers they have the right to fire them whenever they want. Furthermore, how can the public be assured that the owners have no influence as long as their identities remain secret?

Potential customers and employees also have a legitimate interest in knowing who owns First American. Should they decide that the owners are objectionable people, for example, they might well decide not to deal with the company.

There's another important reason that the identities of First American's owners are a matter of public interest. The takeover was highly controversial. How does the public know that the Fed did its job properly if it refuses to say who was permitted to buy the company?

Among the first group of documents obtained by Regardie's from the Federal Reserve is a letter from Paul Volcker, who was then the Fed's chairman, to the late Benjamin Rosenthal, a Democratic congressman from New York. The letter is dated November 16, 1982, about three months after the Fed approved the takeover. In the letter Volcker says that the Fed had recently received a Freedom of Information Act request for shareholder information, that the disclosure had been deemed "appropriate," and that "a response is being prepared to that request that will include the shareholder information."

When the Federal Reserve refused to provide shareholder information to Regardie's, the magazine protested the ruling and brought Volcker's letter to the attention of the Fed's lawyers. The Fed then reversed itself, saying that it would release the names of the shareholders, along with each one's percentage ownership in the bank, in 10 days. Before the 10-day period had expired, however, First American complained, which led the Fed to deliver yet a third decision. This time the Fed agreed to release the names of the investors who held at least 5 percent of the stock, but it would only reveal the exact percentages for those investors who held 10 percent or more. These nine investors account for all but 1.75 percent of First American's stock.

The list (see page 69) reveals that First American's biggest shareholder is Kamal Adham, who owned 12.63 percent of the company at the end of 1988. In addition, Adham Corporation Limited owned a block of between 5 and 10 percent. The other owners included Sheikh Zayed (11.76 percent); Sheikh Khalifa bin Zayed al-Nahayan, one of Zayed's sons and the crown prince of Abu Dhabi; the Abu Dhabi Investment Authority, which Zayed controls; Faisal Saud al-Fulaij; Abdul Raouf Khalil of Saudi Arabia; Mashriq Holding Company, the personal holding company of Sheikh Hamad bin Mohammed al-Sharqi, the ruler of Fujaira, which is a member of the United Arab Emirates; Ali Mohammed Shorafa of the UAE; Sheikh Humaid bin Rashid al-Naomi, the crown prince and deputy ruler of Ajman, another UAE member state; Khalid Salem Bin Mahfouz of Saudi Arabia; and Mohammed Hammoud of Lebanon.

These are the names that First American has gone to such great lengths to conceal from the public.

An examination of the investors' backgrounds suggests that First American may have good reason to suppress their names—not because some customers and employees may be prejudiced against Arabs in general but because some Americans may take a dim view of some of these particular Arabs.

WHEN CLIFFORD AND ALTMAN MET with bank regulators at the Federal Reserve in April 1981, they were accompanied by Kamal Adham and three other investors. After describing Adham as "a prominent businessman in Saudi Arabia," Clifford lavished praise on him. "I have come to have the deepest respect for his character, for his reputation, for his honor, and for his integrity," Clifford said. "I'm proud to be an associate of his."

Throughout the proceedings, Clifford referred to Adham as "His Excellency"—a term that isn't generally applied to Saudi sheikhs. In Saudi Arabia, the term sheikh isn't a title of nobility but simply an honorific for a respected person—roughly equivalent to referring to a distinguished Spaniard as "Don." Taking their cue from Clifford, the regulators began to refer to Adham as "His Excellency."

Clifford recounted what he described as a recent conversation with B. F. Saul, the chairman of Financial General. "He [Saul] had occasion to go to London, maybe more than once," Clifford said. "He had occasion to go to the Middle East, the Persian Gulf countries. I remember later on his talking with me, and he said, 'I have looked into the reputation, particularly of the leader of the group, of His Excellency Sheikh Kamal Adham.' And he said, 'It's difficult to recall a time when I have heard such universal commendation for an international businessman. I hear it in London. I've heard the most commendatory comments. I've heard about him in countries of the Persian Gulf. I have not heard one whisper of criticism against this man.' And he said, 'I feel perfectly comfortable about this group, headed by this man, coming in and taking over our banks.'"

(Saul disputed Clifford's account in a recent interview with Regardie's: "I never did go to the Middle East to meet him. I think I met Kamal Adham in Washington once. I don't think I ever met him in London. I met him for 20 minutes. I did not try to make a judgment whether they should own a bank. That was something for the Federal Reserve to do. All I was concerned about was whether this was in the best interest of the shareholders, and I thought it was. I didn't know these people.")

When it was Adham's turn to speak, "His Excellency" provided some background information on himself. He said that he'd studied at English schools in the Middle East, including Victoria College in Cairo, and that he spoke "English, Arabic, and Turkish as well as some French and Italian." As for his business career, he said that he had "interests in a number of business enterprises, ranging from general contracting to manufacturing plants."

This portrait of Adham was incomplete. Long before he appeared at the Fed, newspaper stories had described him as Saudi Arabia's former intelligence chief. He'd held that post until 1977 and had served as a royal adviser until early 1979—two years after he started to buy stock in Financial General.

As far as can be discerned from the censored transcript of the meeting, there was no discussion of Adham's government career nor of how he'd earned his fortune.

Born in Turkey in 1929, Adham is the half-brother of Iffat, the favorite wife of the late King Faisal, who ruled Saudi Arabia from 1964 until his death in 1975. Adham and the much older Faisal were extremely close. During Faisal's years in power, Adham was one of the most powerful men in Saudi Arabia. David Holden and Richard Johns, the authors of The House of Saud, an authoritative book on Saudi Arabia, described Adham as Faisal's "closest confidant and adviser" and his "right-hand man."

Adham's most important role was to help the king set up an intelligence organization to protect the royal family from enemies at home and abroad. In the early 1960s he was put in charge of the Foreign Liaison Bureau and, in Holden and Johns's words, "given general supervision over the General Intelligence Directorate, the internal security service."

On the home front, the Saudi regime faced threats from several sources, including dissident members of the al-Saud family, foreigners who lived in the kingdom, Nasserites, religious zealots, and rebellious members of the armed forces. In 1969, for example, there were at least two coup attempts.

Faisal was capable of using brutal methods to suppress opposition. Some of his opponents, in the words of an authority on the kingdom, "were mercilessly hunted, and, when caught, they were tortured and imprisoned for lengthy periods." Some of the officers who were arrested in the wake of a 1969 coup plot were tortured by the secret police; a few of them died in prison. The repression continued into the 1970s and 1980s. In its 1977 human rights report, Amnesty International said that it knew of 200 political prisoners by name.

When it came to the kingdom's external relations, Adham acted as Saudi Arabia's liaison with the CIA, French intelligence, and other foreign spy agencies. He developed such close ties with Anwar Sadat that he was known as Saudi Arabia's "Mr. Egypt." One way that the Saudis cultivated Sadat was by showering money on him. As part of an effort to encourage Sadat to expel Soviet military advisers from Egypt, Adham channeled enormous sums—"hundreds of millions of dollars," according to one source—to Cairo.

The "subsidies" to Egypt illustrate how Saudi Arabia has used money as an instrument of foreign policy. "The Saudis don't have much to offer by way of manpower and military assets," says William Quandt of the Brookings Institution, an authority on Saudi Arabia. "What they have to offer is money."

One important beneficiary of Saudi largess has been the Palestine Liberation Organization. Saudi Arabia is widely acknowledged to be the PLO's biggest financial backer. In his 1981 book on Saudi Arabia, The Kingdom, Robert Lacey wrote: "Increasing Saudi subsidies to the PLO since 1973 have given the organization currency reserves estimated at over a billion dollars—larger than those of many Third World countries—and most inhabitants of the Kingdom are proud that Saudi oil revenues should be supporting the cause of their Palestinian brothers."

Despite his governmental responsibilities, Adham found time to engage in business activities during the 1960s and 1970s—and with impressive results. In 1981 he told the Federal Reserve Board that his net worth was $255 million.

Business acumen no doubt played a role in Adham's success. Also important, though, were his political connections. His business career is almost a textbook case of how highly placed Saudis profit from their connections.

One of Adham's first important business ventures involved oil. In the late 1950s and early 1960s Saudi Arabia's oil minister was Abdullah Tariki, an aggressive, U.S.-educated petroleum engineer. In Tariki's view, the "Seven Sisters"—the leading international oil companies—had long been taking advantage of Saudi Arabia and other oil-producing countries. Tariki did his best to extract more money from the companies, even to the point of opening negotiations with a Japanese company. (In a move that would later turn the world upside down, Tariki and his Venezuelan counterpart teamed up to found OPEC in 1960.)

But Tariki and the Japanese weren't the only parties involved in the discussions. The Japanese had engaged a well-connected Saudi as their agent: Kamal Adham. Adham's precise role in the deal is a matter of some dispute. It's clear, however, that Tariki complained vociferously that Adham was undercutting his negotiating clout. Many years later Tariki reportedly said that he'd managed to get the Japanese to cancel a secret 2 percent commission to Adham—which was to be paid on top of the commission that Adham was openly receiving. But Adham had the last laugh. In 1962 Tariki was dismissed and forced into exile, while Adham went on to become one of the most powerful men in the kingdom.

Adham has counted among his clients U.S. and European companies that manufacture arms. In the mid 1960s Kermit Roosevelt, an agent for Northrop Corporation, found that Adham appeared to be representing three foreign defense contractors simultaneously—and was trying to sign up Northrop. In a letter to Northrop, Roosevelt said he understood that Adham "already has a piece of the Lightning deal, the Mirage deal, and the Lockheed deal and is trying to complete the square by an arrangement with Northrop." Roosevelt concluded that it was probably a good idea for Northrop to engage Adham. "Without him," he said, "we are going to be weakly represented."

The Egyptian connections that Adham had acquired in his role as intelligence chief were of great value when he did business in that country. "Adham was the main intermediary in the deals whereby Saudi Arabia bought French weapons on behalf of Egypt," Holden and Johns wrote. "The commissions from these sales, including the Mirage aircraft, were understood to have been channeled through his company, Arcan."

One of Adham's American clients in the 1970s was Boeing Company, according to reports in the Wall Street Journal. Adham, the Journal said, received large commissions from Boeing in exchange for promoting sales of its jets. His link to Boeing came to light in the mid 1970s, when U.S. government agencies investigated "questionable payments" made by Boeing and other U.S. companies to Americans and foreigners, including government officials.

The SEC and the Federal Trade Commission charged that Boeing had made tens of millions of dollars in questionable payments in connection with foreign aircraft sales. Both cases were settled in 1978 with a consent arrangement. In connection with the SEC settlement, Boeing filed a report in which it admitted making such payments, although certain names and details were deleted. One such deal involved the sale of $137 million worth of aircraft to a customer in Egypt. In connection with that transaction, Boeing paid $8.7 million to corporations in Liechtenstein; Boeing said it believed that the ultimate recipients were individuals who'd arranged or provided financing for the sale.

Street Journal filled in some of the blanks in a June 1978 article, based on interviews with U.S. government sources. Boeing was assisted, the paper said, by Adham and Mahdi al-Tajir, a diplomat from the United Arab Emirates. Mahdi al-Tajir had encouraged Sheikh Zayed to lend Egypt up to $90 million to finance the aircraft purchases, U.S. officials said, while Adham had used his influence with the Egyptian government to ensure that Boeing would be the supplier. Over the years, the Journal said, "Boeing has paid millions of dollars in commissions to Mr. Adham and Ambassador Tajir."

Adham invested much of the money he earned as an agent for foreign companies in conventional businesses, among them First American. Another bank in his investment portfolio is Allied Arab Bank, a London-based institution. He's its biggest shareholder; his partners are his friend Mahdi al-Tajir and Britain's Barclays Bank.

Documents obtained by Regardie's from the Federal Reserve show that an SEC official told the Fed that the names of two of the Middle Eastern investors had come up in the Boeing investigation. In a letter to the SEC asking for more information, the two investors are referred to, but their names were excised from the version released to Regardie's. They are described as "Mr. _____ of Saudi Arabia and Mr. _____ of Kuwait." If the Wall Street Journal's reporting is correct, the Saudi in question is Kamal Adham.

There is no doubt about the identity of the other investor: only one Kuwaiti was involved in the takeover. He is Faisal Saud al-Fulaij, another major shareholder in First American.

From 1964 to 1977 Fulaij served as the chairman of Kuwait Airways, the state-owned airline. For an airline executive, he accumulated an impressive fortune—$70 million, according to a document filed with the Fed in 1981. In the late 1970s the Federal Trade Commission identified him as the recipient of at least $300,000 in bribes. The commission's draft complaint said: "The payment, at the direction of a Boeing Co. officer, was made through a fictitious Swiss consulting firm." Fulaij has denied the allegation.

Since the late 1970s Fulaij has been the chairman of Kuwait International Finance Company, which has been listed in BCCI's annual reports as an affiliate. Fulaij told the Federal Reserve that he was also the president of Kuwait Sanitary Wares Company, which, he said, "manufactured plumbing and ceramic equipment."

INVESTORS FROM ABU DHABI—SHEIKH Zayed, his son Sheikh Khalifa, the Abu Dhabi Investment Authority, and Ali Shorafa—own a large chunk of First American. Because Zayed is the absolute ruler of Abu Dhabi, the Abu Dhabi Investment Authority, a government investment fund, is widely regarded as his personal property.

Sheikh Zayed came to power in 1966 by deposing Sheikh Shakhbut, his older brother. Shakhbut reportedly had peculiar attitudes about the proper way to invest money. There have long been rumors that he didn't believe in banks and kept gold bullion and millions of dollars in cash at home. He was eventually persuaded to put some of his money in the bank, the story goes, when he learned that rats had nibbled away a fortune in bank notes.

Shakhbut had refused to spend the sheikhdom's oil wealth to raise the living standards of his people. Thus, when Zayed replaced him, the change in power was widely welcomed.

Zayed, unlike his brother, is a big spender. He's spent vast sums on lavish construction projects, some of which are regarded as white elephants. The largest chunk of the sheikhdom's money, however, has gone into his pocket. Fortune magazine has estimated that Zayed is worth about $1.5 billion—not including the billions of dollars in assets held by the Abu Dhabi Investment Authority. The ADIA is a joint owner—along with the Libyan Treasury Secretariat and the Kuwait Ministry of Finance—of the Arab Banking Corporation, one of the Arab world's largest banks.

Zayed has a large family to support. In the late 1970s it was reported that he'd been married as many as 14 times—although, of course, he's presumably never had more than four wives at any one time (the limit under Islamic law). He reportedly has 22 daughters and 19 sons.

His wealth derives from Abu Dhabi's oil revenues, which shot up dramatically after the 1973-74 OPEC price increase. Around the same time, a number of Arab countries cut off shipments of oil to the United States, along with a few other countries, to punish them for their support of Israel during the 1973 Yom Kippur War. Abu Dhabi was the first Arab country to declare an embargo against the United States.

Over the years Zayed has also channeled tens of millions of dollars to the PLO. He's been an outspoken critic of the United States and its relationship with Israel. "Israel is our number-one enemy," he told reporters last December, "and America is our number-two enemy." Two days later he reportedly met with PLO leader Yassir Arafat and assured him of his support for the Palestinian uprising on the Israeli-occupied West Bank.

Up until sometime in late 1981 or early 1982, the man in charge of managing Zayed's personal fortune was Abdullah Darwaish. As "Chairman/Director General of the Department of Personal Affairs of H.R.H. Ruler of Abu Dhabi and Chairman of the Abu Dhabi Investment Company," he'd acquired shares of Financial General as a sort of trustee for Zayed's young son Mohammed.

In March 1982, several months before the takeover was consummated, Sheikh Zayed brought two suits in U.S. courts charging that Darwaish had been involved in an elaborate scheme to defraud him of $96 million. Darwaish had already been under house arrest in Abu Dhabi for several months; his chief deputy, Riaz Saleem Aslam, had been jailed there in late 1981.

"Documents filed in that case," the Washington Post's Jerry Knight reported in August 1982, "indicate Darwaish's troubles in Abu Dhabi were known weeks and perhaps months before he and his partners bought control of Financial General but were never disclosed to bank officials, stockholders, or regulatory agencies.

"Neither the Securities and Exchange Commission, which regulates corporate acquisitions, nor the Federal Reserve Board, which has authority over bank holding companies, has been informed of Darwaish's troubles in Abu Dhabi, sources at the two agencies said."

The same day that the story appeared, Michael Bradfield, the general counsel to the Federal Reserve Board, wrote to Clark Clifford to ask for more information. Clifford responded in a letter dated August 16. In it he stressed that Darwaish owned no shares in the company but was merely representing Zayed's son Mohammed, and he added that Mohammed would be handling his own investments in the future. He denied that any information had been withheld from regulatory agencies. In one passage he branded the Post's story "inaccurate, misleading, unwarranted, and irresponsible" and said that he had informed Benjamin Bradlee, the executive editor, of "the gross inaccuracies in the article." The Post, however, published no correction, letter to the editor, or follow-up article.

One important issue was lost in the shuffle. The formal tender offer for Financial General Bankshares, filed with the SEC on March 3, 1982, listed Abdullah Darwaish as one of the three controlling shareholders in the takeover group (along with Adham and Fulaij) and described him as the chairman of the Abu Dhabi Investment Company and the chairman of Sheikh Zayed's Department of Personal Affairs. At the time, however, he'd already been stripped of his official duties and placed under house arrest.

In March 1989 the New York Court of Appeals ruled unanimously that Zayed couldn't press his claim because he'd refused to be deposed in the case. Riaz Aslam, Darwaish's deputy, was reportedly still languishing in an Abu Dhabi prison. As for Darwaish, Regardie's has been unable to ascertain his whereabouts.

Khalid Salem Bin Mahfouz, one of Saudi Arabia's most prominent businessmen, first bought shares in First American in 1986. His family controls the largest bank in Saudi Arabia, National Commercial Bank, and has a net worth estimated to be more than $1.5 billion. Khalid's father is the bank's founder; Khalid and his brothers run it.

Like many of Saudi Arabia's super-rich, the Bin Mahfouz family has benefited from royal patronage. King Saud granted permission to establish the bank in 1954. Another apparent privilege was granted much more recently. In the late 1970s the Saudi government ordered the nation's private-sector banks to sell stock to the public. Only one bank didn't do so, presumably because of a special exemption: National Commercial.

First American was by no means Bin Mahfouz's first investment in the United States. In 1977 he teamed up with former treasury secretary John Connally, Texas banker Fredrick Erck, and Ghaith Pharaon to buy Main Bank, a small bank in Houston, Texas. The following year Connally introduced Bin Mahfouz to Nelson Bunker Hunt and his brother, Herbert, who were on the lookout for partners as part of their effort to corner the world's silver market. In 1979, according to British journalist Stephen Fay, the Hunts and Bin Mahfouz established an offshore company to serve as a vehicle for silver investments, but the silver scheme collapsed, and Bin Mahfouz was rumored to have suffered huge losses.

ASIDE FROM BEING WEALTHY ARABS, Kamal Adham and the other principal owners of First American Bankshares have one thing in common: all of them are closely associated with BCCI.

At least seven of First American's 10 apparent shareholders also own stock in BCCI, according to BCCI's latest available list of shareholders, which is dated October 31, 1988. The Abu Dhabi contingent—Zayed, his relatives, the Abu Dhabi Investment Authority, and Ali Shorafa—accounts for the biggest block of BCCI shares. Bin Mahfouz and his brothers owned 20 percent of BCCI. (They reportedly bought their stock in BCCI at about the same time that Bin Mahfouz invested in First American.)

The owners of First American are connected to BCCI in many other ways. All of them have been described as "BCCI clients," in the sense that the bank provides investment advice to them. Sheikh Zayed is a close friend of Abedi's and a partner with BCCI in its UAE subsidiary, Bank of Credit and Commerce (Emirates). Adham has been a BCCI depositor and borrower. Fulaij is a longtime executive of the BCCI group; when he first bought stock in Financial General, he was the chairman of Kuwait International Finance Company, a BCCI affiliate. (BCCI owns 49 percent of KIFCO.) BCCI's annual reports show that Fulaij served on the board of BCCI's Italian subsidiary, Italfinance International S.p.A., from 1982 to 1986. Bin Mahfouz has served on BCCI's board of directors.

These close ties to BCCI and Abedi, its president, raise an obvious question: What is the relationship between First American Bankshares and BCCI?

ABEDI'S KNACK FOR FORGING POLITIcal connections has been controversial, partly because BCCI has sometimes employed highly questionable techniques. The bank has entered into business partnerships with political figures, provided jobs for them and their offspring, paid their travel expenses, and given them loans.

In many of the countries in which BCCI has made powerful friends, it has received certain privileges or outperformed other foreign banks. BCCI spokesmen say this is a coincidence; other bankers are skeptical.

The United Arab Emirates, for example, has been described as the most overbanked country in the world; it has a huge number of branches that serve a population of less than 1.5 million. In 1982 the UAE decreed that foreign banks would be limited to eight branches apiece. BCCI managed to get around the rule by setting up a separate bank, Bank of Credit and Commerce (Emirates). It didn't go unnoticed that Sheikh Zayed and his relatives own stock in both BCCI and BCCE.

Many foreign banks have abandoned Nigeria in recent years, amid complaints that economic travails and government restrictions have made it extraordinarily difficult for them to generate profits. But BCCI's 40 percent-owned Nigerian subsidiary has been expanding rapidly and making so much money that it's now one of its most profitable units. The chairman—and one of the shareholders—of BCCI's Nigerian subsidiary is Ibrahim Dasuki, a wealthy businessman who's so close to Nigerian president Ibrahim Babangida that he's been described as Babangida's "political godfather."

BCCI's most impressive political connections were forged in Pakistan during the 10-year rule of Mohammad Zia ul-Haq, the repressive dictator who died in 1988. Sources in Pakistan say that Abedi was one of Zia's closest friends and a key adviser. BCCI hired a long list of senior Pakistani officials who'd served under Zia.

BCCI's image has also suffered because of its involvement in flight capital—money moved abroad by people who live in unstable countries. Most flight capital is exported by rich people in Third World countries, and they usually have to violate foreign exchange controls to accumulate their money abroad.

Most big banks are happy to accept deposits from customers who've smuggled the money abroad, but they generally avoid violating exchange controls. In at least six developing countries, officers of BCCI have been accused of exchange-control violations; they've been found guilty in three of them.

But all of BCCI's previous controversies have been dwarfed by the issue of drug money.

One former BCCI customer who was allegedly involved in the drug trade is Manuel Noriega, the former Panamanian dictator. In February 1988 Noriega was indicted in Miami and Tampa on federal drug charges. Around the time of the indictments, two convicted traffickers testified at Senate hearings that they'd dealt with Noriega—and with BCCI—in Panama. One of the traffickers, Leigh Bruce Ritch, testified that he'd been referred to BCCI by Cesar Rodriguez, one of Noriega's closest associates. The traffickers' testimony was buttressed by José Blandon, a former Panamanian diplomat. ▸

FIRST AMERICAN

BCCI, according to Blandon, had been used for money laundering by both Rodriguez and Enrique Pretelt, another associate of Noriega's, who at the time was under indictment in the United States on drug charges.

In the wake of the Noriega hearings, the Senate Subcommittee on Terrorism, Narcotics, and International Operations, chaired by John Kerry of Massachusetts, launched a secret inquiry into BCCI. On September 30, 1988, the Kerry committee deposed Amjad Awan, BCCI's country manager for Panama from 1981 to 1984. Awan, who'd acted as Noriega's personal banker, said that the dictator had channeled millions of dollars through his BCCI account, most of the deposits had been in cash. Noriega had been so pleased with the service he'd received, according to Awan, that he'd made a personal appeal to Abedi not to transfer Awan from Panama. Abedi had gone ahead with the transfer anyway, but Awan had assured Noriega that "I would be available to him whenever he needed me."

Kerry's subcommittee wasn't the only unit of the U.S. government that was taking a close look at BCCI. At the same time that Awan was testifying, he and several of his BCCI colleagues were the targets of an undercover investigation of money laundering that had been launched in 1986 by the U.S. Customs Service. A customs agent posing as a money launderer had channeled millions of dollars in cocaine money through BCCI. Awan was one of several BCCI officers who'd allegedly been eager to help out.

In early October 1988 a federal grand jury in Tampa returned an indictment against BCCI and nine of its employees, including Awan. BCCI and eight of the bankers were charged with laundering about $14 million in cocaine money.

When the indictment was unsealed, U.S. Customs Commissioner William von Raab called BCCI "an institution that was prostituting itself to money laundering."

In April 1989 a federal grand jury in Tampa returned a superseding indictment against BCCI. The new indictment alleged that BCCI officers were involved in laundering drug money as far back as 1983—three years before U.S. Customs launched the investigation that led to the original indictment. The new indictment also alleged that the laundering of drug money was part of BCCI's corporate strategy BCCI and its Colombian subsidiary, it said, implemented "a corporate strategy for increasing BCCI's deposits by encouraging placements of cash from whatever sources, specifically including 'flight capital,' 'black market capital,' and the proceeds of drug sales, in conscious disregard of the currency regulations, tax laws, and antidrug laws of the United States and of other nations."

BCCI settled the case last January with a plea bargain. It and an affiliate pleaded guilty to money-laundering charges and forfeited $15 million: in exchange, prosecutors dropped the charges against BCCI's Luxembourg holding company as well as BCCI's Colombian subsidiary. Five officers of BCCI are now on trial in Tampa, and the U.S government is seeking to extradite another BCCI officer from London. British authorities are expected to put still another BCCI official on trial in that country

WHAT EXACTLY IS THE RELATIONSHIP between First American Bankshares and the bank that the U.S. government has branded a corporate criminal?

The official version is that there is none. The two shareholder groups overlap to a certain extent, officials of First American Bankshares say, and BCCI provides advice to some of the Arab investors—and that's about it.

"BCCI has not been involved at any time in any respect in the establishment of policy or in the control or management of First American or any of its subsidiaries," one of First American's lawyers said in a letter to Regardie's. "This has been confirmed by the management of First American and reaffirmed in regular bank examinations."

The official version of the relationship, however, shouldn't be accepted at face value. BCCI officials and lawyers for First American's owners have made numerous questionable statements over the years. In at least a few cases, BCCI officers have given false information to reporters.

Some of the most egregious examples are from early 1978, when it was first reported that BCCI might have been behind Bert Lance's efforts to buy shares of Financial General. On February 13, the New York Times reported that BCCI officials "flatly denied making any purchases of or having any involvement in efforts to acquire Financial General stock." According to the Times, Dildar Rizvi, a BCCI official, "said that he had spoken today with Mr. Abedi, who also denied any connection with efforts to purchase Financial General stock." A little more than a month later Rizvi (who is now one of BCCI's most senior officials) told a reporter for the Washington Post that Bert Lance "was paid nothing by the bank"; Allaudin Shaik, another BCCI executive, said that Lance had "received absolutely no loans from BCCI or loans arranged by BCCI."

All of these statements were later proven false. Abedi himself, in fact, later admitted that BCCI had lent Lance about $3 5 million.

During and after the takeover battle, the BCCI "clients" and their lawyers also made numerous questionable statements about the deal. Clark Clifford, for example, provided this extraordinarily terse account of Lance's role during the April 1981 meeting at the Federal Reserve: "At one time he did own a few shares of stock. He sold the stock Retired from participation in it." And Altman recently told Regardie's that Lance hadn't had "any significant role in the acquisition."

In fact, however, Lance had been a paid financial adviser to BCCI, had helped to collect the stock, and had approached the management of Financial General on the investors' behalf

In a 1979 deposition, and again at the Fed meeting in 1981, Adham said that the stock had been recommended to him by a friend who worked at the Saudi embassy in Washington. "Mr. [Hassan] Yassin advised me that the stock had become available for purchase in Financial General and that this company might provide an attractive investment opportunity," he told the Fed in 1981. "I asked BCCI to evaluate this property for me and advise me as to its suitability as an investment."

Three years earlier, however, U.S. District Court Judge Oliver Gasch had found in a civil suit that it was Abedi who had recommended the Financial General stock to Adham.

At the Fed meeting, Clifford, Altman, and Adham went to great lengths to portray the share buy-up as a routine investment. Adham and his partners weren't members of a group involved in a secret scheme to acquire control of the company, they said, but simply ordinary investors in the U.S stock market.

The assertion that BCCI wasn't involved in the takeover—that the buyers were merely several unrelated investors who happened to be customers of BCCI—had already been demolished by Gasch, who'd agreed with the SEC that the shareholders were acting as a group to take over Financial General in violation of securities law He'd found that Abedi had essentially put together the deal, assembling a group of investors and instructing Lance and others to buy stock for them.

There can be little doubt that Abedi was interested in acquiring a foothold in the United States. But major legal and regulatory obstacles stood in his way. In fact, BCCI had run into trouble with state banking regulators three years before the Financial General battle. In 1975 a BCCI client had tried to acquire the Bank of Chelsea, a small institution in New York City. But after he'd made it clear that BCCI would be involved in running the bank, New York State bank regulators withheld their approval.

At a December 1, 1977 meeting that was attended by Lance and others, Abedi, the SEC said, "discussed the possibility of acquisition of control of both FGB and NBG by Ghaith Pharaon." Pharaon's lawyer said that since his client already owned part of National Bank of Georgia (a transaction that was reportedly financed by BCCI), this could violate restrictions on interstate banking. The Financial General stock would have to be bought by someone else. Abedi immediately came up with four other BCCI clients. These four investors and the ones who joined them later were more than simply "BCCI clients." They included BCCI stockholders, joint-venture partners, friends of Abedi's, and, perhaps most important, borrowers from the BCCI group

Fulaij, for example, told the SEC that he'd paid for his stock with a $3.55 million unsecured loan from Kuwait International Finance Company, a BCCI affiliate. Fulaij was its chairman.

Fulaij wasn't the only borrower. Adham has borrowed from the bank, and other members of the group may have done so. When Financial General's management was fighting the takeover, its lawyers filed a sworn affidavit that they'd seen a Bank of America document that revealed that BCCI had made loans to two of the four Middle Eastern investors

Moreover, the names of the two shell companies that were set up as a vehicle for the acquisition of Financial General bore a striking resemblance to that of BCCI: a Dutch company called Credit and Commerce American Investment, which in turn was owned by a Netherlands Antilles company called Credit and Commerce American Holdings.

When a Federal Reserve official asked about the similarity, Clifford replied: "I think generally the term 'credit' and the term 'commerce' are terms that are used extensively in the Persian Gulf in financial affairs. . . . I know of no additional reasoning behind it." Clifford was mistaken. The only major Arab-owned bank with those words in its name is Bank of Credit and Commerce International.

THE PUBLIC RECORD SHOWS THAT BCCI masterminded the Financial General investment, provided loans and consulting fees to Lance (who facilitated the takeover), brought in close associates of the bank as investors, and financed the stock purchase of at least one of those investors. While none of this proves that the two institutions have been linked to each other since the takeover, Regardie's has found that there are a number of ongoing connections.

Before BCCI opened a branch in New York, it depended heavily on the services of correspondent banks in that city. One correspondent was First American Bank of New York—a seemingly unusual choice, since it's a relatively small, obscure institution. Odd, that is, unless BCCI regarded it as a sort of sister bank. An official at a major New York bank who's had dealings with BCCI says that when BCCI's employees made business trips to New York, they used desks and phones at First American.

There are also personnel connections. At least two of BCCI's senior officials have held posts at First American Bank of New York. Aijaz Afridi left his job as a general manager of BCCI's Swiss subsidiary to become the executive vice president of FABNY, only to return to run BCCI's Spanish subsidiary. Khusro Elley, who ran BCCI's representative office in New York, also left for a senior position at FABNY.

A source at BCCI's Spanish subsidiary says that before Afridi arrived there, employees were informed that he was a senior BCCI official who'd been posted to First American of New York "at the request of Mr. Abedi" and that Abedi had now transferred him to Spain. After Afridi arrived in Spain, this source says, he frequently referred to First American as a member of the BCCI group.

Neither Elley nor Afridi, however, completely severed his ties to BCCI while working for First American. Public records show that both men used BCCI mortgages to buy houses in the wealthy suburb of Scarsdale. Afridi received his mortgage in December 1983, just months before he'd joined First American. Elley's mortgage was granted in July 1984, while he was a First American employee. Real estate records don't indicate the interest rate on Elley's mortgage, but Afridi's was granted on what appear to be extremely generous terms, including no down payment.

PERHAPS THE MOST OBVIOUS ONGOING connection between First American and BCCI, however, is their common law firm: Clifford & Warnke. The firm began to work for BCCI in early 1978, when Abedi and the bank were sued for violating U.S. securities laws in connection with the acquisition of shares in Financial General.

Two years ago, when Senator Kerry investigated BCCI's ties to Noriega, Clifford and Altman dealt with his subcommittee on BCCI's behalf. Clifford, according to a subcommittee source, had discussions with Kerry as well as with the chairman of the Foreign Relations Committee, Senator Claiborne Pell of Rhode Island.

Following BCCI's indictment on drug charges in October 1988, Clifford and Altman played an important role behind the scenes, recommending defense lawyers, monitoring the case as it unfolded, and even approving BCCI's responses to press inquiries.

Altman has also lobbied on Capitol Hill on BCCI's behalf. In January, shortly before the proposed settlement was announced, he and three other lawyers for BCCI met with Senator Orrin Hatch of Utah. Hatch has told Regardie's that Altman and his colleagues strongly defended the plea bargain.

The arguments were evidently persuasive. After other senators criticized the plea bargain as a slap on the wrist, Hatch defended the deal on the floor of the Senate. He also minimized BCCI's relationship with Noriega, lumped BCCI together with banks that had been found guilty of less-serious charges (failure to file currency-transaction reports), and said—incorrectly—that none of the individual defendants who'd been indicted were senior officials of BCCI.

All the while, of course, Clifford and Altman have been running First American. It's a curious and awkward relationship that not only undercuts First American's claim that it's wholly independent but also presents potential conflicts of interest. Aren't there times when the interests of First American and BCCI are at odds? How do Clifford and Altman resolve such conflicts? Do they do what's best for First American or what's best for BCCI? Or doesn't it matter?

Altman says that he doesn't see a conflict. "It's not unusual that a law firm represents more than one client in an industry," he says. "We are not the primary lawyer for BCCI. We [First American] do very different kinds of business. They are an international bank; we are a regional bank."

As the chairman of First American Bankshares, couldn't Altman avoid even the appearance of a conflict of interest by simply dropping another bank that he describes as a minor client?

"I'm not anxious to distance myself from BCCI," Altman says. "I'm not defensive about it."

Clifford and Altman aren't the only lawyers used by BCCI, but they have a great deal of contact with the bank's top management, according to a BCCI insider. He says that Altman was in constant communication with BCCI officials. Altman says that he talked to Abedi "infrequently." When Regardie's asked Altman how often he talks to Abedi's deputy, Swaleh Naqvi, who essentially runs BCCI, Altman declined to comment.

Moreover, Altman claims that he and Clifford have very little contact with First American's Middle Eastern owners. For example, he stated in a deposition that he hadn't bothered to tell them when he'd decided to spend about $30 million to buy the remaining public stock in First American's Virginia subsidiary. There hadn't been, he insisted, a single meeting, letter, telex—not even a phone call. In one motion, lawyers for First American stated, "The evidence in this case is undisputed that those foreign nationals played absolutely no role in the merger transaction, and indeed, did not even know about it until after it had been consummated."

Shareholders who are so remote from a company that they're not consulted about a $30 million transaction are more than simply "passive" investors. "Comatose" might be a more accurate term.

First American is by no means the only ostensibly independent company with close ties to BCCI. Attock Oil Company, a London-based refining and trading firm, has in recent years acquired several U.S. properties. Abedi arranged the acquisition of Attock Oil in 1979, and a source close to the company says that its owners include Adham, Pharaon, and Fulaij. According to published reports, Pharaon has been the chairman of the company and Adham a director. Its main bank is BCCI.

Capcom Financial Services, a commodities and money-management firm, was indicted in Tampa as a codefendant in the BCCI money-laundering case. A source close to the company says that its leading shareholders include at least two of First American's shareholders, Adham and Abdul Khalil, as well as S. Z. A. Akbar, Capcom's managing director. Akbar is related by marriage to Naqvi, BCCI's chief executive, and before joining Capcom he was BCCI's chief trader. He was also indicted in the Florida case.

Then there's the case of National Bank of Georgia. After BCCI arranged Pharaon's acquisition of the bank in late 1977, Pharaon became an absentee owner. In 1979 he hired Roy P. M. Carlson, a former executive of Bank of America, to run NBG. Carlson had been responsible for monitoring B of A's investment in BCCI.

Carlson wasn't the only NBG official with links to BCCI. Three Pakistani bankers were recruited from BCCI to help Carlson run the bank. The most senior of them was Tariq Jamil, whose title was assistant to the chairman. A few years ago Jamil returned to BCCI as a senior official of its Hong Kong subsidiary.

In 1987 First American bought back its former subsidiary from Pharaon, who was in deep financial trouble. It paid $255 million for the Georgia bank in what Altman describes as "an arm's-length transaction."

At the time, however, Clark Clifford indicated that Pharaon's ties to the owners of First American may have had something to do with the transaction. "Our investors encouraged us to consider the purchase," he said. "They had known of the ownership being in the hands of Pharaon. They encouraged us to do it." Pharaon has himself acknowledged the importance of his ties to the owners of First American. "These are people we have been associated with for a long time," he said, referring to Adham and Fulaij. "We've had many contacts with them, so we know them. They said we should speak to [First American's] management in Washington, which we did, and that's how the deal came through."

Pharaon has invested in other U.S. banks, in at least some cases with BCCI's help. In 1985, for instance, he bought Independence Bank of Encino, California in a transaction that resembled the Georgia deal. Sources familiar with the deal say that the negotiations were handled by BCCI officers and that Pharaon has been a very passive investor. A BCCI executive was installed as the bank's chairman, although in 1989 the top job was taken over by an American banker who has no apparent ties to BCCI. Senior officials of the bank say that there's no connection with BCCI and that they regard Pharaon as the bank's proprietor.

One characteristic shared by all of these purportedly independent companies is that their senior executives have attended BCCI's annual management conferences. BCCI insiders say that attendees have included officials of Attock Oil, Capcom, National Bank of Georgia, and First American Bankshares.

Altman has also attended several of the conferences. The feeling among the participants, a source says, was that "everyone there was part of the BCCI group." According to sources who have attended these conferences, Altman was there not as a lawyer for BCCI but as the leader of a contingent of First American executives.

"I don't think any other First American people were there," Altman says. Was he there in his capacity as a First American executive or as a BCCI lawyer? "It wasn't specified," he says. "They asked me to come."

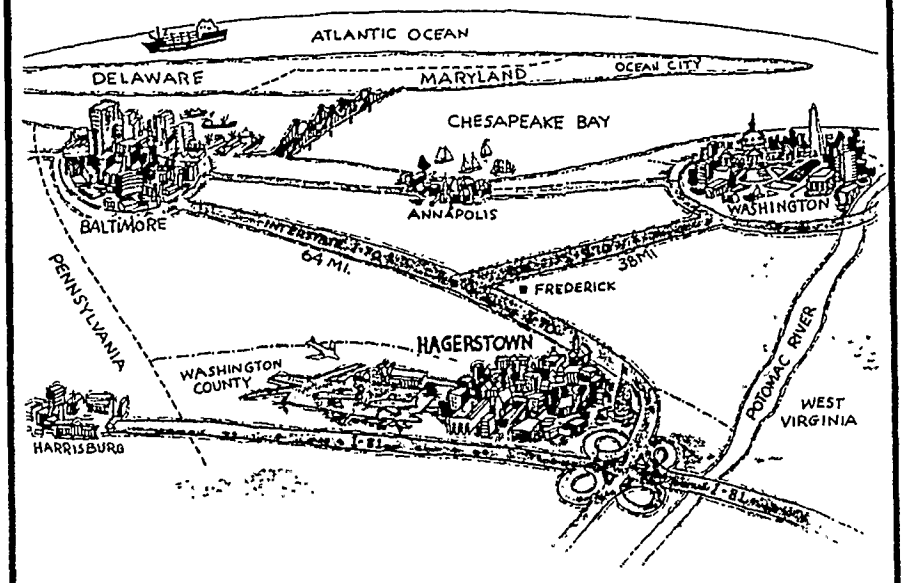
At other meetings, senior executives of BCCI, including Abedi, explicitly reinforced the notion that the firms in attendance were part of the "group." Says a former BCCI executive: "I remember at one meeting, Abedi said, 'We are now one of the largest financial groups in the world, when you take into account the BCC Group, First American, Attock Oil.' He would mention NBG and Independence Bank. He would say when you put them all together, we as a group are so big. He would throw in a figure of $28 billion or $30 billion in assets."

Indeed, a banker who attended several of the management conferences told Regardie's, "You'd be damn foolish if you didn't see the handwriting on the wall that someday they could come together." Sources say, in fact, that Abedi not only spoke of First American as an affiliate but that he planned to turn it into an official subsidiary once he got approval from the Federal Reserve. One BCCI source says that Abedi even told various BCCI executives what jobs they'd have in Washington. Altman denies that there was ever any such plan.

During the Florida money-laundering investigation, Amjad Awan described the relationship between BCCI and First American to an undercover federal agent. A government affidavit paraphrases Awan:

"Awan said that BCCI has bought and controls First American Bank and National Bank of Georgia through private individuals. The banks were bought through individual names rather than BCCI because BCCI could not buy

View From the Other Washington



In Washington County, Maryland, we look at things a little differently. And every year, more and more smart businesses are settling here to share the vision and the opportunities.

Just a stone's throw – an hour's drive – from Baltimore and our nation's capitol, the other Washington has a great deal to offer: a skilled and willing workforce, two Enterprise Zones, and a network of air, rail and interstate transportation that speeds your products to almost half of America's consumers.

Location is only one of the reasons successful businesses like Citicorp, Tandy and Rohr Industries feel at home in Washington County. Here, we're committed to cutting through the red tape that slows a company down. We'll work with you to select a site, help you discover financing opportunities, and do everything we can to have you up and running in no time.

Yes, from where we sit, business couldn't look better. Come over to the other Washington and enjoy the view.

the banks and run them due to U.S. law. Former secretary of defense Clark Clifford is one of the persons who is working on behalf of BCCI to gain control of these U.S. banks."

When asked to comment on this statement, lawyers representing BCCI in the drug-money case said that the document "mischaracterizes the referenced conversation of Mr. Awan." Altman says that Awan was wrong.

THE FIRST AMERICAN STORY TURNS ON a classic Washington question: What did the Fed know and when did it know it?

The deal to buy First American was approved because Clifford, Altman, and the Middle Eastern investors made certain representations and promises to the Federal Reserve and other bank regulators. In trying to evaluate whether the deal was proper even now, the questions that must be asked are: How complete and accurate were their representations? Were the promises kept?

Clifford and Altman have portrayed the owners of First American as "among the most substantial, respected individuals in the Middle East." At least several of them, however, are far more controversial than that. At least two of them have been accused of accepting questionable payments from American companies, one is the former intelligence chief of a repressive regime, and one heads the country that took the lead in embargoing oil to the U.S. in 1973 and is also a key financial backer of the PLO.

The Federal Reserve, however, apparently overlooked such matters. "I don't recall those issues being raised at the time at all," says a former Fed official who was involved in the deliberations. "The PLO was never mentioned. But it seems to me that if they were raised in a new proceeding, that might be the kind of thing that the Federal Reserve would take cognizance of.

The only glancing reference to the PLO seems to have come in a set of questions submitted by Manfred Ohrenstein, the Democratic leader of the New York State Senate, who asked whether "any of the stockholders or the organizations for which they act as representatives" were "affiliated in any way with any international terrorist organizations" or providing them with "any financial assistance." Altman's one-word reply to both questions: "No."

Clifford minimized the role of BCCI in the deal, and the Fed apparently believed him. At least one Fed document suggests profound ignorance about the investors' ties to that bank. A letter from a Fed official to Representative Rosenthal, who was trying to get at the question of ownership and control, contains this statement: "Staff has no knowledge of loans from or other involvement in the affairs of BCCI on the part of Applicants' principals [the Arab investors]."

But the reality is that BCCI orchestrated the initial purchases of Financial General's stock and financed at least some of those purchases, that the "Applicants" also owned a significant interest in BCCI, and that BCCI's president was to be the principal "adviser" to those "Applicants" on matters relating to First American.

Clifford told the Fed that the bank would be run by a board of respected U.S citizens and that the Arabs would merely be passive investors. He became the chairman of its board and appointed several friends and associates as directors.

Clifford's own account of the events that led to First American's acquisition of National Bank of Georgia, however, suggests that the Middle Eastern owners have been more than passive investors. There is also evidence of some sort of ongoing relationship between First American and BCCI. It remains unclear whether First American is a "sister institution" to BCCI or whether the banks have simply made a cozy exchange of talent. Perhaps the best example of the exchange of talent has been the relationship of Clifford, Altman, and their law firm to the key players in this story.

Earlier this year, as prosecutors were cutting a deal with BCCI on the drug-money indictment, the Fed was reportedly talking with First American officials and expressing renewed concern over the shareholder overlap and transactions between the two institutions. According to the Financial Times, the Fed "accepted their promise that the two banks will have no future dealings."

A source at First American told the Times that in the past, "there was some business done with BCCI, but it was very small, extremely small."

The quote is reminiscent of Altman's assertion that the ownership overlap between First American and BCCI is "not as great as you might think," when in fact the overlap is considerable.

In a recent interview with Regardie's, Altman denied that the Fed and First American can have had any meetings or discussions regarding BCCI since October 1988, when BCCI was indicted. Yet a September 1989 letter from First American's attorneys to Regardie's notes: "Following the period last fall when BCCI and several of its officers were indicted on money-laundering charges in Florida, the Federal Reserve expressly confirmed again that BCCI had no involvement with the management of First American and that all prior representations about this relationship were fully correct."

And in a July 1989 interview with Regardie's, Altman said: "The reason I know that it [the business between BCCI and First American] is quite insignificant is that after the events of last October, the Federal Reserve came and reviewed our relationship to ensure that all of the commitments we had made to the Fed had been honored, and in the context of that they audited our business."

And what if BCCI were found to be exerting control over First American? The legal implications could be serious. Lawyers who specialize in banking law say that this would mean that the acquisition of Financial General was an "illegal takeover," since the investors who applied to the Fed for permission to buy the company would have been front men. Anyone who carried out such a scheme would be violating a long list of federal laws, including the Bank Holding Company Act, securities laws, and Title 18, Section 1001 of the U.S. Code, which makes it a felony to make false statements to a government agency.

Has the Fed ever done a thorough investigation of Financial American's shareholders and their links to BCCI? Or has it simply relied on assurances from the men in charge that everything's all right?

If nothing else, the First American case shows why there should be more sunshine on banks, not less. Whose interest does it serve to keep the ownership of First American secret? Not the depositors' and not the taxpayers'. With foreigners increasingly buying into U.S. banks, this case sets a bad precedent.

What was good for the Fed nine years ago may not be good enough today. Lingering questions about the owners of First American and the bank's refusal to answer them provide ample reason for the Fed—or for Congress—to take another look. ■

Who Controls First American Bankshares?

After 9 Years, Questions Linger on Foreign Ties

By Jim McGee
Washington Post Staff Writer

Ever since the Federal Reserve Board approved the takeover of First American Bankshares by foreign investors nine years ago, there has been talk in the banking world that the Washington-based company had fallen under the control of an aggressive and high-flying Persian Gulf bank, the Bank of Credit and Commerce International (BCCI).

Over the last decade, First American has expanded dramatically, growing to 183 branches in the Washington area alone. A hallmark of its growth was a catchy advertising campaign, including "First American Stories"—homey tales about immigrant families that end with the bank's distinctive red logo and a voice pronouncing, "We're First American. The bank for all Americans."

Then in 1988, First American's name came up unexpectedly in a criminal case in Tampa. Evidence showed that BCCI executives had helped Panamanian leader Manuel Antonio Noriega launder drug money through an account at First American. First American officials said the bank had no knowledge of the transactions; no charges were filed against First American.

The Federal Reserve, which has primary responsibility for regulating the ownership of bank holding companies, reacted by trying to find out about the relationship between BCCI and First American, just as it did when it approved the takeover in 1981. But the inquiry ended with the same result as the previous one: The board noted, for the record, that it had allowed new investors from Kuwait, Saudi Arabia and the United Arab Emirates to acquire the company only after being promised "that BCCI would not be involved in the management."

But documents and interviews in New York, London and Washington suggest that BCCI and First American have had an extensive, long-term relationship that appears contrary to what regulators say they understood it would be.

For example, BCCI's president participated in the hiring of three First American executives. BCCI executives helped negotiate two important First American acquisitions. BCCI helped finance First American's impressive expansion as it grew to be the nation's 51st largest bank holding company, with eight subsidiaries in six states and the District. On a regular basis, First American Chairman Clark M. Clifford and First American President Robert A. Altman flew to New York and London to brief senior BCCI executives.

Whether the particulars of BCCI's role add up to an improper "controlling influence" over First American—as defined by federal law—is a determination that the Federal Reserve could make only after a formal inquiry. In the cautious, button-down realm of American banking regulation, any hidden influence is cause for possible action. The influence does not have to extend to all operations. "This is not a technicality," said Virgil Mattingly, the board's general counsel.

If the Federal Reserve were to conclude that BCCI had exercised a controlling influence over First American, it could take a range of actions, including the extreme measure of forcing shareholders to sell the $11 billion holding company and its subsidiaries in Virginia, Maryland, the District, New York, Tennessee, Georgia and Florida—a type of sanction that the board has invoked only rarely in its history.

The board's interest in the relationship between the two banks has been rekindled in recent months, in part because the Manhattan district attorney's office has opened its own investigation. A bank regulator questioned in the Manhattan inquiry said prosecutors are probing whether New York State banking officials—who also approved the takeover of First American in a separate proceeding in 1981—were misled into believing that BCCI would have no influence over First American's operation.

The Federal Reserve, which relied on those same commitments in approving the takeover, is closely monitoring the New York investigation. "We have been in communication with the district attorney in New York and we have provided certain information," Mattingly said.

Whatever the outcome, investigators must wrestle at some point with the unequivocal statements of Clifford, a towering figure in Washington's legal and political circles who has served as First American's chairman since the 1981 takeover. His law firm, Clifford & Warnke, has done millions of dollars in legal work for both BCCI and First American.

Clifford declared that BCCI has not exercised any control over First American, now or in the past. "There has been no participation, directly or indirectly, by BCCI," Clifford said during more than 15 hours of interviews with The Washington Post over several months.

From the outset, he said, First American's shareholders made clear to the Fed that they intended to use BCCI as their investment adviser. To comply with the shareholders' wishes, Clifford said he has periodically briefed BCCI's top executives about First American's performance and strategic planning.

The Securities and Exchange Commission files civil charges against BCCI and the other members in the takeover group, accusing them of failing to make the proper disclosures required by law. BCCI hires former secretary of defense Clark M. Clifford to defend it. Some Financial General shareholders file a lawsuit to stop the takeover. The SEC charges are settled and the lawsuit is dropped when the takeover group agrees to make a public tender offer for the outstanding shares. The Financial Times of London, reporting on an interview with the BCCI president, says Abedi asserts he is "not sure yet who will make the offer, but whoever makes it and if it succeeds, BCCI will probably manage Financial General."

1980

Financial General's shareholders agree to sell. Clifford attends a celebratory lunch in London with Abedi and the new controlling shareholder of Financial General, Sheik Kamal Adham, the former chief of Saudi intelligence. At the lunch, Adham asks Clifford to run the holding company, according to Clifford, and promises him "total authority." Adham and the other investors seek Federal Reserve Board approval of their takeover of Financial General.

Federal regulators and their counterparts in the states where Financial General has subsidiaries hold up approval of the takeover while they try to find out more about the relationship between BCCI and the new company, to be named First American Bankshares. At a special hearing, Clifford and Adham assure the regulators that BCCI will have no involvement in the management of the holding company. The takeover is approved; Clifford becomes chairman.

He described this as a limited, arms-length relationship that conforms to the formal assurances he gave the Federal Reserve at a special hearing in April 1981. Clifford appeared as both lawyer for the shareholders and as prospective chairman of the new holding company. "The representation we made was that BCCI would not manage or control First American," Clifford said. "At no time did we say that we would not have some contact with" BCCI.

He seemed mystified that questions keep cropping up about the relationship between BCCI and First American; he rejected the possibility that BCCI executives may have influenced First American without his knowledge. But he remained unshaken in his view that the facts will show that he—not BCCI—has been in charge of First American for the past nine years.

"I value the reputation I have for honesty and character," he said, offering to testify under oath that BCCI has never influenced his running of First American. "I have not dissembled in any way. Others, who are enemies of BCCI, who perhaps do not wish First American well, have attempted to assemble circumstantial evidence to disprove what I have told you."

Figuring Out BCCI

It was not the prospect of First American being controlled by a foreign bank that worried U.S. banking regulators in 1981; it was control by this particular foreign bank.

To begin with, the regulators never felt comfortable that they understood BCCI. It was chartered in Luxembourg, headquartered in London and operated through a complex corporate structure that included subsidiaries all over the world,

BCCI is indicted on charges of helping Panamanian leader Manuel Antonio Noriega launder drug money through various U.S. banks, including First American. BCCI pleads guilty to the charges and pays a $14 million fine; no charges are filed against First American, which says it had no knowledge of the transactions.

1989

Because of the BCCI prosecution, the Federal Reserve holds up First American's application to acquire the Bank of Escambia in Pensacola, Fla. After conducting a special inquiry into the relationship of the two banks and finding no evidence of BCCI exerting any improper influence over First American, the Federal Reserve approves the application.

1990

Two business publications, Regardie's and the Wall Street Journal, publish articles that note the extent to which BCCI and First American have shareholders in common. Clifford and First American President Robert A. Altman reiterate their long-standing position that BCCI has no influence over First American. During extensive interviews with Washington Post reporters, Clifford and Altman say that BCCI serves only as a "communications link" with First American's foreign investors.

including such offshore banking havens as the Cayman Islands and the Bahamas. Its investors came primarily from the Persian Gulf states of Abu Dahbi, Saudi Arabia and Kuwait.

BCCI

Founded in 1972 by Agha Hasan Abedi, a hard-driving banker from Pakistan who had financial backing from the ruling family of the United Arab Emirates, BCCI skyrocketed quickly into the ranks of the world's largest private banks. Until recent losses forced some cutbacks, it boasted of $20 billion in assets and 400 offices in 73 nations.

Unlike most large financial institutions, however, BCCI's far-flung network of banks was not regulated on a consolidated basis by any central bank, which meant its deposits were not guaranteed by a government. And that's what concerned U.S. regulators.

Then, too, there was BCCI's tarnished record when it came to First American. In 1977, BCCI helped organize a hostile takeover bid for First American's predecessor, Financial General Bankshares. A federal judge later ruled that he was persuaded that BCCI had intended, by buying shares for several clients and its own shareholders, to exert "influence on the management" of Financial General.

The Securities and Exchange Commission also accused BCCI and others of secretly acting as a group without disclosing their intentions, buying stock privately and thus depriving others of important knowledge that might affect the value of their stock. Admitting no wrongdoing, the accused group settled the suit by agreeing to make an open offer for the outstanding shares of Financial General.

The takeover succeeded; Financial General's principal stockholders agreed to sell.

But when the new shareholders' application to acquire Financial General arrived at the Federal Reserve's stately offices in October 1980, it raised eyebrows among banking regulators in Washington and in those states where Financial General had subsidiaries.

"I could not for the life of me figure out what the relationship was between BCCI and their investors and [First American's Virginia subsidiary]," said Sidney Bailey, Virginia's commissioner of financial institutions. New York banking regulators feared that "the Arab investors might have been acting for BCCI," said Geofredo Rodriquez, a New York regulator.

For years, BCCI had coveted a presence in the United States, specifically in New York, money center for international transactions. In the mid-1970s, BCCI had tried and failed to acquire a New York bank. Without an American subsidiary, BCCI could only open representative offices, which are restricted in the kinds of transactions they can handle.

Sorting this out fell to the Fed, which has had primary jurisdiction over bank holding companies since the 1930s, in the days when most banks were small, local institutions. Generally, the board reviews and approves applications without hearings; the board's investigative capabilities are small compared to the more enforcement-oriented Comptroller of the Currency. "There is a certain degree of accepting facts at face value," said Donald E. Kline, the Federal Reserve's associate director of supervision and regulation.

To clear the air, the board's professional staff decided to convene a special hearing so that regulators from different agencies could question Clifford, Altman and the new investors. "We wanted to establish that BCCI was not going to be acquiring a controlling interest in First American," Kline said.

'Passive Investors'

It was a large group that gathered on April 23, 1981, for an "informal private hearing" in Room B 1215 at the Federal Reserve's headquarters at 20th and Constitution NW. Sixteen regulators, including four state banking regulators, listened as Clifford introduced the four prospective new owners of the holding company.

First was the lead investor, Sheik Kamal Adham, former head of the Saudi Arabian intelligence service. He was followed by Faisal Saud Fallaj, the long-time chairman of Kuwait Airways, Abdul Raouf Khalil, a Saudi Arabian real estate investor, and Saved Gohary, a Saudi Arabian businessman.

They took turns in describing their ambitions for the company, which they planned to call First American Bankshares to correspond to names of its subsidiaries. The bank would continue to be "an American company," they stressed.

Adham said they would be "passive investors." The "ultimate management of the company," he said, would be left to Clifford and a board of directors with several distinguished Americans, including former senator Stuart Symington (now deceased) and Elwood R. Quesada, a retired Air Force lieutenant general.

Adham bristled at the suggestion that he was acting as a front for BCCI. "We don't need anybody to use us, to be a cover for them," he declared. "We are doing it for ourselves."

He said BCCI was his banker and that he often relied on it for investment advice. For example, he said, he had turned to BCCI in 1977 to decide whether to buy shares in Financial General during the earlier hostile takeover.

But some regulators still weren't satisfied. Near the end of the day-long hearing, Lloyd W. Bostian Jr. of the Federal Reserve's Richmond office, asked: "What precisely is their [BCCI] function, if any, in this proposal at the present time?"

Clifford stepped in. "None," he said. "There is no function of any kind on the part of BCCI. . . . I know of no present relationship. I know of no planned future relationship that exists."

Given such categorial assertions, the board had no reason to probe further. As the hearing concluded, the Federal Reserve's deputy general counsel, Robert Mannion, summarized his understanding: "It is represented in the application that BCCI is no longer involved in this particular proposal, although BCCI may continue to offer advice to individual investors."

On August 25, 1982, the Federal Reserve approved the takeover. The Comptroller of the Currency also signed off, providing its own version of the relationship. "It has now been represented to us that BCCI will have no involvement with the management and other affairs, nor will BCCI be involved in the financing arrangements," wrote Comptroller official C.F. Muckenfuss at the time.

New York state regulators insisted on holding their own hearing. According to Rodriguez, they would have rejected the application but for assurances that BCCI was, as he put it, "out of the picture."

Briefings in London

Whatever BCCI's relationship to First American, it was not out of the picture, according to information gathered from interviews and documents.

After the takeover, Clifford and Altman flew periodically to London for meetings with Abedi, BCCI's president. Occasionally, Adham sat in, too. "This relationship developed naturally," Clifford said, "but an effort has been made to make it appear sinister."

Clifford and Abedi knew each other well. They first met during the 1978 takeover fight, when BCCI had hired Clifford and his firm to represent it. For several years during the takeover battle, Clifford flew to London regularly to discuss BCCI legal business and the takeover plans. "Sometimes we were going over once a month," he said.

The two men—Clifford, the venerable Washington lawyer, and Abedi, the cultured Pakistani banker—could not have come from more different backgrounds.

Clifford, then in his late 70s, was a tall, courtly man whose features seemed chiseled in granite. He had built a career around public service and the law, serving as a top adviser to President Harry Truman and as secretary of defense in President Lyndon Johnson's Cabinet. After years of representing corporations, he decided in the twilight of his career that he wanted to run one. When Adham asked him to take on the chairmanship during a meeting with Abedi, he jumped at the chance. Now 84, he retains the energy and persuasiveness of lawyers half his age.

Abedi, by contrast, was a survivor. He had lost one bank in Pakistan to nationalization, then turned right around and created BCCI. His business instincts told him that BCCI had a ready-made market in the Third World, where credit was often scarce and many Western banks were reluctant to lend. (Abedi, 69, is now ill and declined through a spokesman to be interviewed for this article. In October, he resigned as BCCI president.)

Both men relied upon proteges. Clifford left day-to-day operations of First American to Altman, his partner at Clifford & Warnke. Abedi relied on Swaleh Naqvi, his second-in-command. "Naqvi sat in a lot with Abedi," Clifford said. "Abedi was the dreamer, the conceptualist, and Naqvi was the numbers man."

By 1982, according to Clifford, he was traveling to London "four or five times a year." Clifford said that he and Altman briefed BCCI executives on First American's recent performance, its budgets and any major plans for expansion. "We kept our investors informed through Abedi," Clifford said.

Once or twice a year, Abedi visited New York, where BCCI had a representative office. On those occasions, Clifford or Altman traveled to Manhattan and met Abedi at his preferred hotel, the Helmsley Palace.

Adham said BCCI is "in the middle to convey suggestions from Washington to the owners who are in the gulf." Then, he said, "We ask him [Abedi], 'What's your opinion?' . . . When he says it is a good move, people in the gulf listen to him."

Bank regulators such as Bailey said they were surprised to learn of these extensive discussions involving BCCI and Abedi. "I received positive, absolute assurances that there would be no such relationship with BCCI," Bailey said.

Advice From Abedi

Abedi's presence was most visibly felt in New York, where BCCI had always wanted a presence of its own. He played a major role in the hiring of Bruno Richter as chief executive officer of First American's New York subsidiary, according to Richter.

In the spring of 1983, Richter said in an interview, he was working at the Bank of America when he was approached by a BCCI executive, Khasuro Elley. At first, Richter said, he thought they were looking him over for a BCCI job. He met three times with Abedi, once in New York and then twice in London; at the second meeting, he said, Abedi "asked me if I want to consider joining First American."

At the end of their third meeting, Abedi told him, "We want you to meet with Clifford and Altman in Washington," according to Richter.

Clifford and Altman then offered him the job. Upon taking over, Richter said, he discovered that BCCI had considerable input over certain management decisions, especially the hiring of key personnel. On Abedi's recommendation, he hired a former BCCI employee, Aijaz Afridi, as his executive vice president. Richter said he wanted to attract as much business as he could from BCCI's subsidiaries and asked Abedi to "send me one of your people."

At Altman's request, Richter said, he sent another top choice, David Palmer, to London to meet Abedi. "They were checking out my resume," Palmer said of his visit to BCCI headquarters. He said he was offered a job on his return to New York.

Kline, the Federal Reserve official, said he did not understand why BCCI would participate in the hiring of key personnel: "I don't see there would be any role of BCCI in selecting the managers of individual subsidiaries."

Robert G. Stevens, the holding company's chief executive officer for seven years, said that he met Abedi at Clifford's law office when he was being interviewed for the top management position. Stevens said Clifford told him Abedi was "an adviser to the investors and he would therefore have an interest in who they were hiring as president."

Clifford said, "I thought it would be appropriate if Abedi met Stevens" so the BCCI president could "see the kind of man we were bringing in to be CEO of the holding company." But he added: "Mr. Abedi did not screen Mr. Stevens."

Stevens said he had little contact with Abedi or BCCI during his time at First American. "There certainly wasn't any relationship with BCCI at my level," Stevens said. "Whether there was a relationship at BCCI and Clifford's level, I don't know."

Asking For Money

In determining whether a bank has a "controlling influence" over another bank, the Federal Reserve also looks for signs of involvement in how a bank raises and spends capital. In this area, too, there seems to be a difference between what happened and what regulators expected.

Adham said in an interview that he borrowed money from BCCI for some of the capital to buy shares in First American's parent holding company, Credit and Commerce American Holdings NV (CCAH). The shares themselves secured the BCCI loans.

Clifford said he was unaware that any of the money was borrowed from BCCI. "I do not know what the financial relationship was with the shareholders and BCCI. We were never told that."

There were six infusions of new capital over seven years: $12 million; $89 million; $45 million; $190 million; $15 million and $50 million. Clifford said the money typically arrived from the shareholders' accounts at BCCI and that First American then issued new shares, sending them directly to the shareholders or to BCCI for distribution. (CCAH also borrowed $20 million from a BCCI subsidiary, records show, earmarked for "growth and expansion." Altman said it was a routine loan of money used as working capital for First American.)

The takeover application seemed to rule out this kind of role for BCCI, saying: "Neither is it a lender, nor will it be, with respect to the acquisition by any of the investors of shares in the holding company.

Kline of the Federal Reserve said: "That is a very clear-cut statement," which he interpreted to mean that BCCI was "not going to loan to anyone to buy the shares." Altman disagreed, saying that statement was limited to the purchase of shares during the takeover itself.

Clifford described how the capital infusions took place. "On those rare instances when we had to go to [the investors] for money, we would make the case and, each time, we got the support of Kamal Adham and of Abedi."

But, Clifford stressed, this did not mean Abedi or BCCI had any control over the money. "We make all the decisions," he reiterated.

Quesada, who retired from CCAH's board last year, had a different perception. "They [Clifford and Altman] would go to BCCI with the capitalization amount and make sure they wanted to invest," he said. "See, they were the owners of the bank, so naturally we would have to go to them for consent on matters of major magnitude. Just like an American company."

Quesada, during three interviews last fall, said he always understood that BCCI had "a controlling influence of First American Bank in Washington." According to Quesada, who served on the board until last year, BCCI had the authority to give consent to First American's plans, including expenditures. "Or withhold it," Quesada said. "They had that option."

Clifford said Quesada's perception was wrong. "I don't know how in the world he ever got that idea."

Yesterday, Quesada called The Post after talking with Altman and said that he had left the wrong impression during the interviews. "If I said what you said I have, and I may have, then I misinformed you."

BCCI, for its part, has given two responses: In a statement to The Post in September, BCCI said it "does not own any shares of First American, nor does it control, or manage First American in any way." Asked last week for any additional comment, a BCCI attorney responded yesterday: "At the direction of BCCI's new management, a review of BCCI's relationship with a number of financial institutions is underway. BCCI is therefore unable to comment on the matter at this time."

Expanding in New York

Soon after the takeover was complete, First American turned its attention to building up its New York subsidiary, which at the time was headquartered in an office at 350 Park Ave. in Manhattan. It had no established branches in New York City to serve its customers.

The official record shows that First American bought two branches from Bankers Trust Co. in 1983. According to Bankers Trust officials who handled the sale, however, the initial negotiations were conducted primarily by BCCI's Khasuro Elley.

On March 25, 1983, Elley approached Bankers Trust about buying several branches then for sale. Throughout negotiations that spanned several months, Bankers Trust officials said, they thought they were dealing with BCCI, acting on behalf of a subsidiary. "We understood that he [Elley] was representing the parent as well as First American," said Theodore Kesselman, former chief financial officer at Bankers Trust.

An initial offer—submitted May 5 in the name of First American—was rejected as too low. Ralph Perry, the Bankers Trust official handling negotiations, reported to Kesselman that Elley claimed he could not bid any higher without consulting BCCI officials in London.

Several days later, Elley and Aboli Helmi, a BCCI mergers and acquisitions specialist, met again with Perry. "After he [Elley] saw the numbers and his advisers did his homework, so to speak, I went up to the BCCI office and we sat down and talked about the whole thing," Perry said. ". . . I remember we wrote on a yellow pad some basic principles we agreed upon and initialed it."

The formal $3 million bid for the branches came later from Altman, on First American stationery. Altman said Elley was acting at his direction, not BCCI's. Altman said he "may have" first learned of the Bankers Trust branches from Abedi, who possibly told him "BCCI has looked at this and you may be interested in it."

But Altman added, "That's about as far as it went. He [Abedi] never told us to buy."

Two weeks after the offer, Elley became a senior vice president at First American. He disputed Perry's account, saying Perry did not understand the arrangement he had with First American. "There was a period of transition in which I assisted First American with the acquisition of those branches, while I was still at BCCI, but I had taken the decision to leave BCCI," Elley said. " . . . I can't recall the exact sequence of events."

Clifford, who said he made the decision to pursue and buy the Bankers Trust branches, said he was puzzled by Perry's and Kesselman's account. "The fact is that these people, who have no motive not to be truthful, recall that BCCI was behind the whole deal," Clifford said. "Does that mean that BCCI was necessarily controlling First American? I don't think that logically follows."

The Bankers Trust purchase was completed just about the time that Richter was hired to head the New York operation. His chief priority was to build an international banking operation. Richter said Abedi was an "adviser to First American" in this area. He said Abedi asked him how much new capital he would need. "I said I wanted $100 million," Richter said. Within a year, he said, $100 million arrived—$89 million in new capital, the rest from the sale of another First American asset.

Clifford disputed Richter's characterization of Abedi's role. He said that First American was merely trying to cultivate BCCI as a client because BCCI could channel foreign banking business into First American. He said he first discussed the capitalization with Adham, who came up with the figure of $100 million. "I think, again, there is a misperception," Clifford said.

The Bankers Trust acquisition demonstrates a gap in the regulatory system: To acquire the two Bankers Trust branches, First American had to file applications with the New York State Banking Department and the FDIC—but not with the Federal Reserve Board.

Those applications summarized the Bankers Trust negotiations, noted the capitalization and mentioned plans to develop a "substantial international banking business." BCCI is not mentioned on the applications.

Kline, the Federal Reserve associate director, said he does not think the 1981 representations about BCCI allow for contacts between BCCI and First American subsidiaries. "Certainly not in terms of influencing the policies or operation of a subsidiary," he said.

A Takeover in Georgia

In 1987, four years after the Bankers Trust deal, First American acquired the National Bank of Georgia (NBG). Here, too, BCCI was involved from beginning to end: helping with the negotiations, arranging for the financing and participating at the closing.

NBG was owned by Saudi financier Ghaith R.Pharaon. He had once been BCCI's largest shareholder and continued to rely upon Abedi for financial advice.

Clifford said the negotiations began with a conversation between himself and Abedi and were thereafter handled by Altman. "I dealt with Pharaon," Altman said. "I dealt with Abedi. . . . I talked to him [Abedi] on the telephone. I informed him of where we were on the deal. I explained to him our bidding. Were we asking for approval to do it? We certainly were not."

Ads Stress History, Heritage and Heroes

'Warm' Campaign Accents U.S. Values

On the television screen Vivian Taylor speaks from the heart of how her parents sacrificed to send her to college. "When people save money the way my parents did, it's an expression of love," she says.

Taylor fades from the screen and next appears the distinctive trademark of 1st American Bank, and with it the gentle, rich voice of a narrator. "We share your values and will help you save for college. We're First American. The bank for all Americans."

Four years ago, the name First American Bank was lost in the din of a crowded marketplace, languishing behind six or eight other local institutions for what marketing experts call "top-of-the-mind" awareness, according to Bruce Genther, a First American spokesman.

But after a clever television advertising campaign, beginning with a series of tongue-in-cheek historical skits that feature TV personality Willard Scott as George Washington and other American heroes, First American's marketing studies show a much improved public awareness of the company.

The ad campaign was designed to convey a "warm and fuzzy" feeling about First American, Genther said. Indeed, one videocassette tape from the company's ad agency has "1st American warm and fuzzies" on the label. A set of commercials about immigrant families ends with this voice-over: "Nearly every family can trace its heritage to one bold 'first American.' We salute the spirit of first Americans who made this country their own."

That First American's holding company is owned by investors from Saudi Arabia, Kuwait and the United Arab Emirates is an irony lost on most customers, Genther said. "We're sensitive to the issue of being foreign-owned. We know that the marketplace knows that . . . we've never shied away from that."

The television commercials were designed by the firm of Goldberg, Marchesano, Kohlman Inc. Carol Marchesano said the ads are designed to get consumers to come to know, like and trust First American. Subliminally, she said, the ads are intended to reach out to low- and middle-income depositors who might feel ignored by other advertising campaigns aimed at more affluent depositors.

Marchesano said the patriotic theme flowed from the company's corporate name. "The name is First American," she said. "So that is the most natural thing for us to promote—those things American, like the family values, like apple pie and the American flag."

—Jim McGee

Altman said Abedi had two limited roles: as a go-between who could persuade Pharaon to take First American's offer over a competing offer and as a "communications link" with the First American shareholders who were providing the $190 million that First American needed to buy NBG.

But BCCI also acted on behalf of First American as pledge agent. This meant that BCCI held the NBG stock during an option period; and then, at closing, was allowed to use the purchase funds to satisfy Pharaon's outstanding loans with BCCI.

Clifford said there was nothing unusual in BCCI's role. "It's the most natural result that one could expect," he said. "BCCI was Pharaon's bank," and both sides were comfortable with BCCI serving as midwife to the transaction.

The application for Federal Reserve approval of the NBG purchase does not mention BCCI and its various roles. If it had, "that would have triggered a red flag for us," Mattingly said.

New and Old Questions

A red flag did go up in September 1988 when a federal agent in Miami caught a BCCI executive on tape in the Noriega money-laundering case.

The executive, Amjad Awan, was secretly recorded as he talked about BCCI's operations in the United States. Awan, who was later convicted of money-laundering and sentenced to 12 years in prison, began describing his view of the relationship between BCCI and First American's shareholders from his vantage point as head of BCCI's Latin American division.

"BCCI was acting as adviser to them," Awan told the federal agent. "But the truth of the matter . . . is that the bank belongs to BCCI. Those guys [the First American investors] are just nominee shareholders."

Clifford dismissed Awan's account, saying Awan had no way of knowing the facts. "I can see how this would grab you," he said. "I can only say he is totally incorrect."

Altman said Awan and other mid-level BCCI officials mistakenly assumed that BCCI controls First American because the two banks have certain investors in common. "I've heard that officers of BCCI have made those statements, that they have this relationship to First American," Altman said. "They don't understand what the situation is."

After the money-laundering charges became public, Federal Reserve officials said, the board delayed a pending First American acquisition in Florida until a "special inquiry" was completed.

On Feb. 16, 1989, the board signed off on the Florida acquisition, concluding that First American had "adhered to their original commitments" in the 1981 hearing. "All we can do is say we looked," Mattingly said.

Turmoil continues at BCCI. Last year, it pleaded guilty in the money-laundering case and paid a $14 million fine. Several managers have gone to prison, scores have resigned or been fired. Recently, the bank announced the resignations of Abedi and Naqvi.

Meanwhile at First American, where the bank is profitable and all seems calm, Clifford and Altman wish the questions would stop. "We think that the Fed totally understands the relationship with BCCI," Altman said.

On a wall inside First American's tastefully furnished board room at its 15th and H streets NW headquarters, is a portrait of Clifford placed directly behind his seat at the conference table. This image—that of a distinguished American presiding over a healthy, well-managed bank—is more than just corporate symbolism; it is the bank's best defense.

"This has been an exceedingly personal operation," said Clifford. "I would not have taken [the job] if I had not been assured that I had total authority to run that bank. And at no time has that authority been interfered with."

Staff researchers Lucy Shackelford and Bruce Brown contributed to this report.

On 2/7/91, I attended a meeting at the U.S. Attorney's Office, Washington, D.C., concerning the captioned matter and called by AUSA [redacted] Criminal Division. Others in attendance were: AUSA [redacted] Economic Crimes Unit, USAO, WDC; [redacted] Fraud Section, DOJ, telephone [redacted], also of the DOJ Fraud Section; Assistant District Attorney (ADA) [redacted] Investigations, New York County District Attorney's Office (NYCDAO), One Hogan Place, N.Y., N.Y. 10013, telephone [redacted]; ADA [redacted], NYCDAO. The meeting was called at Chief [redacted] suggestion to determine from the NYCDAO representatives whether the results of an ongoing investigation being conducted by the NYCDAO into the BANK OF CREDIT AND COMMERCE INTERNATIONAL (BCCI) have applicability in the captioned matter or, possibly, other federal violations. b6 b7C

ADA [redacted] said the NYCDAO has been investigating BCCI under N.Y.'s "enterprise corruption" statute for several years. In fact, he reported, the ten-year statute of limitations tolls on the suspected violation at the end of this year. The NYCDAO has been in contact with the same attorneys who provided the Federal Reserve Board (FRB) with the information contained in the criminal referral form which initiated the captioned matter; [redacted] all with the firm of Patton Boggs & Blow (PB&B), 2550 M Street, NW, WDC 20037, telephone (202)457-6310. PB&B apparently has been retained by the new ownership of BCCI in response to several ongoing inquiries: the NYCDAO case; the captioned matter; two federal cases (a tax matter and some other kind of criminal matter) in the Southern District of Florida (SDF). criminal attorney, has responded to a plea offer made by NYCDAO by suggesting "a global settlement" of all the pending matters, both state and federal, possibly involving his clients--the current owners of "77.4% of BCCI."

The NYCDAO's investigation indicates that current management and past owners of BCCI are possible targets for other (unspecified) violations within its jurisdiction. The offer NYCDAO extended to Liebman was to allow BCCI to plead the corporation to the "enterprise corruption" charge (which essentially involves a false statement to the state banking regulator), in return for meaningful cooperation in aiding the effort to identify and target the other criminal, state violations. Such a plea (or conviction at trial) would result only in "insignificant" monetary sanctions, ADA [redacted] said. b6 b7C BCCI, however, is trying to avoid having to plead the corporation in a U.S. criminal case because doing so will likely result in revocations of its British and European licenses to operate. Instead, BCCI, through [redacted] has been offering cooperation to expose the alleged perpetrators of "perhaps the biggest swindle ever," which one source has told NYCDAO has caused losses to BCCI at or in excess of $1 billion.

ADAs [redacted] said that, due to grand jury b6 b7C secrecy requirements, they could not disclose the existence or nature of evidence which has been made available to NYCDAO during the course of its investigation, unless the DOJ and/or the USAOs, WDC and SDF, wanted to become parties to that investigation in a joint effort with NYCDAO, preferably conducted through the N.Y. grand jury. In fact, ADA [redacted] requested that such a joint effort be considered. While not foreclosing the possibility of a joint investigation, Chief [redacted] and AUSA [redacted] said they were not prepared to take that step without first approaching [redacted] with a request for cooperation. Both also said they were not inclined to sign on to a "global settlement" which might preclude further investigation/prosecution of federal violations as yet unknown.

ADA [redacted] said that [redacted] has produced some records, b6 b7C such as a redaction of a Price Waterhouse audit of BCCI. However, the new owners of BCCI, when the alleged fraud was discovered, took all the company records to Abu Dhabi. The NYCDAO's proposed agreement, however, requires production of all documents and witnesses, and the means to find correlative evidence. ADA [redacted] did note that the FRB had received a "6E" exemption from the N.Y. court and, thereafter, had received the redaction of the audit report. This was news to Messrs. [redacted] who had attended the meeting at the FRB when the information in the referral form was received from [redacted]. At that time, Chief [redacted] asked the three if there was an audit report available. The three of them responded at once, but in a somewhat confusing manner: two of them nodding their heads in the affirmative, the other shaking his head in the negative.

Chief [redacted] and AUSA [redacted] agreed that the DOJ and USAO, WDC, would approach [redacted] et al, with a request for full cooperation as an indication of the innocence of their clients. If that approach is rebuffed, then DOJ personnel would be assigned to review and evaluate NYCDAO's evidence, using a "Chinese wall," to decide whether DOJ and the USAOs, WDC and SDF, should "buy into" a joint investigation with NYCDAO. b6 b7C

AUSA [redacted] said the captioned matter should be investigated anyway, given the apparent violation of T. 18, U.S.C., S. 1001. Other possible violations include T. 18, U.S.C., S. 1847 (Bank Holding Act--violation of which is a felony) and T. 18, U.S.C., S. 1005 (False Statements, in this case, made to the FEDERAL RESERVE BOARD). b6 b7C

It is therefore recommended this matter be opened and assigned.

On 2/19/91, I met with [redacted] b6 b7C Division of Banking Supervision and Regulation, Board of Governors of the Federal Reserve System (FRS), 20th & C Streets, NW, Washington, D.C. 20551, telephone [redacted] to discuss the criminal referral form he filed, which initiated the captioned matter. [redacted] formerly an assistant U.S. attorney and, currently, an attorney in the "Enforcement Unit" of the FRS, said he had referred the matter to DOJ in the belief there is a "good criminal case" contained in the findings of his investigation. Essentially, the case is one of an ongoing series of false statements made to the FRS about the ownership and control of FIRST AMERICAN BANKSHARES and its subsidiary, FIRST AMERICAN BANK.

Knowledge of the false statements came to light after the 4/90 money-laundering convictions of the BANK OF CREDIT AND COMMERCE INTERNATIONAL (BCCI) in the Middle District of Florida caused the new owners of BCCI to bring in auditors to examine all of its operations. That audit disclosed that BCCI was under-capitalized by about $1 billion, and caused the Abu Dhabi contingent of stockholders, who owned about 35% of BCCI, to seek an infusion of capital from the other owners, mainly some Saudis who owned over 40% of BCCI. When the Saudis refused, the Abu Dhabi contingent bought out the Saudis, thereby becoming majority owners. A subsequent, more extensive audit by the new owners revealed a much larger need for capital, due to a series of questionable loan transactions which resulted, among other things, in BCCI owning at least 58% of the outstanding shares of the company which owns FIRST AMERICAN BANKSHARES: a violation of the Bank Holding Act, T. 12, U.S.C., S. 1847, which prohibits undisclosed, unregistered, foreign ownership of more than 25% of any American bank.

BCCI's ownership of FIRST AMERICAN BANKSHARES came about by virtue of a series of loans BCCI made, beginning as early as 1978, to the "shareholders" of CREDIT AND COMMERCE AMERICAN HOLDINGS, N.V. (CCAH), Netherlands, Antilles; a "shell" set up for the purpose of acquiring FIRST AMERICAN BANKSHARES' predecessor, FINANCIAL GENERAL BANKSHARES. Those loans, and others that followed (probably in and after 1982), were of the "non-recourse" variety, secured by shares in CCAH, and were made to subjects [redacted] b6 b7C all comprising the [redacted] in CCAH. Subjects [redacted] and CLIFFORD were [redacted] in CCAH (more on this below), using BCCI loans to purchase their stock. BCCI has now disclosed to the FRS that (1) these loans were never serviced, (2) they were not defaulted (before the new owners took over), and (3) that there seemed to be no correlation between the amount of CCAH shares owned/pledged and the amount of a loan. In assuming control over the collateral--amounting to 58% of the outstanding CCAH shares--BCCI assumed control of FIRST AMERICAN BANKSHARES, thereby committing the felony violation of the Bank Holding Act (T. 12, USC, S. 1847).

"If what BCCI says is true," [redacted] said, "then the CCAH people lied (to the FRS in their original filing and all ensuing, yearly ones) about ever getting financing from BCCI." Included in the "CCAH people" are the captioned subjects, with CLIFFORD, [redacted] comprising four of the five [redacted] CCAH; the fifth being the "trust company" in Curacao, where CCAH is headquartered. In addition, [redacted] FIRST AMERICAN CORPORATION--a Delaware corporation which supposedly owns FIRST AMERICAN BANKSHARES; CLIFFORD is chairman of the board of FIRST AMERICAN BANKSHARES, [redacted]. CLIFFORD and [redacted] law firm which either represents, or has represented, all of the entities involved, from BCCI on down the ladder to FIRST AMERICAN BANK.

According to [redacted], BCCI has disclosed that [redacted] b6 b7C and CLIFFORD's purchases of CCAH stock were made with BCCI loans in 1986 and again in 1987. Documents now in FRS custody reveal that, in 1986, [redacted] borrowed between $4 million and $5 million, and CLIFFORD borrowed about twice that amount, and both used all the proceeds to buy CCAH shares at approximately $2,230 each. In

1987, [redacted] borrowed about $1 million, and CLIFFORD $2 million, again using all of it to buy CCAH shares, this time at approximately $2,240 each. On both occasions, they executed promissory notes, and pledge agreements of the shares as collateral. However, BCCI has found that, in each case, there were "side letters" to CLIFFORD and [redacted] in which BCCI agreed: (1) to disregard the promissory notes and pledge agreements, and automatically renew the loans; (2) that, when either or both were ready to sell the shares, BCCI would find a buyer; (3) that there was no need for either to pay principal or interest (although prior to the 1987 loans, CLIFFORD did pay about $600,000 interest and loaned [redacted] about $350,000 so he could do the same); (4) that when the shares were sold, [redacted] and CLIFFORD would get at least what they had paid for them, plus any profit. b6 b7C

In or about 3/88, [redacted] and CLIFFORD decided to sell their CCAH shares. They were purchased by another CCAH shareholder, [redacted] (see 5/90 Regardie's article, p.69), who paid them $6,800 per share, i.e., about three times the book value. [redacted] realized a profit of about $3 million (although he claims it was about $900,000 after commissions and repayment of CLIFFORD), and CLIFFORD, about $6 million. In December, 1989, still curious about BCCI's role in all of this, the FRS, in the person of [redacted] wrote to [redacted] asking disclosure of any BCCI loans ever used for the purchase of CCAH shares. [redacted] answer did not disclose the loans he and CLIFFORD received. [redacted] now says that, because the loans had been repaid, he thought [redacted] wasn't interested in them. [redacted] believes that such an insider stock deal may be a securities violation.) b6 b7C

The FRS has all CCAH documents, supposedly in the U.S., by virtue of a civil subpoena. [redacted] was unsure whether an "access letter" would suffice for us to examine them, or a subpoena would be required. All the BCCI loan documents are in Abu Dhabi, however, and the FRS is negotiating with BCCI to at most get them to the U.S., or at least to some neutral site for examination. BCCI is also on the verge of agreeing to cease and desist doing business in the U.S., and to put together a divestiture plan. b6 b7C

Fed Makes Criminal, Civil Referrals To U.S. Regarding First American Unit

By Peter Truell
Staff Reporter of The Wall Street Journal

WASHINGTON—The Federal Reserve has made criminal and civil referrals to the Justice Department concerning possible misrepresentations of the capital and ownership structure behind First American Bankshares Inc., according to people close to the matter.

The Fed's concerns are based on the discovery by regulators that to a significant degree, the ultimate ownership and financing of First American Bankshares and its parent First American Corp. was tied to Bank of Credit & Commerce International, an institution that last year pleaded guilty to money-laundering charges in Tampa, Fla.

Some shareholders in Credit & Commerce American Holdings N.V., a Netherlands Antilles-based holding company for First American, borrowed money from BCCI to finance their shares in the Netherlands Antilles company, and pledged the stock as collateral, according to people close to the matter.

First American, with $11 billion in assets, is the largest bank holding company in the Washington area, and has banking operations in the District of Columbia, New York, Virginia, Maryland, Georgia, Tennessee and Florida. Its chairman is Clark Clifford, who is a prominent figure in Washington political and legal circles. Mr. Clifford also was an adviser to President Harry S. Truman and a defense secretary in the Johnson administration.

The Fed made the referrals to the Justice Department just over two weeks ago, according to people familiar with the matter. Spokesmen for the Fed and the Justice Department declined to comment. Referrals to the department do not necessarily mean that any legal action will be taken.

If bank loans were covertly used to finance First American's capital, it would break regulations and laws regarding disclosure for bank holding companies.

It also could mean that First American Bankshares was in effect a subsidiary of BCCI. If so, that would have caused regulators to be more cautious in their supervision of First American. BCCI, which is often seen as an unorthodox bank, was until recently based in both Luxembourg and the Cayman Islands, tax havens that don't have strong central bank regulators. After reporting hundreds of millions of dollars of losses last year, it moved its headquarters to Abu Dhabi, United Arab Emirates, but still is beset by billions of dollars in problem loans.

First American has asserted that it is an independent bank since at least April 1981, when a group of major Middle Eastern investors represented by Mr. Clifford told the Federal Reserve and other bank regulators that they were "a group of individuals acting as individuals" using their own financial resources to acquire First American's predecessor company. Mr. Clifford and his law partner, Robert Altman, became the bank holding company's chairman and president, respectively, once the investor group completed the takeover in 1982.

However, lawyers involved in the case said that last year, representatives of Abu Dhabi's government found that nonperforming bank loans at BCCI had been used by Middle East investors to purchase stock in Credit & Commerce American Holdings, with the loans secured by the stock.

Abu Dhabi began looking into the matter after its ruler, Sheik Zayed al-Nahyan, effectively took over BCCI last year. "I think that essentially once the new majority shareholders [of BCCI] became aware there were potential problems under U.S. law, they authorized us to go to the U.S. authorities and resolve outstanding issues there may be," said Middleton Martin, a partner at the Washington law firm of Patton, Boggs & Blow, which is representing Sheik Zayed and the Abu Dhabi government. Since Patton Boggs took over responsibility for the case, they have been in continual discussion with the Federal Reserve, Mr. Martin said.

In an interview Friday, Mr. Altman denied that he or Mr. Clifford knew anything about bank loans from BCCI being used for the capital of First American's parent. "I don't have any information regarding any of these alleged financing arrangements," he said. First American, he added, "has been operated properly and responsibly and in compliance with all rules and regulations since 1982 to date." Mr. Altman also said, "I am unaware of the referrals" to the Justice Department, and added that since the takeover, there had been "no interference of any kind by BCCI in the operation of First American either directly or indirectly."

Referring to the 1981 Federal Reserve examination of the bid made for First American's predecessor—Financial General Bankshares Inc.—by the group of Middle Eastern investors, Mr. Altman said, "whatever facts we knew that bore on that [takeover and the financing of it] were presented at that time."

Mr. Clifford didn't return telephone calls seeking comment, but Mr. Altman said that he also spoke for Mr. Clifford.

First American's condition is comparable to other big banks in the Washington area, according to people in and close to the bank. According to unaudited quarterly results for the quarter ended last Sept. 30, filed with the Federal Reserve, First American Bankshares had total assets of $11.15 billion, down from $11.63 billion at June 30. For the first six months of 1990, it had a net loss of $22.8 million, compared with net income of $30.3 million a year earlier, according to a report dated June 30.

The bank holding company, partly as a result of tortuous negotiations with Abu Dhabi, recently received a capital injection of several tens of millions of dollars from the Abu Dhabi government. Because the BCCI loans backed by Credit & Commerce American Holdings stock are nonperforming, Sheik Zayed now has a controlling interest in First American's parent.

The ownership structure behind First American is complicated. First American Bankshares is owned by First American Corp., which in turn is owned by Credit and Commerce American Holdings, which is in turn owned by Credit & Commerce American Investment N.B., Amsterdam, Netherlands. Mr. Altman said there hadn't been changes in CCAH's shareholder register over the past several years. The companies aren't formally affiliated with BCCI, but there is a considerable overlap in shareholders of BCCI and these Dutch and Netherlands Antilles companies.

BCCI has problems of its own, and one of the regulators' first jobs has been to ensure that capital from the Washington bank wasn't used to plug holes elsewhere in the ailing BCCI network. BCCI has moved its headquarters to Abu Dhabi and has shrunk to 359 branches from about 400 a year ago, according to Clement Gagne, a lawyer at Janis, Schuelke & Wechler, which also represents BCCI.

In addition, even after an Abu Dhabi government injection of $1 billion early in 1990, there are considerable amounts of nonperforming loans, which some people close to the bank said total as much as $4 billion to $5 billion.

Fed Probes Foreign Links To First American Bank

Overseas Asset Transfers Barred as Safeguard

By Jim McGee

Washington Post Staff Writers

The Federal Reserve Board yesterday disclosed it is investigating whether the Bank of Credit and Commerce International (BCCI), a foreign bank based in the Persian Gulf, is a secret investor in First American Bankshares Inc. of Washington and said it has issued an order barring any transactions between the two institutions.

Federal Reserve officials have been told that BCCI acquired control of shares in First American's parent company without the approval of state and federal bank regulators, according to informed sources. A senior Fed official said the order is a "precautionary measure put into place to protect the bank [First American] while the Federal Reserve completes its investigation."

The Fed also referred the matter to the Justice Department for review of possible criminal or civil charges, sources said.

First American, the area's largest bank holding company and parent of First American Banks of Washington, Maryland and Virginia, lost a record $182.5 million in 1990 because of the deteriorating commercial real estate market, according to documents that the privately held bank company filed this week with federal banking regulators.

In response to the losses, the second-highest recorded by a local financial institution, First American's longtime chief executive, C. Jackson Ritchie Jr., has been forced to resign and nearly 100 employees have been laid off, sources said.

First American President Robert Altman yesterday confirmed the loss and layoffs and said Ritchie resigned on his own initiative.

Sources said the Fed is concerned about possible transfers of funds from First American to BCCI, a Middle East bank that is reportedly suffering from heavy losses.

Last year, BCCI was fined more than $14 million by a U.S. court after pleading guilty to federal charges of money-laundering in a case that documented the movement of funds controlled by former Panamanian leader Manuel Antonio Noriega through a BCCI account at First American.

First American, which operates eight banks with 295 branches in the District, Maryland, Virginia, Tennessee, New York, Georgia and Florida, is organized as a network of holding companies, owned by Credit and Commerce American Holdings (CCAH), based in the Netherlands Antilles.

It is run by two Washington attorneys, Altman and Chairman Clark M. Clifford, a member of former President Lyndon Johnson's cabinet and one of the nation's most prominent attorneys.

Provision for loan losses is the amount that the bank added to its total reserve against bad loans in 1990.

Altman consented to the order barring transactions between First American and BCCI, saying, "I think it is a prudent step for the Fed to take and one we were willing to take."

Altman, who has repeatedly asserted that neither he nor Clifford is aware of any financial arrangements between BCCI and First American's shareholders, promised to cooperate with the investigation. "We have always conducted business with BCCI on an arms-length basis," Altman said.

Because First American is privately held, the company, with $11 billion in assets, does not publicly disclose its financial performance. But like all bank companies, First American does file summary financial results with the Federal Reserve.

According to these filings, First American has lent more than $1 billion for real estate construction and land development through its various banking subsidiaries, leaving it vulnerable to any downturn in the commercial real estate market.

In 1990, more than half of the bank company's losses came from its banking subsidiaries in the Washington metropolitan area, where the commercial real estate market has been in a deep recession. Included among First American's troubled commercial real estate loans is a $6 million unsecured loan to developer Dominic F. Antonelli Jr., who recently filed for bankruptcy protection from creditors. The First American banks in the District, Maryland and Virginia lost more than $96 million in 1990, compared with earnings of $64 million in 1989. Troubled real estate assets at the three banks totaled more than $100 million at the end of 1990.

Altman said yesterday that he believes the loss of $139 million recorded by First American Bankshares Inc. reflects the bank company's problems more accurately than the larger loss recorded by First American Corp. He said he expects a profitable year in 1991.

Altman said the 1990 results reflect the bank's forceful measures to write off bad real estate loans and to set aside reserves as protection against possible future problem loans. First American remains in compliance with all federal standards for capital, the financial cushion that protects against any loan losses, he said. The bank company recently received an $80 million addition to its capital from its principal shareholders in Abu Dhabi, Altman added.

According to one First American executive, who declined to be identified, the bank "did everything it could to keep the losses a secret. They even went so far as to keep us from taking notes on the problems at management meetings. They didn't want any written record of the problems."

The Fed's inquiry follows a series of allegations that began more than a year ago suggesting an unusual relationship between BCCI and First American.

A senior Fed official said the board acted because it now has grounds to believe that BCCI might have a substantial ownership interest in First American.

On Feb. 3, The Washington Post reported that BCCI has had an extensive relationship with First American that appears contrary to what federal regulators said they were told when they approved the takeover of First American in 1981.

The Fed and the New York State Bank Board approved the takeover in 1981 after being assured by Clifford that BCCI would have no control or influence over First American.

The Fed approval was based on an application that said of BCCI, "neither is it a lender, nor will it be, with respect to the acquisition by any of the investors" of shares in CCAH.

Sheik Kamal Adham, the controlling shareholder of CCAH, told The Post that some of the money he put into CCAH as capital was borrowed from BCCI through loans secured by his shares in CCAH.

The Feb. 3 article also detailed how BCCI executives participated in the hiring of three First American executives after 1982 and helped negotiate two important First American acquisitions.

The Fed was told last fall that the New York County district attorney's office had "developed evidence that, in fact, BCCI had a controlling interest in CCAH," according to Manhattan District Attorney Robert Morgenthau.

New York County prosecutors also obtained information about large loans from BCCI, which were secured by shares in CCAH.

Those loans, first discovered by the accounting firm of Price Waterhouse, are not paying interest, the prosecutors reported. "We told them that," Morgenthau said in an interview with The Post.

While this criminal investigation progressed, the ruling family of the United Arab Emirates, headed by Sheik Zayed al-Nahyan, acquired full control of BCCI.

Their attorneys, in recent discussions with the Fed, have acknowledged that BCCI owns a substantial portion of CCAH shares, sources said.

"We have gone to the Fed and indicated that the new owners have recently become aware of past actions of former management that may have created certain legal problems in the U.S.," said attorney Middleton Martin, who declined further comment.

Fed May Force Sale Of First American

U.S. Probes Legality of Ownership Change

By Joël Glenn Brenner
and Jim McGee
Washington Post Staff Writers

The Federal Reserve Board may require the sale of First American Bankshares Inc., the largest bank holding company in Washington, if it finds that a controlling stake in the company was acquired illegally, sources said yesterday.

Federal Reserve officials are investigating reports that the Bank of Credit and Commerce International (BCCI), a foreign bank based in the Persian Gulf, owns at least 25 percent of the offshore parent of First American Bankshares, stock it obtained without the approval of state and federal banking regulators, according to informed sources. A 25 percent holding would give BCCI control of First American.

BCCI has been owned by the ruling family of the United Arab Emirates since last year. Upon taking control, they told Fed officials they discovered approximately $1 billion in loans by BCCI that were backed by shares in First American's parent company, sources said. Shares controlled outright by BCCI reportedly gave it more than 25 percent control in First American's holding company, Credit and Commerce American Holdings, sources said.

Fed officials were assured nearly a decade ago by Washington attorney Clark M. Clifford that BCCI would not be involved in the ownership or control of First American.

Clifford took over as chairman of First American following Fed approval of the takeover of the bank company by Middle East investors. Banking regulators are concerned about a link between the two banks in part because BCCI is said to be suffering from heavy losses.

On Wednesday, the Fed made public an order barring any transactions between First American and BCCI, which last year was fined more than $14 million after pleading guilty to money laundering charges. Some of the funds moved through a BCCI account at First American.

Analysts said numerous institutions and investors would likely be interested in buying First American shares.

A Fed spokesman would not comment publicly on the investigation or a possible forced sale of First American stock. "If divestiture were required it would be done in an orderly way so as not to injure First American bank," said a senior Fed official.

Banking analysts said yesterday that numerous institutions and wealthy investors would likely be interested in buying shares in First American, which is the 51st-largest in the nation.

Although the market for bank mergers and acquisitions has cooled considerably during the past year as bankers' real estate woes have worsened, analysts said First American's attractive banking franchise could spark a hot bidding contest involving sociates Inc. "If they needed to sell, it wouldn't be a problem."

The First American banks of Washington, Maryland and Virginia have combined assets of $7 billion and a network of branches that stretches from Norfolk to Gaithersburg.

In addition to its local presence, First American operates banks in Tennessee, New York, Georgia and Florida. The company has assets of $11 billion.

Although sources said divestiture of ownership is a likely outcome of the Fed's investigation, a sale of shares in the bank company could be complicated by the legal questions surrounding First American's ownership.

Among the local banks that could bid for the company and solidify their positions in the Washington market are C&S/Sovran Corp., Crestar Financial Corp. and Signet Banking Corp.

Among the possible outside bidders for the company, analysts said, are NCNB Corp. of Charlotte, N.C.; First Wachovia Corp. of Winston-Salem, N.C.; and Banc One Corp. of Columbus, Ohio.

Congress Winks at a Bank Scandal

The Federal Reserve Board has finally cracked down on the high-flying Bank of Credit and Commerce International. The bank, based in Luxembourg, has agreed to cut its ties to Washington, D.C.'s largest bank and cease U.S. operations. B.C.C.I. pleaded guilty last year to laundering millions in drug money for, among others, Panama's deposed leader, Manuel Noriega.

While the Fed's order should halt B.C.C.I.'s suspect American activities, it leaves a big mystery: How did this global renegade control a large American bank — First American Bankshares — without the knowledge or approval of Federal authorities? The question deserves far more attention than Congress has seen fit to give it.

B.C.C.I. was founded in 1972 by an ambitious Pakistani financier with capital from Arab investors and the Bank of America. It grew spectacularly, to $20 billion in assets with more than 300 branches in dozens of countries.

U.S. regulators rejected its bid for two American banks in the mid-1970's, citing inadequate information. But in 1981 the Federal Reserve approved the sale of Washington's First American Bankshares to a group of Middle East investors who used B.C.C.I. loans to buy it.

Federal authorities were suspicious of the B.C.C.I. connection even then, but were assured by Clark Clifford, the prominent Washington lawyer and influential political adviser to Presidents, that there would be no link. Mr. Clifford, whose firm represents B.C.C.I., became chairman of First American Bankshares after the takeover.

Subsequent re-examinations also failed to establish any tie, and both First American and Mr. Clifford still insist that B.C.C.I. has never exercised any control over the bank's management or operations. Since last year B.C.C.I. has been controlled by the ruling Sheik of Abu Dhabi, who put up $1 billion to rescue it from financial difficulties that followed the money-laundering plea.

The matter has been brought to light in the past year by money-laundering investigations in Washington and New York, and by reporters for The Wall Street Journal and The Washington Post. A former Senate staff counsel took information to the Manhattan District Attorney, Robert Morgenthau, last fall when he couldn't arouse interest in Washington. Mr. Morgenthau started an investigation and alerted Washington, and the Fed recently referred its own findings to the Justice Department for possible criminal or civil prosecution.

This may only be a case of one foreign bank evading regulation, as Federal regulators say it is. But it may reveal a loophole for foreign banks that needs plugging. B.C.C.I.'s alleged control of First American Bankshares runs through a holding company in the Cayman Islands. At the least, Congress and the Federal Reserve itself should be asking how the linkage escaped detection for so long. Was it willful concealment, political clout or insufficient probing?

Answers aren't known yet, but it is time to ask. Congress has been singularly uninquisitive.

Foreign Bank Must Sell 1st American Stake

By Jim McGee
Washington Post Staff Writer

The Federal Reserve Board yesterday ordered foreign-based Bank of Credit and Commerce International (BCCI) to sell its hidden stake in the parent firm of First American Bankshares, ending a decade of speculation about whether BCCI was a secret owner of Washington's largest bank holding company.

The Fed's order gave BCCI 60 days to submit a written plan for selling the stock, which the Fed would have to approve before any transfer could take place. The 10-page order provided no specific details about BCCI's holding, such as its size, when it was acquired and whether BCCI would have to sell the stock on the open market.

The order leaves in doubt who will ultimately end up owning First American's parent firm, which oversees a valuable franchise with $11 billion in assets with eight subsidiaries in six states and the District. It is the nation's 51st-largest bank holding company, with more than 190 branches in the Washington region alone.

Another part of the Fed's order, however, left no uncertainty. BCCI "voluntarily agreed" to shut down its U.S. operations, including two representative banks in New York and Los Angeles. This action leaves the worldwide banking giant, which has 400 branches in more than 68 countries and assets in excess of $19 billion, with no U.S. outlet.

Bank Must Sell Stake in 1st American

BCCI, From A1

Ordinarily, a divestiture order would spark a flurry of interest among potential bidders, but several bankers contacted yesterday suggested that the Fed's timetable may be too short to allow other banks to mount a bid for the BCCI stake.

"There's very little financial information available about First American and very little understanding of how many shares would ultimately be sold," said a banking consultant who has received several inquiries about the bank. "That makes it tough for anyone to think seriously about purchasing" the stock.

The Fed's order culminated several weeks of intense negotiations with BCCI and its new owner, Sheik Zayed bin Sultan al Nahayan, the ruler of Abu Dhabi. The negotiations began, sources said, after Zayed's attorneys told U.S. regulators that an audit had showed BCCI controlled a substantial percentage of the stock—an apparent violation of federal banking laws because the Fed had never approved any such acquisition.

To order BCCI to sell its stake in First American's parent firm, Credit and Commerce American Holdings (CCAH), the Fed had to be persuaded that BCCI owned at least 25 percent—the legal threshold for a controlling interest, Fed officials said.

The Fed believed for many years that CCAH was owned by several investors from Kuwait, Saudi Arabia and Abu Dhabi, who were longtime clients or shareholders of BCCI. In 1981, after a special hearing, the Fed allowed these investors to acquire First American after getting assurances that BCCI would have no control over the bank's management and operations.

At the time, the investors declared: "BCCI owns no shares of [CCAH] either directly or indirectly, nor will it if the application is approved. Neither is it a lender, nor will it be with respect to the acquisition by any of the investors of . . . CCAH shares."

In a statement yesterday, First American said the bank had no knowledge of how BCCI acquired the stock and noted that the Fed order said nothing about the management of First American. "BCCI has not, directly or indirectly, ever controlled the actual management or operations of First American," the statement said.

In a statement last Friday, First American said: "If the Federal Reserve has been misled or misinformed in any respect regarding the stock ownership of First American . . . First American has been equally misled."

Manhattan District Attorney Robert Morgenthau, who is conducting a grand jury investigation into the matter said yesterday the Fed's order "means false representations, false filings were made to the Superintendent of Banks in New York," when state regulators approved the 1981 takeover of the holding company.

The divestiture order represents a major reversal for BCCI, which has been floundering since it pleaded guilty last year to money-laundering charges and began suffering major loan losses.

BCCI Chief Executive Officer Zafar Iqbal signed the "cease and desist" order yesterday in Abu Dhabi. The order said that BCCI does not admit to any allegation "made or implied" in the document.

BCCI's audit revealed that BCCI had made several loans to CCAH stockholders, who in turn secured the loans with the CCAH stock. The loans became nonperforming, meaning no payments were being made, leaving BCCI with effective control of the stock. Auditors found that the loans were hidden from BCCI's board of directors, according to sources familiar with the audit.

BCCI could, in its written plan, suggest that it sell the CCAH shares to Zayed, a longtime shareholder in both BCCI and CCAH. Zayed could pay off the loans and thus redeem the stock, leaving him in control of CCAH.

But it is unclear if the Fed would approve such a plan. According to one Fed official, Zayed would face questions because of his longtime association with BCCI. If the Fed objected to his ownership, said the official, a more traditional sale would then be likely.

"There is nothing on the table yet," said the official. "The plan could call for transfer to Sheik Zayed, or an outright sale to a third party."

The controversy over First American's ownership, long dormant, became public again recently after a Feb. 3 article in The Washington Post. The article, based on a nine-month inquiry, said that BCCI had had an extensive, long-term involvement in the affairs of First American that was contrary to what bank regulators had originally approved. BCCI participated in the hiring of three key First American executives, helped negotiate two important First American acquisitions and helped finance First American's dramatic expansion.

First American's chairman, Clark Clifford, and its president, Robert Altman, said in interviews with The Post that they had full control of the bank and that BCCI had no ownership, control or influence. They said they had no knowledge of any financial dealings between BCCI and the CCAH shareholders.

Sudafed Poisoning Probe

Investigators Suspect Capsule Tampering Conf

By Malcolm Gladwell
Washington Post Staff Writer

Federal officials probing the cyanide contamination of "Sudafed 12-Hour" capsules reported progress yesterday in investigating how at least five packages of the decongestant sold in the Seattle area came to be spiked with poison.

Investigators say they now believe that the tampering—which has so far resulted in two deaths, one serious illness and a continuing nationwide recall of the product—was specific to three counties of western Washington state and that it was sufficiently amateurish that upon close examination, a contaminated package would be obviously suspect. They also said that the crime appeared to have been facilitated by the failure of anti-tampering precautions taken by the product's manufacturer to alert retailers and consumers.

These conclusions are based on analysis in the past two days of close to 10,000 Sudafed 12-Hour packages sold around the country, as well as close scrutiny of the fourth contaminated Sudafed package discovered in Tacoma. A fifth contaminated package was discovered yesterday afternoon by another Tacoma woman.

Sudafed 12-Hour capsules are supposed to be protected by four tamper-resistant features. The two-part plastic capsules containing the drug are sealed with a band intended to make it obvious if the capsule has been opened.

The capsules are then encased in a "blister pack," consisting of a clear plastic bubble with a tinfoil backing. The end of the cardboard box is also sealed with a safety tab, which would be broken if the package had been blister packs into different boxes at a later point, possibly even in the stores where they were later sold. Investigators said it is unclear how a capsule could have been removed and then reinserted into a blister pack without damaging it in an obvious way.

The matching serial numbers are the principal reason that investigators believe, for the time being, that the crime was local to the Seattle area. The common number indicated a manufacturing lot that was sent only to stores in the region.

Upon examination of Sudafed 12-Hour capsules boxes from around the nation yesterday, FDA investigators also discovered how the perpetrator may have slipped contaminated blister packs into new boxes. The safety tabs that are supposed to seal the box tops are not always intact.

"In some stores where we looked, the tab had already been broken from jostling and handling," said an FDA official. "Someone might have slipped them into boxes where the tab was alrcady broken."

The fourth Sudafed box handed over to FBI officials Sunday night also yielded important clues. Unlike

On 2/28/91 I met with Assistant United States Attorney (AUSA) [redacted] Washington, D.C., and D.O.J. Fraud Section [redacted] telephone [redacted], concerning the captioned matter. [redacted] has been assigned by D.O.J. to the USAO, WDC, to assist AUSA [redacted] in the investigation and possible prosecution of the captioned matter. The purpose for this meeting was to discuss possible violations and avenues of investigation with regard to this case. b6 b7C

Administratively, any prosecution of this matter would be brought through the U.S. Attorney's Office, WDC. There apparently are other districts which have an investigative interest in the Bank of Credit and Commerce International (BCCI), those being the Southern District of New York, the Middle District of Florida and the Southern District of Florida. That being the case, D.O.J. will act as a coordinator and facilitator of the investigations in the various districts. Toward that end, a meeting is scheduled for 3/14/91, at which representatives from the USAOs, WDC, SDNY, MDF and SDF will meet with D.O.J. Fraud Section Chief, [redacted] b6 b7C

In addition to the initial indications that false statement violations occurred with regard to the ownership of Credit and Commerce American Holdings, N.V. (CCAH), by BCCI, [redacted] believe that a "thorough look" at the filings and what lies behind them will reveal other violations. Specifically, [redacted] suggested there are possible violations of Title 12, USC Section 3100, which proscribes foreign bank participation in the United States; bank fraud violations associated with any possible loans from First American Bank to BCCI or any related entities; Title 31, USC Section 5314, the Bank Secrecy Act, which requires the reporting of cash transactions exceeding $10,000 and any relationships between U.S. b6 b7C

1st American Official Offers Ownership Change Plan

SHEIK ZAYED AL-NAHYAN
... could gain controlling interest

By Joël Glenn Brenner
and Jim McGee
Washington Post Staff Writers

As the Federal Reserve Board kept a tight lid on how it would force a change of ownership of First American Bankshares Inc., the largest bank holding company based in Washington, one top First American official said yesterday that he could foresee a way for the ownership to change without putting First American on the market.

The Federal Reserve is expected to require the Bank of Credit and Commerce International (BCCI), a foreign bank based in the Persian Gulf, to divest itself of at least a 25 percent stake in the parent firm of First American, according to sources. The Fed has been investigating reports that BCCI obtained that stock, which gave BCCI control of First American, in violation of state and federal banking laws, sources said.

C. Jackson Ritchie Jr., chairman and chief executive of First American Bank of Washington, said yesterday if the Fed finds BCCI controls First American and forces it to divest its holding, "that does not mean this bank company will be sold." Ritchie said he did not know whether BCCI owns the stock, which he had thought was in the hands of individual investors from the Middle East.

Ritchie predicted that BCCI's controlling interest in First American would be transferred to an individual investor, perhaps Sheik Zayed al-Nahyan, the ruler of Abu Dhabi, who acquired control of BCCI last year. Zayed owns an 11.76 percent stake in First American's parent, according to the most available federal records.

Such a change would require approval from the Fed, which oversees bank holding companies such as First American. The company has $11 billion in assets and ranks as the 51st-largest bank company in the nation.

"This is the most logical outcome, given the circumstances," said Ritchie, who announced last week that he was leaving First American after more than 20 years. "There's no way that this bank company will be sold. . . . This is the clearest possibility."

Fed officials declined to comment on Ritchie's prediction, cautioning that negotiations over the future of First American have not been completed and that Ritchie's scenario is one of several possible outcomes. Last week, the Fed allowed Zayed to increase his stake in First American by putting $81 million in new capital into the bank company.

First American Official Offers Proposal to Change Ownership

FIRST AMERICAN, From B10

Zayed is cooperating with Federal Reserve officials to resolve the ownership question, sources said, and his representatives have acknowledged to the Fed that BCCI owns a controlling interest in First American. BCCI is the world's fifth-largest private bank and has come under scrutiny in recent years after pleading guilty to U.S. money-laundering charges.

A senior Fed official said last week that "if divestiture were required, it would be done in an orderly way so as not to injure First American Bank."

According to sources, BCCI effectively controls First American's parent firm because it holds at least 25 percent of the shares as collateral for numerous loans that are nonperforming, or no longer paying interest. If Zayed repaid those loans on behalf of the borrowers, then he would acquire control of the collateral, in this case the stake in First American.

Ritchie emphasized yesterday that the ownership question does not have any impact on First American's financial condition, saying, "This is a technical matter that should not, in any way, concern First American depositors."

Although the bank company lost a record $182.5 million in 1990 because of the deteriorating commercial real estate market in the Washington area, Ritchie said the bank's overall health is sound. Depositors of First American Bank are protected by federal deposit insurance up to $100,000 per customer account.

First American's most recent financial reports show it meets all regulatory requirements for capital, the financial cushion that protects a bank from losses, and is very "liquid," meaning it has assets on hand that can be readily converted into cash to meet depositor demands. A plan to improve liquidity was initiated 15 months ago, Ritchie said, and records show First American has nearly $2 billion in readily convertible assets.

Publicity surrounding First American's ownership has caused "a minimal" withdrawal of deposits, Ritchie said.

Following recent losses, First American projects a break-even year at best in 1991, Ritchie said. The bank company expects troubled real estate loans to continue to hurt earnings, but it is "doing everything it can to avoid future losses," he said, including laying off about 300 employees in the Washington area and restructuring the local banks to reduce operating expenses by more than $18 million in 1991.

Bank of Credit and Commerce Is Probed by Manhattan D.A.

By Jim McGee
Washington Post Staff Writer

The foreign-based Bank of Credit and Commerce International (BCCI), already facing allegations that it secretly owns a controlling interest in Washington-based First American Bankshares, is also under investigation for filing annual financial statements that do not appear to account for $3 billion in troubled loans made during the 1980s.

"We're investigating to determine whether false and fraudulent financial statements were filed with the superintendent of banking in New York," said Manhattan District Attorney Robert Morgenthau. "We have allegations to the effect that the financial statements don't accurately reflect the true condition of" BCCI.

Auditors in London discovered the unauthorized loans last year as they sifted through BCCI's books on behalf of BCCI's new owners, the kingdom of the United Arab Emirates and its ruler, Sheik Zayed al-Nahyan. The transactions include loans to BCCI insiders and associates of BCCI's executives that were not disclosed to BCCI's board of directors or its accounting firm, Price Waterhouse, according to sources with knowledge of the auditing.

The transactions broke down into two major categories, the sources said. The auditors found large unsecured loans with inadequate documentation to support them; they also found hundreds of millions of dollars in nonperforming loans—loans that are not earning interest—secured by shares in Credit and Commerce American Holdings (CCAH), the parent corporation of First American Bankshares.

N.Y. Official Investigates BCCI Loans

BCCI, From G1

BCCI's new owners eventually told U.S. banking regulators of the discovery, acknowledging in effect that it has a controlling interest in First American Bankshares, according to sources familiar with the discussions.

That admission is a major turnabout. Since 1981, when the U.S. banking regulators allowed a group of Middle Eastern investors to take over First American, First American has maintained that BCCI has no control over it.

Under federal law, it is illegal for any foreign bank to acquire such control without the formal approval of the Federal Reserve Board. Informed sources now say that the Fed is preparing to issue a cease and desist order that requires BCCI to sell its ownership of CCAH shares. "They will not own the bank anymore," said one senior official.

It is not precisely clear what total amount of nonperforming loans is secured by CCAH shares; estimates range from $700 million to well over $1 billion. "We've got to see where the investigation takes us," said one source who is familiar with the current inquiries. "At this stage we don't know."

For bank regulators and criminal investigators, this disclosure sets off a kind of ripple effect: If the BCCI financial statements do not appropriately account for several billion dollars worth of transactions, then BCCI's past financial statements become suspect.

The world banking system relies on financial statements or annual reports, as do various bank regulators such as the Fed or the New York state banking department, which allows BCCI to operate a large business office in the Manhattan financial district.

BCCI's attorneys declined to comment about the new allegations.

The discoveries also raise questions about whether BCCI complied with a 1990 plea bargain agreement reached after BCCI pled guilty in Tampa to federal money laundering charges that arose out of an earlier and separate investigation. Under that agreement, BCCI repeated a pledge to comply with a Federal Reserve consent decree that banned it from filing "false, incomplete, inaccurate or misleading information to the Board of Governors, to any Federal Reserve bank or to any federal or state regulatory authority."

The current inquiries are running along two tracks, criminal and civil. New York prosecutors are conducting extensive investigations of BCCI, and the Justice Department is considering a criminal referral by the Fed.

Meanwhile, the Fed is seeking to resolve the ownership of First American's holding company and has already made public an order barring further transactions between the two banks and requiring that First American cooperate with the various investigations.

The Fed also is concerned about the financial health of First American, which recently reported a record $182 million in losses in 1990, partly because of the declining real estate market and other problems. Sheik Zayed recently agreed to put $80 million in additional capital into First American, which is the 51st-largest bank holding company in the United States with $11 billion in assets and eight subsidiaries in six states and the District.

American bank regulators are closely monitoring the various BCCI inquiries, but a greater regulatory burden lies with the Bank of England. Until recently, BCCI had its world headquarters in London and operated dozens of branches in Great Britain. BCCI was not supervised on a consolidated basis by a single central bank, but it was overseen by a committee of regulators from several countries, including England.

After discovering the unusual transactions at BCCI during the early months of Zayed's ownership, "The Bank of England and Price Waterhouse came to them [in Abu Dhabi] and said there are problem loans" that left BCCI "seriously undercapitalized," according to an informed source. Since that time, Zayed has put $1.2 billion into BCCI.

As lawyers on three continents wrestle with the fallout of BCCI's problems, various sources cautioned that it remains unclear just how deep a financial hole BCCI has fallen into, or how much more capital will be needed. They caution that the Abu Dhabi government effectively guaranteed BCCI.

It is possible, say the sources, that Zayed may be asked to put as much as an additional $2 billion into BCCI after the current inquiries are completed. He also is a potential buyer of the CCAH shares if the Fed requires that the shares be sold, pending Fed approval.

In a letter to FNN's board of directors yesterday, Dow Jones and Westinghouse said they were "extremely disturbed" by FNN's "unilateral suspension" of sale talks. Peter G. Skinner, senior vice president of Dow Jones, said in a statement, "We are prepared to discuss revising our proposal, but so far FNN has refused to allow us to do so." Skinner did not specify how high the joint venture was willing to go.

Westinghouse and Dow Jones, publisher of the Wall Street Journal and the business news weekly Barron's, reportedly bid $90 million for FNN, a price that includes about $20 million worth of broadcasting equipment. CNBC's $105 million offer does not include the equipment, according to Tessler.

Despite FNN's agreement with CNBC, Tessler acknowledged that Dow Jones and Westinghouse may still have another shot at buying the cable service. FNN is expected to file for bankruptcy court protection within the next two weeks in order to reorganize its battered finances, and bankruptcy law provides for higher offers, he said.

FNN operates the nation's largest financial-news network, reaching 35 million cable TV households with around-the-clock newscasts and sports coverage.

CNBC, which was started by GE and its NBC television subsidiary in 1989 to compete directly with FNN, is carried in 18 million households.

A Capital Scandal

The biggest bank in Washington and a legendary American political adviser are ensnared in a probe involving a shadowy money-laundering enterprise

By JONATHAN BEATY and S.C. GWYNNE
WASHINGTON

Could there be any doubt about this bank's nationality? From its name to its flag-waving ads to its slogan—"The Bank for All Americans"—First American Bank of Washington, seems practically like a branch of government. Its chairman and public face is one of America's most respected attorneys and political advisers, Clark Clifford. But what's behind that carefully cultivated image looks decidedly different.

Investigators have evidence that First American, the largest bank in the Washington area (1990 assets: $11 billion), has for years been secretly controlled by a criminally tainted, money-laundering, Luxembourg-based global bank. That evidence last week prompted the Federal Reserve to interdict all transfer of money and assets between the two banks. The regulators asked the Justice Department, which has appeared reluctant to pursue allegations, to begin a criminal and civil investigation. The Fed was responding to pressure generated by Manhattan district attorney Robert Morgenthau, who is presenting evidence of fraud, money laundering and disguised ownership to a New York City grand jury. Morgenthau has formally told the Fed his office has evidence that First American is under secret control.

First American's alleged parent is one that few people would be proud to claim: the Bank of Credit & Commerce International, convicted of violations in three countries and well known in global finance circles as a banker to Manuel Noriega and Colombian drug lords. The question that won't go away: How could an outfit like B.C.C.I. control a large U.S. bank without regulators knowing or doing anything about it?

Investigations in Washington, New York City and Florida are probing deeper into the bizarre affair and uncovering evidence of startling regulatory inaction, if not political chicanery. Clifford, 84, says he and his law partner Robert Altman, president of the bank, "have run First American for long years at the highest ethical level, and we are proud of our stewardship." But he acknowledged to TIME that he has retained a criminal-defense attorney to represent him in connection with the matter.

The scandal's most immediate repercussions affect First American, which had trouble enough already. Staggered by the avalanche of distressed real estate loans that has flattened banks across the country, First American lost $182.5 million in 1990, its first red ink ever. The deficit last week led to the resignation of C. Jackson Ritchie, the company's chief executive, and the layoff of nearly 100 of the bank's 6,000 employees. Regulators were worried that First American's secret parent, itself in financial trouble, would start siphoning off funds that would deepen the loss and conceivably fatten the bill to U.S. taxpayers should First American have to be bailed out. To guard against that, the Federal Reserve Board last week ordered First American not to transfer any funds, including management fees, to B.C.C.I., or to exchange any assets with it. Says an investigator involved in the bank probe: "They have been engaged in every-

Suspicion that B.C.C.I. secretly controls First American goes back 10 years, when a group of Arab investors bought the Washington bank, then known as First General. Those same investors also happened to own controlling shares in B.C.C.I., a behemoth that has $20 billion in assets and some 350 branches in 70 countries. Bothered by the connection, regulators insisted on iron guarantees that B.C.C.I. would not run First American.

The link that investigators are now talking about is far stronger—and comprehensible enough to anyone who has ever had a mortgage. They say B.C.C.I. lent the investors the money they used to buy stock in First American, with the shares pledged as collateral, just as a mortgage holder pledges his home as collateral. Investigators say those loans are "nonperforming"—the bankers' term that means they aren't being repaid. Everyone knows what happens in that case: the bank gets the collateral, in this case the controlling shares in First American. And presto, an unregulated foreign organization takes over an American bank without U.S. regulators knowing about it.

It is hard to imagine more unlikely partners than the blue-blooded Clifford and Agha Hasan Abedi, the hard-driving, visionary founder of B.C.C.I. While Clifford was counseling President Truman in 1947, Abedi was shifting his young career in banking from India to Pakistan. In 1959 he founded his own successful bank there, and by the early 1970s he was aggressively courting Arab money. Abedi lavished special attention on Sheik Zayed bin Sultan al-Nahayan, who now heads Abu Dhabi's ruling family. Abedi ingratiated himself with the sheik, who was suspicious of bankers, by roughing it in tents and aboard camels to join him on falconing expeditions.

When Pakistan began to nationalize industries in 1972, Abedi persuaded Zayed to help start B.C.C.I., which was registered in the unregulated tax havens of Luxembourg and the Netherlands Antilles. The new bank had staggering ambitions. Abedi has grandly proclaimed it "a new center for Third World cohesion and a rallying point of thoughts and aspirations of the underprivileged." That grand vision helped attract California-based Bank of America, which put up $2.5 million, or 25% of B.C.C.I.'s original capital, before selling its stake and pulling out in 1980. Abedi continued to woo wealthy Arabs, who became B.C.C.I.'s principal shareholders and first big customers.

Rival bankers were long suspicious of the flamboyant B.C.C.I. "You had a $20 billion bank with no central-bank regulator or government lender of last resort," said a U.S. financier. "That gave most bankers a very nervous feeling about B.C.C.I. Who's watching these guys?" In fact, B.C.C.I. seemed far less interested in lending money than in earning fees by electronically whisking deposits through its growing network of global branches. B.C.C.I.'s willingness to transfer funds anywhere at any time was basic corporate policy, and the bank became a primary mover of flight capital from Third World nations. A high-ranking B.C.C.I. officer told investigators that moving money for 2,000 wealthy clients, from dictators to arms dealers, formed the core of the bank's business.

Abedi, who left B.C.C.I. last year after a stroke that followed a 1988 heart transplant, built his business on careful attention to the needs of top-drawer customers. In the bank's early days, B.C.C.I. officials in London could be roused in the middle of the night to make good on visiting sheiks' gambling losses. Abedi cultivated the friendship of former Pakistani President Mohammed Zia ul-Haq and other Third World leaders. "He was a collector of people," says a Pakistani journalist who has followed Abedi. "He used Zia as a calling card."

To attract deposits, B.C.C.I. opened magnificent offices even in poor surroundings. No matter how incongruous, the facilities were lavishly decorated with Persian rugs and sumptuous paintings. "Walk down the main street in Djibouti," says a Western banker, "and you'll see a building with a marble façade. That's B.C.C.I. On the two buildings on either side, the plaster will be breaking and falling."

What Abedi coveted most was the prestige of a bank in the U.S., the nerve center of Western capitalism. After regulators rejected two B.C.C.I. bids for American banks in the 1970s—Abedi wouldn't reveal all the information they wanted—he helped Saudi billionaire Ghaith R. Pharaon acquire the National Bank of Georgia in 1978 from Bert Lance, President Jimmy Carter's former budget director. Soon after that, Lance helped Abedi orchestrate a raid on Financial General Bankshares of Washington. The purchasers were four Middle Eastern shareholders of B.C.C.I. The hostile bid triggered a three-year court battle in which U.S. regulators accused the buyers of acting in effect as fronts for the unregulated B.C.C.I.

Enter Clark Clifford. The Washington éminence grise represented B.C.C.I. in the case and persuaded nervous Federal Reserve officials that the buyers were acting as individuals on their own behalf. When questioned about B.C.C.I.'s financial role in the acquisition, Clifford flatly told the officials that there wasn't any. Clifford became chairman of the bank, renamed First American, and his law partner, Robert Altman, became president. Clifford regularly briefed Abedi on the U.S. firm's operations. When queried on the briefings, Clifford explained that B.C.C.I. as adviser to the Arab owners of First American needed to know about the banking company.

B.C.C.I. was meanwhile forging into uncharted waters, most notably laundering drug money. In 1983 B.C.C.I. acquired a Colombian bank with 30 branches that included several in Medellín and Cali, homes to the world's most powerful cocaine cartels. Among those laundering drug profits through B.C.C.I., say investigators, was former Panamanian strongman Manuel Noriega, who was collared by U.S. authorities in early 1990. Prosecutors who tracked his finances said Noriega had funneled $500,000 of cocaine funds through First American's flagship bank in Washington. First American officials denied any knowledge of the transaction.

B.C.C.I.'s fondness for drug money brought the bank to grief in Florida and eventually led to recent mammoth losses. Undercover customs agents first stumbled onto B.C.C.I. money laundering during a sting operation. As part of the scheme, agents sent several million dollars of Medellín cartel drug funds through a B.C.C.I. bank in Miami. What happened next was worthy of Alice in Wonderland. Bank officers noticed the agents' amateurish attempt at money laundering and offered to teach them more sophisticated methods. Example: the bank would wire funds to B.C.C.I. branches around the world before handing the cash back to drug traffickers in the form of phony loans. The narcotics kings happily paid large fees for the customized service.

Armed with virtually ironclad evidence, a Florida grand jury indicted B.C.C.I. for money laundering in 1988. Clifford hired a high-powered criminal lawyer to defend the bank. Despite overwhelming evidence, the government offered B.C.C.I. a plea bargain. The bank thus avoided a trial in which prosecutors planned to present evidence that laundering drug money was an approved policy of the global titan.

Other evidence would have proved equally explosive. An executive named Amjad Awan, who managed the bank's Panama office and was Noriega's personal banker, described the extent of B.C.C.I.'s empire in a recorded conversation with an undercover agent. "We own a bank in Washington," Awan told the agent. "It's called the First American Bank. There are six banks bought out by B.C.C.I. about eight years ago. B.C.C.I. was acting as adviser to them, but the truth of the matter is that the bank belongs to B.C.C.I. Those guys are just nominee shareholders."

Awan was one of five B.C.C.I. officers later convicted of conspiring to launder cocaine cash and sentenced to 12 years in prison, but he did not testify at his trial. Nor did the government play his taped conversation for the jury. For its part, B.C.C.I. forfeited the $15 million that agents had deposited but was not required to pay additional penalties.

Awan's statements are only part of the evidence of B.C.C.I.'s ties to First American that has remained buried for a remarkably long time despite being held by the government. None of the evidence has been forwarded to banking regulators, who might have done something about it.

A Senate subcommittee headed by Massachusetts Democrat John Kerry was probing money laundering and turned up more witnesses, who were later secretly taped by teams of customs and IRS agents while being interrogated by Kerry's chief counsel. One provided details of B.C.C.I.'s money-laundering operations in the U.S. and Latin America. The B.C.C.I. executive described a B.C.C.I. management conference in Vienna at which Abedi openly displayed charts of B.C.C.I. holdings that included First American. This senior-level manager said Clifford and Altman were at the meeting.

The most startling evidence came from yet another B.C.C.I. officer who in 1989 provided the smoking gun for anyone wondering who really owns First American. His secretly taped remarks described the way B.C.C.I. had provided nonrecourse loans to the Arab investors who bought controlling shares of First American, then took the shares back as collateral for the loans. Since the investors put up no money of their own, and B.C.C.I. held the stock, it was the real owner of First American. Some of the allegedly oil-rich Arabs who appeared to be major shareholders were no more than straw front men for Abedi.

Federal agents in an adjoining room listened to this key B.C.C.I. player for three days as he continued to explain B.C.C.I.'s

Reeling from the impact of the Florida case and bad loans, B.C.C.I. loses $498 million. Despite evidence that B.C.C.I. controls First America, regulators permit First American to continue to expand by acquiring a bank in Florida.

B.C.C.I. pleads guilty in Florida and pays $15 million. Sheik Zayed bin Sultan al Nahayan of Abu Dhabi, a longtime investor in B.C.C.I., acquires control of the troubled bank and orders an audit, which finds that an estimated $4 billion is missing. First American Bankshares loses $182.5 million for the year.

machinations. He described plans to use political influence to derail the Kerry inquiry. Supervising customs agents said the tapes of this executive's remarks had been in their possession and that official reports had been completed, but they declined to say where the tapes and reports had been forwarded.

Despite the wealth of new findings, federal prosecutors seemed loath to bring charges against the banking companies. "I think they sold out a lot of charges in return for B.C.C.I. promises that they would deliver up Noriega," said William von Raab, a former U.S. customs commissioner who headed the agency during the investigations. Von Raab also hinted at a darker motive for the lack of action. "That bank [B.C.C.I.] has a penchant for collecting very important friends," he said. "I'm constantly amazed at the ability of the power-brokering establishment to affect government decisions."

After arranging the taped sessions for the feds, Kerry's chief counsel, Jack Blum, returned to Washington to find that his subcommittee job had been eliminated. Eventually frustrated by the feds' apparent lack of interest in the leads he provided, Blum delivered his evidence to Manhattan prosecutor Morgenthau, who has a legendary reputation for political independence and integrity. Within weeks the D.A. launched his probe into B.C.C.I. and First American.

With B.C.C.I.'s reputation almost completely in tatters after the money-laundering plea, the bank suffered severe financial setbacks. New business dried up just as the bank's freewheeling practices left it awash in bad loans. The struggling company has lost more than $550 million since its 1988 indictment, including a $498 million deficit in 1989.

To the rescue has come Sheik Zayed, ruler of Abu Dhabi and Abedi's old falconing partner, who put up $1 billion and thus took control of the bank. Zayed ordered an audit of his new property—and found that an estimated $4 billion had vanished from the company. If the government investigators are right, Zayed also has control of First American, since he currently owns the loans and collateral on B.C.C.I.'s books. For the moment at least, that appears to make First American a virtual arm of the Abu Dhabi state bank.

B.C.C.I. is retrenching around the world. The company has closed some 70 offices and laid off more than 2,300 employees, or nearly 17% of its work force, since 1989. Many of its U.S. offices stand empty. According to a statement from Abu Dhabi, the banking firm's modest new goal is "to produce a leaner, fitter and more profitable B.C.C.I."

The fate of First American may now rest in the hands of federal and state authorities. B.C.C.I., by design, is not entirely within their reach. —With reporting by Richard Behar/New York, Edward W. Desmond/New Delhi and Adam Zagorin/Brussels

How Clifford's Repute Protected Client BCCI From the Regulators

His Standing and Assurances Deterred Scrutiny of Firm Said to Control U.S. Bank

A Denial of Any Impropriety

By PETER TRUELL and JILL ABRAMSON
Staff Reporters of THE WALL STREET JOURNAL

WASHINGTON—With his signature silver hair, craggy features and resonant voice, Clark Clifford is the consummate Washington wise man. Presidents have come and gone, but for decades Mr. Clifford has sat atop the three branches of the capital's permanent government: law, money and politics.

He presides over one of the city's most influential law firms, Clifford & Warnke, just a few steps from the White House. As chairman of First American Bankshares Inc., he controls an $11 billion banking empire. As the dean of the Democratic Party, he has been sought out for counsel by practically every major Democratic figure since the Truman administration.

But at age 84, Mr. Clifford finds himself defending this golden resume against the blight of scandal, thanks to his late-in-life foray into banking with a group of Middle Eastern money men.

Clark Clifford

The pressure has been mounting for at least two years. The Customs Service cracked down on money laundering at a major Clifford client, the Bank of Credit & Commerce International. Senate investigators began tussling with him over documents. And finally, late last year, an aggressive prosecutor in New York put the spotlight on Mr. Clifford himself: The superlawyer's own Washington-based bank, investigators now believe, was unlawfully controlled by the money-laundering BCCI, partly through Arab investors who were Mr. Clifford's banking partners.

A chorus of media coverage—in this newspaper, the Washington Post and CBS's "60 Minutes," among other places—has called attention to Mr. Clifford's actions at a time when he had planned to bask in the sunset of an illustrious career.

Did Clark Clifford do anything wrong? Was he a major player in a subterfuge to hide the corrupt ownership of a major U.S. bank? Or, as Mr. Clifford says, was he duped into acting as a front man?

Whatever the case, a close look at the Clifford affair reveals that his reputation and influence were instrumental in keeping the artifice together. "I mean, Clark Clifford is sort of the godfather of the Democratic party," a BCCI official once explained—to a Customs agent with a hidden tape recorder. More recently, Mr. Clifford's influence helped short-circuit a Senate investigation of BCCI's affairs.

Also caught in the BCCI maelstrom is Robert Altman, Mr. Clifford's law partner and younger alter ego. Mr. Altman and his wife, the actress Lynda Carter (TV's Wonder Woman) are fixtures on Washington's A-list, playing host to fetes—such as the recent 45th birthday party for White House economist Michael Boskin—at their Gatsby-like home in Potomac, Md. While his mentor plays Mr. Democrat, Mr. Altman and his wife have embraced well-placed Republicans, such as Commerce Secretary Robert Mosbacher and Transportation Secretary Samuel Skinner and their wives.

Robert Altman

Mr. Altman says the media are making too many assumptions before all the facts are in. "People are jumping to conclusions about BCCI's control" of First American, he says. "We don't even know that as a matter of fact."

Official Washington, meanwhile, is shaking its head in wonder. "I just don't think anyone believes Clark Clifford could be involved with anything that isn't on the up and up," says Debbie Dingell, the powerhouse wife of Rep. John Dingell, the influential Michigan Democrat and a close friend of the Altmans.

During an interview this week, Mr. Clifford passionately defended himself against all allegations of impropriety. "The record that I have here has been built very carefully over many years," he said. It was only two months ago, he says, that he learned that his bank, First American, was at least in part secretly owned by BCCI.

How could all this have happened?

Reassuring the Regulators

Messrs. Clifford and Altman forged their relationship with BCCI in the late 1970s, when the foreign bank was acting as financial adviser to some Arab investors trying to buy into what was then Financial General Bankshares of Washington. Financial General was a plum property. At a time when few banks could conduct business across state lines, it had a branch network stretching from New York to Tennessee. Eventually, it would be renamed First American.

BCCI, for its part, was hell-bent on global growth. Founded in 1972 by Pakistani banker Hasan Abedi, BCCI swelled in the 1970s, setting up offices throughout the Middle East, Europe, Africa and Asia. But its unorthodox structure—with two holding companies in the lightly regulated tax havens of Luxembourg and the Cayman Islands—made some regulators wary. The Bank of England refused to give BCCI full banking status, while New York banking authorities rejected an effort, involving BCCI, to acquire the Bank of Chelsea.

Capital Influence: Clifford's Reputation and Position Shielded BCCI, Alleged Secret Owner of a U.S. Bank

But Mr. Clifford was impressed with his client, Mr. Abedi, calling him "a visionary." In 1977, the investor group being advised by BCCI—including the former intelligence chief of Saudi Arabia—began gobbling up Financial General stock.

Eventually the takeover required approval from a bevy of regulators, who gathered in Washington on April 23, 1981, at a hearing held by the Federal Reserve. Just who, the regulators wanted to know, was really proposing to buy the bank? Not BCCI, Mr. Clifford said.

"There is no function of any kind on the part of BCCI," asserted Mr. Clifford, flanked by four Arab investors. "I know of no present relationship. I know of no planned future relationship that exists."

Referring to the proposed holding companies for First American—called Credit & Commerce American Holdings and Credit & Commerce Investment N.B.—Mr. Altman told the hearing "there is no connection between those entities and BCCI, in terms of ownership or other relationship." The similarity of the holding company names with BCCI's, the Washington lawyers insisted, was pure coincidence.

Mr. Clifford says he was assured by Mr. Abedi and by shareholder Kamal Adham, the former Saudi intelligence chief, that the individual shareholders, not BCCI, were putting up the money to buy the bank. He says it will be proved that at least some of the shareholders did use their own money.

He was aware that all of the shareholders banked at BCCI. "The men we met appeared to be men of character," he adds. He says numerous government investigators checked the backgrounds of the investors and came up empty-handed.

But some of those regulators were relying on Mr. Clifford's own assurances that BCCI wasn't involved—and on Mr. Clifford's reputation for integrity.

Sidney Bailey, a Virginia bank regulator, recalls the 1981 hearing well. "It was our understanding that they [First American] would be distinct and separate from BCCI and that there would be no connection with BCCI whatsoever," he says. "These were absolute assurances."

The New York state banking authority was the last regulator to sign off on the takeover. Muriel Siebert, the former head of that agency, concedes that she too relied mainly on Mr. Clifford's word. "If we had known about [BCCI's role] we wouldn't have allowed it to go through," she says.

Later, after she had returned from state service to her brokerage firm, she says she received a fee of "$50,000 or $100,000" for her role in helping find a buyer for First American's Bank of Commerce unit in New York. She says the transaction had no connection to her former role as a regulator.

Mr. Clifford agreed to become First American's chairman after receiving assurances that he would have "full authority" and that the shareholders would play only a passive role, with Mr. Abedi serving as their investment adviser. Mr. Altman became First American's president.

With its new name and new leaders, First American expanded rapidly. Each time a new acquisition was made, Messrs. Clifford and Altman made the same assurances: BCCI was in no way involved in the running of their bank. The role of Mr. Clifford's law firm grew alongside the bank. The firm served as the bank's attorneys, receiving millions in legal fees annually, and continued as counsel to BCCI.

Throughout the 1980s, both men made trips to London to brief Mr. Abedi on First American's affairs. When First American needed money to make an acquisition, for example, Mr. Clifford says he distributed rights offerings to the shareholders through Mr. Abedi, who would see some of the First American shareholders on trips to the Persian Gulf.

He insists that neither Mr. Abedi nor anyone else at BCCI was ever involved in the management of First American. "Not for one hour during any day," he asserts. Although at least one prospective First American executive was flown to London to meet Mr. Abedi, Mr. Clifford now says Mr. Abedi played no role in hiring decisions. Mr. Clifford says it was natural to seek Mr. Abedi's opinion of the job applicant, since he was being considered for an international banking post.

Both Mr. Clifford and Mr. Altman went to some length to discourage inquiries into the ownership of First American. In a lawsuit filed by a disgruntled shareholder of First American's Virginia bank, the two lawyers fought unsuccessfully to keep out of court any evidence about the investors who controlled their bank.

So who really did buy First American?

Investigators for New York County District Attorney Robert Morgenthau have established this much: Early on, perhaps at the outset, several shareholders in the shell corporations that were buying First American had borrowed the money to pay for their shares from BCCI. In at least some cases they never repaid those loans or paid interest on them, lawyers say, adding that since the loans were effectively collateralized with the stock, BCCI soon had paper control of First American's parent. The bank was, in effect, a secret wholly owned subsidiary of BCCI.

Influence on the Hill

It was drug money that led regulators to the true ownership of First American.

In early 1988, Sen. John Kerry, a Massachusetts Democrat, launched a moneylaundering probe in his narcotics-trade subcommittee, part of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee. BCCI quickly became a focus. Former Panamanian consul general Jose Blandon told the subcommittee that the bank was part of Manuel Noriega's "criminal empire."

The investigation was explosive—but in the cozy world of Democratic politics, so was the fact that BCCI was represented by Clifford & Warnke. Mr. Clifford's status as Democratic insider carries great weight on the hill. For one thing, he was active in a political action committee headed by Pamela Harriman, wife of the late ambassador W. Averill Harriman, that helped bankroll Democratic Senate campaigns. Clifford & Warnke is a Democratic powerhouse in its own right; its partners have given almost $150,000 to various Democratic campaign committees since 1985.

The Kerry subcommittee obtained intriguing leads. Amjad Awan, a BCCI official, testified in detail about his handling of Mr. Noriega's finances. And in early 1989, investigators obtained checks totaling several thousand dollars that bore the inscription "Noriega" in the lower left corner. The checks had been passed through a BCCI account held at a First American branch in Washington. Mr. Clifford says he didn't know about the checks, noting the vast quantity of transactions handled by his bank.

But Sen. Kerry's investigation quickly ran into a big technical problem: too little time. The full Foreign Relations Committee, headed by Sen. Claiborne Pell, had set early 1989 as a deadline; funds for the probe would then run out. But by the end of 1988, Jack Blum, then the Kerry committee's top investigator, still didn't have the documents he needed to initiate a public hearing on the BCCI case.

Then, when he returned from an out-of-town trip in early 1989, he learned Mr. Clifford had called Sen. Pell seeking an extension to answer one of the subcommittee's subpoenas. The extension, which Sen. Pell granted, delayed the submission of material by Mr. Clifford beyond the date on which Mr. Blum was required to complete his investigation, effectively derailing the probe. Public hearings were never held.

"Pell and Clifford have known each other for years and years," explains Geryld Christianson, who, as the committee's staff director, handled the request from Mr. Clifford. "He asked for an extension, and I said I didn't see why not." But, he adds, "Clifford never invoked the friendship in his discussions with Pell, nor did Pell with me." Sen. Pell received a $1,000 contribution from Mr. Clifford in May of 1990.

After winding down his investigation, Sen. Kerry also received a total of $3,000 in contributions from Mr. Clifford and one of his law partners. Sen. Kerry says that, during the stillborn investigation, he wasn't aware that Mr. Clifford intended to contribute.

Mr. Clifford says he wasn't throwing around any political weight. "At no time have I used political influence," he says.

A Slap on the Wrist

Separately, other investigators also were also watching BCCI. Starting in 1986, the U.S. customs service had mounted its own probe of BCCI's money-laundering activities.

An undercover sting code-named Operation C-Chase was passing Colombian drug cartel money through BCCI. By October 1988 the bank and several of its senior officers were indicted in Tampa on charges of laundering more than $14 million. And BCCI's legal advisers quickly rode to the rescue.

Messrs. Clifford and Altman assembled a team of Washington and Florida lawyers to press the defense, which ultimately cost at least $10 million. That team over several months negotiated a settlement in which a BCCI unit pleaded guilty to money-laundering charges. In addition, five BCCI officers received prison terms.

But the $14.6 million in fines was seen as little more than a slap on the wrist of an institution that had virtually made itself a full-service bank for money-launderers. The plea agreement was so "lenient," contended a report prepared by Sen. Kerry's staff, that it could undermine "deterrence of other financial institutions from laundering money."

Once again, the superlawyers went into action. Mr. Altman approached another powerful friend, Sen. Orrin Hatch, a senior Republican on the Judiciary Committee, whose blessing would add considerable credibility to the Tampa settlement. "I'd known him and his wife for years," Mr. Hatch says of Mr. Altman. "I think he is a fine fellow. I believe he was straight and blunt with me."

The Utah Republican says he also talked to representatives from the Justice Department who "felt they had done a good job and that they were being slammed," Mr. Hatch explains.

Thus, on Feb. 22, 1990, Sen. Hatch made a ringing endorsement of the settlement in the Congressional Record. Even though BCCI had pleaded guilty to 31 felony counts, "there was no systematic money laundering uncovered in the BCCI case after intensive investigation," Mr. Hatch's statement asserted. He also commended BCCI for the "responsible way the company has responded to the charges in these proceedings."

Recently, at Sen. Hatch's request, Mr. Altman and his TV-star wife put in a celebrity appearance at a charity function that the senator helped sponsor for the National Foundation for Depressive Illness. Sen. Hatch says he stands by his actions and emphasizes that he subsequently worked with Sen. Kerry on proposed money-laundering legislation.

But the Justice Department had learned more about BCCI. It obtained strong evidence that BCCI was surreptitiously controlling Washington's First American Bank—evidence that the department never passed along to banking regulators.

Law-enforcement investigators learned of the relationship straight from Mr. Awan, the BCCI official. Acting "through private individuals," Mr. Awan said, "BCCI has bought and controls First American Bank," according to a summary of his statements compiled and sworn to by an agent of the Internal Revenue Service. He said individuals, rather than BCCI, were used to buy First American because U.S. law blocked BCCI from the transaction. "Clark Clifford," he went on to say, "is one of the persons who is working on behalf of BCCI."

Mr. Awan went so far as to say that Mr. Clifford was slowing down the Senate investigation of BCCI that was under way at that time.

Plainly, BCCI was grateful to have Messrs. Clifford and Altman as its men in the capital. "Our attorneys there, they're heavyweights," Mr. Awan said in a taped conversation with an undercover agent from U.S. Customs. "We own a bank based in Washington, it's called First American," he adds. The "truth of the matter is that the bank belongs to BCCI. Those guys are just nominee shareholders," he says of the Arab investors.

BCCI's lawyers go out of their way to undercut Mr. Awan's statements. "He doesn't know this firsthand. He picked it up as office or organizational rumor, and he's asserting it," says John Hume, who represented Mr. Awan in the money-laundering proceedings.

As soon as his Senate investigation was terminated Mr. Blum took his suspicions to Robert Morgenthau, the New York County district attorney who has made money laundering a top target of his office. Last fall, Mr. Morgenthau's office presented the evidence to bank regulators that BCCI effectively held a controlling stake in First American Bank's holding company.

As a result, the Federal Reserve recently demanded that BCCI and First American keep their businesses separate. It also demanded that BCCI submit plans to sell its controlling stake in First American Bank's parent. The Senate banking committee is saying it will look into the Fed's procedures for screening foreign banks that want to set up in the U.S.

And Messrs. Clifford and Altman seem hurt and surprised at the revelations. If regulators were fooled about BCCI's secret ownership, so, they say, were they. Despite their frequent contact with BCCI's principals, they—and they alone—have been making decisions for the bank, Mr. Clifford says. In any case, their law firm's relationship with BCCI was severed in October.

Messrs. Clifford and Altman are now devoting themselves to damage control, working with a team of criminal defense lawyers and public relations specialists.

While Mr. Altman was recently seen power-lunching with the television host Larry King, some of his other friends are putting distance between themselves and the flashy lawyer. When asked about his relationship with the Altmans, for example, Mr. Boskin, the president's top economist, stressed through a spokesman that during two Christmas skiing holidays in Aspen, his family and the Altmans "skied on different mountains."

Mr. Clifford, meanwhile, tries to concentrate on happier developments. His memoirs, due to be published in June, are being serialized beginning this week in the New Yorker.

But official Washington is pondering a different mystery: Why would Clark Clifford, who was already a millionaire, cast his lot with these money men? The answer, he says, is that he wasn't looking forward to retirement and that his law practice no longer intrigued him. "When this came along I was challenged by it," he explains.

He is getting ready to tell his side of the story—in court if necessary: "When the time comes I will raise my hand and make an oath, that at no time have Mr. Abedi, Mr. Adham, or any of the investors made a decision for First American Bank," Mr. Clifford says.

On 4/2/91, AUSA [redacted] b6 b7C and I attended a meeting with [redacted], [redacted] and [redacted] at The Board of Governors of the Federal Reserve System (BGFRS), to discuss the scope and status of the BGFRS' parallel investigation concerning the captioned matter. I served a subpoena from the United States Grand Jury, WDC, requiring the BGFRS to provide all records in its possession relative to the matter.

[redacted] said that the BGFRS has four categories of information relating to this matter: The CCAH applications for approval by the BGFRS as a bank holding company; the yearly filings and periodic examination reports; the information received from the PATTON BOGGS and BLOW since December 1990, regarding BCCI (the BGFRS has been primarily dealing with PB&B attorney [redacted], who, prior to being asked by BCCI to act as counsel in this matter, had been managing ABU DHABI's real estate holdings in the United States); records received in response to BGFRS administrative subpoenas requiring production of all records of CCAH and the personal financial records of CLARK M. CLIFFORD and [redacted]. With regard to the records of CLIFFORD and [redacted], BGFRS will require a separate subpoena specifically requiring the production of those records. b6 b7C

[redacted] provided a "general overview" of the scope and results of the BGFRS investigation. Essentially, the information from PATTON, BOGGS and BLOW has revealed there were several large, non-performing loans made by BCCI to the shareholders of CCAH. The BCCI and CCAH documents supporting these loans have been taken to and stored in ABU DHABI, under the control of the current owners of BCCI. BCCI has also formed an "investigative committee," comprised of representatives from the b6 b7C auditing firms of Price Waterhouse and ERNST & WHINNEY, along with the attorneys from PATTON BOGGS and BLOW.

In May 1990, while auditing BCCI, Price Waterhouse found a "huge hole" in BCCI's capitalization, equal to approximately $1 billion. [redacted] sought an infusion of capital from SHEIK ZAYEK BIN SULTAN AL-NAHAYAN of ABU DHABI, who already owned 30 percent of BCCI. SHEIK AL-NAHAYAN contributed the necessary capital, raising his ownership interest in BCCI to 79 percent, then instructed Price Waterhouse to expand the scope of the audit. In or before October 1990, Price Waterhouse issued a "coded report" showing BCCI loans to CCAH shareholders and to GHAITH PHARAON; loans which far exceeded what a U.S. bank would be allowed to loan, given the capitalization and other assets available. The records of those loans were kept in the homes of AGHA ABEDI and [redacted], and appeared on the books and records of BCCI as "lines of credit," even though they were merely amounts of money disbursed through nominees for the purchase of CCAH. Reportedly due to these disclosures, SHEIK AL-NAHAYAN successfully sought the resignations of both ABEDI and [redacted]

b7C

[redacted] wrote to Price Waterhouse requesting access to the report. After receiving and reviewing the report, [redacted] wrote to CCAH demanding the documents showing the loans. It was arranged that [redacted] representing the BGFRS, and an employee of The Federal Reserve Bank in New York would travel to ABU DHABI with PATTON BOGGS & BLOW Attorney [redacted] to examine the documents. During the trip, which occurred in early March 1991, [redacted] and the others examined numerous documents and made copies of those they deemed pertinent. Those copies were transported by [redacted] and the others to London, England, and placed in the custody of the law firm of ALLAN & OVERY (phonetic), counsel to BCCI. [redacted] did not make an inventory of the documents. [redacted] has written a letter to PATTON BOGGS & BLOW requesting that the documents be turned over to the BGFRS.

[redacted] is working on a report of investigation concerning the trip to ABU DHABI and his examination of the documents. It was "clear" to him from his examination that the CCAH borrowers were nominees for BCCI.

The purchase of CCAH stock in 1986 by CLIFFORD and [redacted] was first disclosed in [redacted] reply to [redacted] request for the identity of every shareholder. [redacted], in a recent deposition given to the BGFRS, explained how it came to be that he and CLIFFORD bought the stock. It is also clear from the documents received from PATTON BOGGS & BLOW that loans were made by BCCI to CLIFFORD and [redacted] for the purpose of purchasing the CCAH shares. [redacted] bought approximately $5 million worth, and CLIFFORD $10 million worth. Their purchases together totalled less than one percent of the outstanding stock in CCAH. Loans

1325015-000-4927

were made for the entire amount of the purchase, with a price of the shares of stock having a "book-value" of $2,200 each. In 1988, both CLIFFORD and [redacted] sold some of the shares for approximately three times the book-value, realizing a sufficient profit to pay off their loans in 1989. Both CLIFFORD and [redacted] still hold some CCAH shares. b6 b7C

Tangential issues discovered by the BGFRS in its inquiry include:

1. BCCI owns Independence Bank in California, purchased by nominee GHAITH PHARAON; a violation of the Bank Holding Act.

2. BCCI violated the Bank Holding Act in 1982 by its nominee purchase of the National Bank of Georgia, which again involved GHAITH PHARAON.

First American Bankshares will have to be sold by BCCI to someone other than SHEIK AL-NAHAYAN.

[redacted] will report the findings of his investigation to the Board of Governors, which, in turn, will direct the next steps, e.g., penalties against BCCI and actions against CLIFFORD and [redacted] has also been told that congressional hearings by Congressman GONZALES and Senator KERRY are upcoming. b6 b7C

On 4/17/91, the writer briefly met with AUSA [redacted] b6 b7C District of Columbia. The writer introduced himself and advised that he had been assigned to captioned investigation as a second Agent. Such was per the request of AUSA [redacted]. AUSA [redacted] provided the writer with a brief case overview. A meeting was set up for 4/18/91 in order to discuss this matter in detail.

On 4/18/91, the writer and SA [redacted] met b6 b7C with AUSA [redacted]. The writer received a thorough overview of this case. In addition, AUSA [redacted] stated that he had been in contact with Customs Agent [redacted] and AUSA [redacted], Middle District of Florida. Said District had handled the 1988 Money Laundering case involving BCCI. AUSA [redacted] was informed that [redacted] believed that captioned investigation would benefit from interviewing individuals who were involved in their case and reviewing the trial transcripts and evidence. Such should have a direct impact on captioned matter. AUSA [redacted] advised that he would like SA [redacted] and the writer to accompany DOJ, Fraud Section, [redacted] and himself to Tampa, Florida, in early May, 1991. Interviews and records reviews will be conducted at said time. AUSA [redacted] added that [redacted] was aware of an individual outside of the United States who may have significant information relevant to this matter.

Subsequently, on that same date, the writer attended a meeting at AUSA [redacted] office. In addition to the writer and AUSA [redacted] in attendance were Attorney's [redacted] and [redacted] are criminal Attorney's representing the current owners of BCCI and BCCI. This meeting was preliminary in nature. BCCI'S potential cooperation and culpability were discussed. b6 b7C

The captioned matter was initiated in February 1991, in response to a criminal referral form received from the Board of Governors of the Federal Reserve System, Washington, D.C., alleging that false statements were made to it by the captioned subjects with regard to the ownership and control of Credit and Commerce American Holdings, N.V. (CCAH), Netherlands, Antilles. Among the holdings of CCAH is First American Bankshares (FABS), which owns, among others, First American Bank, WDC. The central allegation was that subjects [redacted] b6 b7C were merely nominees for the Bank of Credit and Commerce, International (BCCI) in 1982, when they purchased [redacted] FABS' predecessor, Financial General Bankshares (FGB), then traded the FGB shares for shares in CCAH. The purchasing of the shares and the resultant [redacted] CCAH was established using loans from BCCI; loans which attorneys for BCCI have now disclosed to the BGFRS were made to the nominees at the direction of AGHA HASAN ABEDI and [redacted] for the purpose of gaining control of CCAH, in direct contravention of an agreement between CCAH and the BGFRS that no BCCI financial or managerial participation would occur.

In sworn filings and testimony before the BGFRS in 1978, regarding the efforts of CCAH to purchase FGB, CLARK M. CLIFFORD, and noted WDC attorney, who served as advisor to presidents TRUMAN, KENNEDY, JOHNSON, and CARTER, and as Secretary of Defense for one year in the JOHNSON administration, and [redacted], CLIFFORD's law partner, as attorneys for CCAH, said that the independent wealth of the four arab investors, and none of BCCI's, would be used to purchase the FGB shares. Subsequently, CLIFFORD, [redacted] and the other captioned subjects have served as controlling directors of CCAH and FABS, renewing on a yearly basis false claims to the BGFRS that BCCI had no ownership interest in, and exercised no control over, CCAH. b6 b7C

Knowledge of the false statements came to light after the April 1990, money-laundering conviction of BCCI in the Middle District of Florida. SHEIK ZAYED BIN SULTAN AL-NAHAYAN, the ruler of ABU DHABI and a long time investor in BCCI, acquired control of BCCI by means of a substantial infusion of capital, which approximated $1 billion. Subsequently, AL-NAHAYAN ordered an audit, apparently done by PRICE WATERHOUSE, which disclosed, inter alia, the BCCI loans to the nominees who purchased the FGB shares. The audit also disclosed that, in 1986, similar loans were made to CLIFFORD and [redacted] for the purpose of purchasing shares of CCAH, again in contravention of the edict of the BGFRS. The conditions under which the loans were made to both the Arab nominees and to CLIFFORD and [redacted] were essentially the same: although each was required to sign a promissory note and an assignment of collateral - the CCAH shares - each was given a "side letter" saying that there was no requirement to pay either the principal or interest on the loan; that each was only required to hold the stock. In the loans made to CLIFFORD and [redacted] the "side letters" further stipulated that, should either choose to sell his shares, a buyer would be provided, and that each was guaranteed a minimum return of what he had paid for the shares and was entitled to any profit. CLIFFORD and [redacted] held their shares until approximately March 1988, when each sold a portion of his shares to another nominee of BCCI. Approximately one year later, CLIFFORD and [redacted] repaid their loans to BCCI, but still hold a portion of their stock in CCAH. b6 b7C

Prosecution of this matter is being pursued by the office of the United States Attorney, Washington, D.C.

Request of the Bureau: The Visual Investigative Analysis Unit, Criminal Investigative Division, is requested to provided assistance in this matter. Specifically needed are flow charts and link analysis information. This case is a significant and complex documentary investigation. It involves a voluminous amount of records. Such include documents obtained from the Federal Reserve Board (FRB), information obtained from a joint [redacted] Customs Investigation, print media articles and records/interviews from captioned investigation. It should be noted that due to the stature of individuals and financial institutions involved in this matter, national media attention has been focused on this case. As the investigation progresses it is anticipated that media attention will intensify. b7E

Synopsis: This matter was predicated on the receipt of a criminal referral from the FRB. It was alleged that false statements were made to the FRB with regard to the ownership of Credit and Commerce American Holdings (CCAH). Among the holdings of CCAH is First American Bankshares (FABS), which owns among others, First American Bank (FAB). The central allegation was that the principal share holders of CCAH were merely nominees for the Bank of Credit and Commerce, International (BCCI) in 1982, when they purchased controlling interest in FABS' predecessor, Financial General Bankshares (FGB). The FGB shares were then traded for shares in CCAH. The purchasing of the shares and the resultant control of CCAH was established using loans from BCCI. The loans were made by BCCI for the purpose of gaining control of CCAH. Such was in direct contravention of an agreement between CCAH and the FRB. According to said agreement, BCCI was to have no financial or managerial participation in CCAH. Subjects in this matter include CLARK M. CLIFFORD, a prominent Washington, DC, Attorney and his [redacted] CLIFFORD has served as an Advisor to Presidents TRUMAN, KENNEDY, JOHNSON and CARTER. CLIFFORD also served as Secretary of Defense in the JOHNSON Administration. Other prominent individuals involved in this matter include Sheik ZAYED BIN SULTAN AL-NAHAYAN, the Ruler of Abu Dhabi, GHAITH PHARAON and BERT LANCE, former Director of Management and Budget under President CARTER. Additional criminal referrals related to this matter are expected to be made by the FRB.

Administrative: WMFO has assigned two SA'S to investigate this matter on a full time basis. In addition, two Prosecutors have likewise been assigned on a full time basis, one AUSA from the District of Columbia and one Trial Attorney from the Fraud Section, DOJ. U.S. Attorney JAY STEVENS considers this a high priority within his office and has been personally involved in the direction of this investigation.

On 5/28/91, SA [redacted] and I, along with AUSA [redacted], WDC, and DOJ [redacted] b6 b7C met with [redacted] and [redacted] of the Board of Governors of the Federal Reserve System (BGFRS), 20th and C Streets, N.W., WDC. The purpose for this meeting was to discuss the progress being made by the BGFRS in its BCCI-related investigation and the status of the BGFRS' attempt to acquire BCCI documents from the latter's headquarters in Abu Dhabi.

Special Counsel [redacted] reported that the documents were sent from Abu Dhabi to London, England, to the attorneys for BCCI. Subsequently, the Bank of England ordered BCCI to turn the documents over to the BGFRS. This was done in two submissions, one consisting of approximately 6,000 documents, and another of approximately 1,200. An additional 2,000 documents remain in London, England, pending a determination of whether their release will violate bank secrecy laws in various jurisdictions. Currently, [redacted] are reviewing the documents thus far received. According to [redacted] these documents are "not in perfect shape," i.e., they are out of order with regard to the matters to which they pertain, and [redacted] are making "an effort to clean them up," [redacted] said. b6 b7C

copy filed Sub Aug 3

The next investigative step to be taken by the BGFRS is to depose [redacted] on Monday, June 3, CLARK CLIFFORD on June 5, [redacted] on June 7, and on some future date, [redacted], who is represented by [redacted] These depositions are part of the BGFRS' preparation for seeking civil-money penalties and restitution orders against [redacted] CLIFFORD, and the law firm of CLIFFORD & WARNKE. b6 b7C

Next, [redacted] summarized and characterized the BCCI documents. They include such things as nominee agreements, handwritten notes, and account statements, all tending to show that BCCI had control over the management of CCAH and its subsidiaries. Their continuing review of these documents has disclosed such things as BCCI "coordinating committee" minutes which document the presence of both National Bank of Georgia and First American Bank/New York personnel on the committee, and that the committee was reporting to both BCCI and First American Bankshares (FABS). Present from First American Bank/New York, were [redacted] and from First American Bank/Georgia were [redacted] (now in Hong Kong), [redacted] (phonetic), and [redacted]. The minutes show the meeting occurred in or about November 1985, predating the acquisition of NBG, and report discussions about the move of NBG from ownership by GHAITH PHARAON to FABS. A corroborative witness concerning the coordinating committee's activities, [redacted] said, would be [redacted] (phonetic), currently employed at the Meridian Bank of New York, but who was secretary to the coordinating committee in Miami, Florida, at the time of the meeting, and who told the BGFRS of the minutes and that [redacted] was present during the meetings. Another possibly-corroborative witness is [redacted] currently in custody in the Middle District of Florida.

The move to change from ownership by PHARAON to that of FABS was based in large part on PHARAON's company, REDEC, defaulting on a large BCCI loan. With regard to the sale of NBG to FABS, [redacted] an attorney at CLIFFORD & WARNKE, prepared and maintained the stock-transfer records. Concerning the rights-offering to finance FABS' purchase of NBG, [redacted] and [redacted] found a facsimile transmission from [redacted] to [redacted] putting the latter on notice that the [redacted] family was going to pay $6,096.00 per share of the CCAH stock to be offered. The day before the exercising of that option, [redacted] and CLIFFORD purchased their CCAH stock at $2,016.00 per share.

[redacted] have discovered some circumstantial evidence that CLIFFORD and [redacted] knew of the nominee status of the CCAH investors. An example would be a June, 1986 letter from CLIFFORD to AGHA ABEDI, covering a memorandum from the law firm, and advising ABEDI of the need to exercise care in that NBG purchase. Another group of documents are schedules prepared by [redacted] to show amounts required to cover [redacted] and CLIFFORD's taxes and other expenses incurred by virtue of the gain in the value of their stock. Other documents attest to the fact that BCCI had a set plan for using nominees everywhere in the world.

[redacted] then summarized their findings with regard to BCCI's acquisition of CCAH. In or about April 1977, the "Middendorf Group" bought out the former owner of Financial

1325015-000-5008

General Bankshares (FGB). General [redacted], and then, probably through [redacted]. In a 1/30/78 memorandum located by [redacted] reports to ABEDI that BCCI is buying stock in FGB and has two names, [redacted] but needs two others. The memo reportedly goes on to state, "Our friend (i.e., [redacted]" recommends that CLIFFORD be hired, inasmuch as CLIFFORD has "blessed" the acquisition. b6 b7C

Also found among the documents in Abu Dhabi were letters to [redacted] and CLARK CLIFFORD from applicants for the position of CEO at FGB. The responses to those letters, which also were found, said that [redacted] and CLIFFORD were "sending them on to the appropriate person (i.e., ABEDI)." b6 b7C

[redacted] reported that, when interviewed by him and [redacted] the former CEO at FAB/NY, said that BCCI was "close" to FAB/NY and NBG. He also told them that no money could have moved into or out of FAB without his knowing it. However, they subsequently discovered that $45 million had gone into an ICIC Certificate of Deposit (CD), and that [redacted] had not known either of ICIC or the money. FABS [redacted] subsequently told [redacted] that [redacted] had ordered the transfer. b6 b7C

CLIFFORD's and [redacted] 1986 stock purchase was made with a loan from BCCI, after [redacted] had tried to change the loan proposal. [redacted] (a law firm specializing in mergers and acquisitions) had negotiated with [redacted] with regard to a loan to [redacted] and CLIFFORD. At the "last minute" however, sometime just prior to July 25, 1986, i.e., the rights-offering date, [redacted] sent [redacted] a new loan proposal, saying that [redacted] and CLIFFORD wanted a loan to be of the "non-recourse" variety. [redacted] responded by sending a letter to [redacted], saying "That was not our deal"; that [redacted] did not want CCAH stock anyway, and much less so as the only security in the deal. b6 b7C

The BGFRS anticipates filing its "notice of charges" against BCCI by the end of July 1991. Subsequently, BCCI will have a right to a hearing.

[redacted] reported having received a letter from [redacted] claiming that the entire matter, i.e., that he allegedly was only a BCCI nominee, was "a fabrication." [redacted] protested that he had not been loaned any money; that the stock in CCAH was his and that he wanted it back. b6 b7C

I initiated a discussion of the need to be able to attribute to the various sources the records being brought from Abu Dhabi. The BGFRS' response was that, although these documents came from BCCI in Abu Dhabi, they had been gathered from various points, e.g., the basements in [redacted] and ABEDI's residences and other BCCI offices throughout the world. The b6 b7C discussion then continued on the topic of authentication of these records, which, it was ultimately decided, might be a problem. The meeting was concluded at this point.

Upcoming investigation by SA [redacted] and myself, along with AUSA [redacted] and [redacted] includes interviews of [redacted] in New York, New York, beginning on 5/29/91, and also includes a contact of SA [redacted] former source, who is still active in the New York Division as [redacted] (NY case agent, SA [redacted], concurs with contact), and with security personnel of KIDDER PEABODY. b6 b7C

On 5/29/91, SA [redacted] and I, accompanied by AUSA [redacted] and [redacted] traveled to New York and conducted the planned investigation between May 29-31, 1991. b6 b7C

From : SA [redacted] b6 b7C

Subject: CLARK MC ADAMS CLIFFORD, aka; Et Al;

OO:WMFO b6 b7C

The purpose of the memorandum is to update the file on the negotiations with [redacted], who is the central figure in our planned trip to London, England.

In a telephone conversation on 6/11/91 with [redacted] currently residing in Sanibel Island, Florida, telephone [redacted], I requested that [redacted] contact [redacted] and ascertain whether he would be willing to come directly to the United States, bypassing London, given assurances that his transportation and subsistence would be paid. On 6/12/91, [redacted] reported having spoken with [redacted] and being told that, without some prior meeting in a neutral site, e.g., London, [redacted] was not going to come to the United States at all. The purpose of such a meeting would be for [redacted] to determine if his immunity from prosecution was certain and whether his reward for being of material assistance in the government's case would be sufficient, given the risks to himself and his family that he believes exist. b6 b7C

According to [redacted] plans to come to London to join MRS. [redacted] sometime between June 24 and July 31, 1991, and already has the necessary visa to make the trip. [redacted] told [redacted] he would be willing to travel to London during that period of time to meet with the representatives of the U.S. Government on a specific date, as long as the government reimbursed him for his ticket. b6 b7C

[redacted] told [redacted] that his family has been getting "intense pressure," which is being passed along to [redacted]. Almost on a daily basis, someone in [redacted] family seeks his assurance that he is not going to divulge the information he knows. [redacted] told [redacted] that, very recently, he had received a facsimile from SHEIK ZAYED, offering [redacted] a "six-figure settlement," provided that [redacted] agrees to be silent and to show ZAYED all the documents which [redacted] supposedly possesses. I explained to that, with regard to the captioned matter, the likelihood of receiving any substantial reward for his services was unlikely. b6 b7C said he had talked to Customs' agent in Tampa, Florida, who is interested in using in an ongoing investigation of the operation of BCCI in the Cayman Islands. said he realized that such an effort, and any statutory reward to which might be entitled, was a long-term proposition.

then said that one of the stops he intends to make during his own visit in the U.S. is Senator KERRY's office in Washington, D.C. (WDC). Senator KERRY is also aware of and interested in talking to The information which and possess, believes, will encourage Senator KERRY to involve the Board of Governors of the Federal Reserve System (BGFRS), which might possibly lead to monetary sanctions against BCCI, et al, in which might share. believes that such a reward could be substantial and would "probably bring in tomorrow." b6 b7C

On 6/12/91, I contacted AUSA and informed him of my conversation with . We agreed that, given the lack of any assurance that was going to be in London during the week of June 16 through June 22, 1991, and the necessity for AUSA and to prepare for the upcoming Grand Jury appearances of CLARK CLIFFORD and currently scheduled for 6/26 and 6/28/91, respectively, it would be best to reschedule our trip to London during the second week of July 1991, and to give a "date-certain" of 7/9/91, to meet us there. We also agreed it would be advantageous to get to WDC during the first week of July 1991, and to have him testify before the Grand Jury on 7/3/91. b6 b7C

After researching the matter, AUSA informed me that Title 12, USC, Section 1831K provides that, with the concurrence of the Department of Justice, the maximum amount of reward available to someone like is $100,000, no matter what the size of the penalties imposed by the BGFRS. It was agreed that I would contact and inform him of the nature of the reward statute, and give him the date of 7/9/91 for trip to England. is to convey to that he will be reimbursed for his trip and that a letter detailing his immunity would be there. b6 b7C

Efforts to contact between 6/13-17/91 have been unsuccessful. b6 b7C

On 6/21/91, a group of tape recordings, relating to the captioned matter, was received from the U.S. Customs Service. On 6/26/91, I attempted to place the box containing those tapes in ELSUR storage at WMFO HQ, operating under the impression that it was the only such storage facility. At the time, all personnel assigned to handle Bulky Exhibits at WMFO HQ were in a meeting with the inspectors. Therefore, I reliquished custody of the box to SA [redacted] (A-5), who had agreed to place it in Bulky Exhibits when the meeting ended. b6 b7C

On 7/2/91, SA [redacted] notified me that WMFO HQ Bulky Exhibits had refused to accept the box, saying that it should be stored in the NVMRA's ELSUR-storage facility. On 7/3/91, I reacquired custody of the box from SA [redacted], and now request that it be accepted for storage within the NVMRA's Bulky Exhibit facility. b6 b7C

The purpose of this memorandum is to update the file on progress toward our trip to London, England, during the week of 7/7-13/91.

On 6/12/91, AUSA [redacted], Washington, D.C. (WDC), requested that I provided [redacted] of the U.S. State Department, telephone [redacted], with contact phone numbers for [redacted], who represents [redacted]. I telephoned [redacted] and gave her the numbers for [redacted] in Florida, [redacted] and for [redacted] in Pakistan, [redacted] b6 b7C

Later on 6/12/91, I contacted Assistant Legat [redacted] by telephone in London and, in a conference call, also spoke with U.S. Customs Agent [redacted], also assigned to the U.S. Embassy in London. I informed [redacted] that, due to the problems encountered in arranging for the appearance of [redacted] in London, we have been forced to postpone our trip until the week of 7/13-13/91. SA [redacted] said he had already arranged for some interviews, but would reschedule them. Those whom he had already contacted and who had agreed to be interviewed were [redacted] of Price Waterhouse, and a representative of the Bank of England. I informed [redacted] that, with regard to persons currently employed by BCCI, AUSA [redacted] would clear the interviews of them through the attorney representing BCCI, [redacted] b6 b7C

On 6/17/91, at AUSA [redacted] request, I contacted [redacted] to determine her progress in arranging the host-country clearance for us to interview [redacted] in London. [redacted] reported that she had not yet sent the cable with the information her counterparts in London required to contact [redacted] but would do so.

On 6/19/91, Assistant Legat [redacted] reported that he had arranged hotel accommodations for our investigative party at the Mostyn Hotel, located on Bryanston Street, London, telephone 011-44-71-935-2361. b6 b7C

Also on 6/19/91, at AUSA [redacted] request, I contacted [redacted] and gave her the name and identifying information on [redacted] whom we plan to interview in London on our trip. I contacted [redacted] and gave her the information on [redacted]. During that conversation, she told me she had sent the numbers for [redacted] to London. b6 b7C

On 6/20/91, in a telephone conversation with Assistant Legat [redacted] and U.S. Customs Agent [redacted] discussed the 6/13/91 letter from [redacted] of BCCI's Legal Department to [redacted] of the U.K. Customs and Excise Office (see Serial 74). I informed SA [redacted] that AUSA [redacted] had been and would be in contact with Attorney [redacted], who would be conferring with the London Attorney, [redacted], of Allen & Overy, about our proposed interviews of current BCCI employees. SA [redacted] said that, as soon as he is notified of that liaison, he will continue to arrange interviews as requested. b6 b7C

SA [redacted] informed me that he had been contacted by another Customs agent, reporting source information with regard to BCCI personnel. According to the source, AGHA ABEDI, since [redacted]" and [redacted] had taken over as [redacted]. The source contended that [redacted] is a key person and is willing to be interviewed. [redacted] will attempt to locate [redacted] and arrange for him to come to London. b6 b7C

SA [redacted] also said he is setting up a meeting with the Bank of England personnel and would like to sit in on that meeting. I told him I had no objection to his doing so. b6 b7C

On 6/25/91, [redacted] informed me that, by Friday, 6/28/91, we needed to get a list of all the people set for interviews in London. Subsequently, I telephoned Legat London and spoke with Assistant Legat [redacted] who said he would pass on the request to Assistant Legat [redacted] b6 b7C

On 6/26/91, AUSA [redacted] and I met with [redacted] at AUSA [redacted] office. The purpose for the meeting was to discuss what it would take to get [redacted] to agree to come to London to be interviewed, then to come to WDC to testify in the Grand Jury. [redacted] reported he had been in contact with the offices of U.S. Senator John Kerry, the Board of Governors of the Federal Reserve System (BGFRS), and the Manhattan District Attorney, Robert Morganthau. [redacted] is attempting to structure a situation in which [redacted] if he agrees to come to the U.S. to assist in the various inquiries about BCCI, will receive the most protection b6 b7C and most reward available. Essentially, [redacted] was told that, if [redacted] agrees to come to London, is forthcoming, and has information which will help, and understands he will have to testify before the Grand Jury in WDC in addition to whatever testimony he gives elsewhere, the U.S. Attorney's Office, i.e., DOJ, will cooperate in any attempt [redacted] makes to receive a statutory reward from the BGFRS. [redacted] was also told not to even consider playing one agency against another. At the close of the meeting, it was arranged that [redacted] would return the following day to be interviewed and to display the documents which he said he had brought as a "proffer" of [redacted] testimony. b6 b7C

On 6/27/91, [redacted] was interviewed at AUSA [redacted] office (see FD-302). b6 b7C

I subsequently contacted [redacted], telephone [redacted] who assists [redacted] at the Department of State. Ms. [redacted] informed me that the list being requested was one which AUSA [redacted] should have provided through his administrative office in answer to a questionnaire. Using the information from that questionnaire, the State Department prepares a cable to the consular section of the embassy in London containing the identifying information on the travelers and interviewees, which the consular section then transmits to the British Ministry of Foreign Affairs. Using that information, the ministry then gives host-country clearance to the travelers and verifies with the interviewees that their appearance is voluntary. b6 b7C

Travel arrangements, as they now stand, are for SA [redacted] and me to depart, via United Airlines from Dulles Airport at approximately 6:00 PM on 7/7/91, arriving in London at approximately 6:30 AM, 7/8/91. Our return would be during the day on 7/13/91, again via United Airlines. b6 b7C

On 7/1/91, in a telephone conversation with AUSA [redacted], we discussed the upcoming interviews in London of various witnesses in captioned matter. AUSA [redacted] was attempting to determine who had already been contacted for interviews. I informed AUSA [redacted] that contacts of several of the people on the list sent to the Legat by teletype on 6/12/91, were being held in abeyance pending his determination from BCCI's counsel, [redacted], that interviews of certain current employees were approved. I further mentioned that AUSA [redacted] had agreed to contact [redacted] in deference to the letter which BCCI's London counsel, [redacted] sent to British Customs Representative [redacted], dated 6/13/91, about which I had told him earlier. AUSA [redacted] said he was unaware of that letter and asked about its contents. After reading the letter to him, I sent him a copy, via facsimile, along with the list of people I had requested the Legat to contact to arrange interviews. The latter document was sent to AUSA [redacted] in response to his further comment that he was not aware there were so many BCCI people involved. After reminding AUSA [redacted] that it was from him and [redacted] that I had obtained the list of potential interviewees, he said he would set about making sure that the list was properly conveyed.

Later on 7/1/91, [redacted] called and requested that I attempt to obtain employee identification numbers (EINs) for Financial General Bankshares, BCCI and CCAH for purposes of inclusion in the ex parte order he is preparing for submission to the court in order to secure tax records for those and other entities. I telephoned [redacted] Agent [redacted] in Tampa, Florida, and requested that he search for those EINs. SA [redacted] said he thought he had already submitted that information to [redacted] but would check his records again.

We also explained that the BGFRS is b6 b7C conducting its own inquiry, with which we are cooperating, although they are for different purposes. Also, we disclosed our awareness of the investigation being conducted by the New York County District Attorney's Office (NYDAO), explaining that we were not parties to it and did not know its nature or scope.

[redacted] informed us that TR's primary focus at this b6 b7C very early stage is to ascertain what records and assets it has, and to microfilm all the records prior to any determination being made as to the dissolution of BCCI. He has been given six months

On 7/10/91, SA [redacted] and I, accompanied by U.S. DOJ Trial Attorney [redacted] and Her Majesty's [redacted], met with attorneys [redacted] at their law firm, Barlow Lyde & Gilbert (BLG), Beaufort House, 15 St. Botolph Street, London EC3A 7NJ, telephone 071-247-2277. BLG represents the auditing firm of PRICE WATERHOUSE (PW) with regard to civil and criminal inquiries evolving from PW's audits of the various incarnations of Bank of Credit and Commerce International Holdings, collectively called BCCI. b6 b7C

At the outset of the meeting, Agent [redacted] introduced us, giving a brief overview of how the captioned matter is associated with the prior, combined U.K.-U.S. Government (Middle District of Florida) inquiry [redacted] followed with a further explanation of how the captioned matter is concerned with issues of the clandestine ownership and control of an American bank by BCCI. b6 b7C b7E

[redacted] asked how our inquiry fits in with those of the Board of Governors of the Federal Reserve System (BGFRS) and the New York County District Attorney, ROBERT MORGANTHAU. [redacted] explained that ours is a federal inquiry, predicated on a criminal referral from the BGFRS, while the grand jury investigation being conducted by DA MORGANTHAU is separate and distinct; that we are not sharing the results of our inquiry with the NY DA, or vice versa. [redacted] seemed incredulous, asking what we wanted from PW that we could not derive from cooperating with the NY DA and the BGFRS. In the ensuing exchange, [redacted] asked if the nature of our inquiries of PW could and would be kept confidential. b6 b7C

[redacted] responded by saying he found such a request "bizarre", and asked what [redacted] was implying. [redacted] told [redacted] that the very existence of a federal grand jury (FGJ) inquiry is a confidential matter, and that any disclosure of its existence or purpose, or of the information it receives, is prohibited, even to another law enforcement entity, such as the NY DA, without leave of the court. [redacted] then said again that it seemed "bizarre" to him that we would be asking him not to cooperate further with the NY DA, and spoke of his observation that grand-jury confidentiality had already been breached on several occasions, given reports appearing in the New York Times about information supposedly provided to that body. Specifically mentioned was information attributed to a PW audit report, which [redacted] then denied had been given to the NY DA or grand jury by BLG. b6 b7C

[redacted] assured [redacted] that we were in no way asking or requiring him to not cooperate fully with the NY DA, only that the nature of our inquiry not be disclosed; that we were aware of the disclosures of NY grand jury information to the press, but that we could not and would not make any comment about it; that we take the confidentiality of the FGJ process very seriously, and could assure him that information provided to the FGJ by PW in this matter would not appear in the New York Times. b6 b7C

[redacted] invoked "auditor/client confidentiality" also, saying that it precluded PW from disclosing what the nature and contents of its audits were. This followed his renewed request to know what information we were seeking from PW, and our response, which was to ask what records existed, other than the already-disclosed coded and plain-text audit reports. [redacted] did say that numerous records had been made available to the Bank of England by PW under "Section 82" of the U.K.'s bank security act. b6 b7C

According to [redacted], PW took over the coordination of auditing all of BCCI (in 69 countries) from the auditing firm of ERNST & WINNEY in 1987. With regard to the disclosure of any PW records of those audits, [redacted] said he would confer with PW's counsel in the U.S., whose identity he declined to disclose. b6 b7C

PURPOSE

The purpose of this communication is to justify a claim for reimbursement of expenses incurred by SA [redacted] of this office during a recent trip to London, England, in conjunction with the captioned matter. b6 b7C

DETAILS

During the week of 7/7-13/91, SA [redacted] one of the co-case agents assigned to the captioned matter, traveled, as approved, to London, England, to conduct investigation consisting of meetings, interviews and reviews of documents. One of the interviews was of a potentially-key witness, [redacted] a Pakistani national, who was concerned about his own culpability and, therefore, only agreed to this initial interview because it would occur in a neutral site, i.e., London. Even though he had agreed to be interviewed, [redacted] balked at coming to the U.S. Embassy, despite assurances he would not be arrested. Because it was therefore deemed necessary to arrange for other facilities, a conference room was rented at the Mostyn Hotel, where SA [redacted] was staying, for the two days on which the interview occurred. Refreshments were also purchased. b6 b7C

The charges for the room came to 107.00 Pounds Sterling, while the refreshments, including tips, came to 20.00 Pounds Sterling. The total in U.S. dollars, using the appropriate conversion factor of $1.655/Pound Sterling, was $210.19.

It is believed that the expense was justified by the extremely valuable information derived from the interview, and the unavailability of other suitable facilities. It was not acceptable to use SA [redacted] room at the hotel due to its small size and the fact that the number of participants in the b6 b7C

DISTRICT ATTORNEY - COUNTY OF NEW YORK

News Release

Contact: Gerald McKelvey

(212) 335-9400

A New York County grand jury has returned an indictment that charges that the Bank of Credit and Commerce International (BCCI), its related entities and two of its founders engaged in a multi-billion dollar scheme to defraud its depositors, falsified bank records to hide illegal money laundering, and committed larcenies totaling more than $30 million, District Attorney Robert M. Morgenthau announced today. The indictment stems from an ongoing investigation of BCCI that began in the spring of 1989.

Charged in the indictment are AGHA HASAN ABEDI, who founded the bank in 1972, and SWALEH NAQVI, who was the bank's chief operating officer until October of 1990. The corporate defendants are BANK OF CREDIT AND COMMERCE INTERNATIONAL, S.A., the leading bank established by ABEDI in 1972, and four subsequently created entities, BANK OF CREDIT AND COMMERCE INTERNATIONAL (OVERSEAS) LIMITED; BCCI HOLDINGS (LUXEMBOURG) S.A.; INTERNATIONAL CREDIT AND INVESTMENT COMPANY (OVERSEAS) LIMITED; and INTERNATIONAL CREDIT AND INVESTMENT COMPANY HOLDINGS.

"This indictment spells out the largest bank fraud in world financial history," Mr. Morgenthau said. "BCCI was operated as a corrupt criminal organization throughout its entire 19 year history. It systematically falsified its records. It knowingly allowed itself to be used to launder the illegal income of drug sellers and other criminals. And it paid bribes and kickbacks to public officials."

All of the defendants are charged with the crime of Scheme to Defraud in the First Degree and three counts of Grand Larceny in the First Degree.

"By means of this scheme, the defendants obtained more than $20 billion from its depositors, including citizens and foreign nationals in New York City, banks headquartered in Manhattan, central banks of other nations, and thousands of depositors throughout the world," Mr. Morgenthau said. "The best estimates indicate at this time that upwards of $5 billion has been lost through this fraud."

The Scheme to Defraud count includes allegations that the defendants paid a bribe of $3 million to the two senior officers of the Central Reserve Bank of Peru, in exchange for receiving deposits from the bank.

The Grand Larceny counts relate to the loss of more than $30 million from the American Express Bank Limited on July 5, 1991, when the Bank of England and regulatory agencies in other nations, including the United States, ordered the closing of BCCI. Because BCCI obtained the deposits from American Express Bank through fraudulent means, by falsely representing BCCI's financial condition, the losses are thefts, Mr. Morgenthau said.

In addition, BCCI S.A. is charged with eight counts of Falsifying Business Records in the First Degree, relating to a series of instances on which the bank failed to file currency transaction reports on currency deposits of $10,000 or more in one of the bank's customer accounts, as is required by federal law.

"These transactions appear to be instances of money-laundering," Mr. Morgenthau said.

The top count in the indictment, Grand Larceny in the First Degree, exposes NAQVI and ABEDI to prison terms of up to 25 years on conviction. NAQVI, 57, is living in Abu Dhabi, one of the states in the United Arab Emirates, and ABEDI, 68, is living in Pakistan. The extradition of both men is being sought, Mr. Morgenthau said.

The corporate defendants are exposed to forfeiture actions and fines of millions of dollars on conviction of the charges.

"The corporate structure of BCCI was set up to evade international and national banking laws so that its corrupt practices would be unsupervised and remain undiscovered," Mr. Morgenthau said. "The defendants systematically falsified the capital structure of BCCI to make it appear as though it was a solvent, profitable bank secured by the backing of wealthy businessmen from the Middle East.

"In fact, much of the bank's capitalization and assets were fictitious and its backing illusory," the District Attorney continued. "The defendants created the appearance of respectability by persuading world leaders to appear with them and defrauded their thousands of depositors, both small and large, who relied on that appearance of respectability."

"This largest of Ponzi schemes is over," he said. "But we have much yet to discover about this bank, and much to do in reforming international banking practices. The key to the scheme was that BCCI was structured in such a way so that no single central bank was able to monitor its activities. No foreign bank should be permitted to operate in the United States unless it is supervised by a single, strong central bank and is not bound by bank secrecy laws of another jurisdiction. Without these reforms, the potential for massive worldwide bank fraud remains."

The investigation is continuing, Mr. Morgenthau said.

The District Attorney thanked the Federal Reserve Bank of New York and the Board of Governors of the Federal Reserve System, and the New York State Department of Banking, for their close cooperation from the earliest stages of the investigation. "Our combined efforts and resources have enabled us to understand one of the most complex and secretive criminal organizations that we have ever encountered," Mr. Morgenthau said. "Without the generous assistance and intricate knowledge of bank regulators, this investigation could not have been done."

He particularly thanked Federal Reserve Board Chairman Alan Greenspan, and William Taylor, Virgil Mattingly Jr. and Richard Small of the Federal Reserve System; and Gerald Corrigan, President of the Federal Reserve Bank of New York, and Ernest

Petrikas and Thomas C. Baxter Jr. of the Federal Reserve Bank of New York.

Mr. Morgenthau also thanked New York State Department of Banking Superintendent Derrick Cephas, Deputy Superintendent Vincent Conlon, former Superintendent Jill Considine, former counsel Barbara Barrantes, and Timothy Mahoney, Jerry Schwartz and Leon Ellen of the Department's Special Investigation Division.

The District Attorney also thanked the Bank of England for its invaluable assistance. "Under British law, the Bank could not assist us without some lawful basis to do so," Mr. Morgenthau said. "Since the time that stage was reached, however, we and the Bank have shared important information in a cooperative and helpful manner."

In the District Attorney's Office, the investigation was conducted under the supervision of Senior Investigator Andrew Finan, assisted by Investigators Mark Baldassare, Robert O'Donoghue and Fred Ghussin and Supervising Investigators Gerald McQueen, Mervin Woike and Thomas Jackson, under the supervision of Chief Investigator Andrew Rosenzweig.

The case was presented to the grand jury by Assistant District Attorney John W. Moscow, Deputy Chief of the Investigation Division, who, with Assistant District Attorneys Richard T. Preiss and Marc Frazier Scholl, is in charge of the prosecution. They were assisted by Investigation Division Chief Michael G. Cherkasky.

THE GRAND JURY OF THE COUNTY OF NEW YORK, by this indictment, accuse defendants Bank of Credit and Commerce International S.A., Bank of Credit and Commerce International (Overseas) Limited, and BCCI Holdings (Luxembourg) S.A. [These defendants along with other related entities described below are hereinafter included in the appellation "BCC Group."], defendants International Credit and Investment Company (Overseas) Limited and International Credit and Investment Company Holdings [These defendants along with other related entities described below are hereinafter included in the appellation "ICIC Group."], and defendants Agha Hasan Abedi and Swaleh Naqvi of the crime of SCHEME TO DEFRAUD IN THE FIRST DEGREE, in violation of Penal Law Section 190.65 (1)(a), committed as follows:

The defendants, in the County of New York and elsewhere, during the period from November 1, 1972 through July 5, 1991, with intent to defraud ten and more persons and to obtain property from ten and more persons by false and fraudulent pretenses, representations, and promises, engaged in a scheme constituting a systematic ongoing course of conduct and so obtained property from one and more such persons, as follows:

The defendants, in the County of New York and elsewhere, made false and fraudulent pretenses, representations and promises as to (1) the identity of the owners of the BCC Group, and the degree of their financial involvement in the BCC Group, (2) the amount of shareholder capital at risk in the BCC Group, (3) the financial condition, net worth, and capital of the member entities of BCC Group, and (4) the ability of the BCC Group to repay creditors, including but not limited to depositors and banking institutions.

By means of the scheme described herein the defendants obtained property, the value of which has exceeded $20,000,000,000.00 (twenty billion dollars), from diverse persons, including United States citizens and foreign citizens residing in New York County, banks based in New York County, central banks of other nations, and thousands of depositors throughout the world.

The scheme was premised on the fact that banks rely on credit. The essence of the scheme was to convince depositors and other banking and financial institutions, by means of false pretenses, representations, and promises that the BCC Group was a safe financial repository and institution for funds, and thereby defendants acted to persuade depositors and banking and other financial institutions to provide the BCC Group banks with deposits and credit.

Foremost among the originators of the scheme was defendant Abedi, a Pakistani banker who had worked as chief executive of a number of Pakistani banks, until the nationalization of the banks in Pakistan in 1972. Abedi recruited co-schemers with the notion of establishing a third world bank which would be substantially owned by its employees and would be so structured that it could not be nationalized.

Defendants Abedi and Naqvi, acting with and assisted by others, established a series of banks and bank holding companies, as well as related corporate and investment entities, in more than seventy countries around the world. The leading bank, established first, was defendant Bank of Credit and Commerce International, S.A. [hereinafter BCCI, SA] established in 1972 in Luxembourg, Abu Dhabi, and England. Defendants Abedi and Naqvi, along with others, thereafter caused the incorporation and establishment of defendant Bank of Credit and Commerce International Holdings, S.A. [hereinafter BCCI Holdings] in Luxembourg in 1974, and defendant Bank of Credit and Commerce International (Overseas) Limited [hereinafter BCCI Overseas] in Grand Cayman in 1975. Those three entities, as well as the related corporate and investment entities established as subsidiaries to BCCI Holdings and as affiliates of defendants were collectively known as "the BCC Group."

BCC Group. Defendant International Credit and Investment Company Holdings [hereinafter ICIC Holdings] was established and was used to conceal stolen monies. ICIC Overseas and ICIC Holdings, together with a series of related corporate and non-corporate entities were collectively known as the "ICIC Group."

Defendant Abedi was in charge of the BCC Group and the ICIC Group. Defendant Naqvi rose to become the second in command. In the late 1980s, after defendant Abedi became incapacitated, defendant Naqvi took charge of the scheme and of the BCC Group and ICIC Group. Defendants Abedi and Naqvi, acting with a small executive staff, created the false pretenses, representations and promises to advance the scheme to defraud.

In the course of the scheme and in furtherance thereof certain acts were committed. Among those are the following:

First, to create the false impression that the BCC Group was a repository and a financial institution with which depositors and other creditors could safely do business, the schemers employed the ruling families of a number of Middle Eastern states and other purportedly wealthy businessmen as nominal shareholders of the entities comprising the BCC Group, in particular, of BCCI Holdings. The schemers falsely pretended, represented, and promised that the nominees owned and financially would stand behind the BCC Group. However, by the terms of the secret contractual agreements the nominees were insulated from any economic loss suffered by the BCC Group.

Among the nominees were Ghaith R. Pharaon, Sheik Kamal Adham, Sayed Jawhary, also known as El Sayed El Sayed El Gohari, and Faisal Saud al-Fulaij, all of whom assisted the defendants by knowingly permitting the BCC Group management to trade on their reputations for wealth by fraudulently using their names as shareholders in BCCI Holdings, and thus, as owners of the BCC Group. Defendants further advanced their scheme to defraud by causing documents to be filed with the Superintendent of Banks of New York State, in New York County, that gave false information concerning the identities of the true owners of the BCC Group, including BCCI Holdings.

In addition, Pharaon, Adham, Jawhary, and al-Fulaij permitted defendants Abedi and Naqvi, the BCC Group, including but not limited to defendants BCCI S.A., BCCI Overseas, and BCCI Holdings, and the ICIC Group, to create the false appearance that the BCC Group and the ICIC Group loaned them money. This resulted in the creation of false assets for the BCC Group in the form of loans receivable which were not genuine. The false and fraudulent impressions were further enhanced by false confirmations of indebtedness to the BCC Group which Pharaon, Adham, Jawhary, and al-Fulaij caused and permitted to be sent to auditors of the BCC Group.

The creation of false assets and the false assertions of ownership of the stock of defendant BCCI Holdings created the false and fraudulent impressions that Pharaon, Adham, Jawhary, and al-Fulaij were economically involved in defendant BCCI Holdings as

Among the nominees were Ghaith R. Pharaon, Sheik Kamal Adham, Sayed Jawhary, also known as El Sayed El Sayed El Gohari, and Faisal Saud al-Fulaij, all of whom assisted the defendants by knowingly permitting the BCC Group management to trade on their reputations for wealth by fraudulently using their names as shareholders in BCCI Holdings, and thus, as owners of the BCC Group. Defendants further advanced their scheme to defraud by causing documents to be filed with the Superintendent of Banks of New York State, in New York County, that gave false information concerning the identities of the true owners of the BCC Group, including BCCI Holdings.

In addition, Pharaon, Adham, Jawhary, and al-Fulaij permitted defendants Abedi and Naqvi, the BCC Group, including but not limited to defendants BCCI S.A., BCCI Overseas, and BCCI Holdings, and the ICIC Group, to create the false appearance that the BCC Group and the ICIC Group loaned them money. This resulted in the creation of false assets for the BCC Group in the form of loans receivable which were not genuine. The false and fraudulent impressions were further enhanced by false confirmations of indebtedness to the BCC Group which Pharaon, Adham, Jawhary, and al-Fulaij caused and permitted to be sent to auditors of the BCC Group.

The creation of false assets and the false assertions of ownership of the stock of defendant BCCI Holdings created the false and fraudulent impressions that Pharaon, Adham, Jawhary, and al-Fulaij were economically involved in defendant BCCI Holdings as shareholders, that their money was at risk in the bank, and that they would financially stand behind the BCC Group if necessary.

Second, defendants established separate subsidiaries of defendant BCCI Holdings in a number of countries, including Luxembourg and the Cayman Islands, which have strict laws against release of banking information. By so doing, defendants guaranteed that there would be no comprehensive regulation on a consolidated basis by any single regulator of the BCC Group. This permitted the inter-bank transfer of assets and liabilities to be conducted in a manner that could and did conceal the true economic position of the BCC Group.

Third, defendants authorized and caused to be authorized the payments of bribes and kickbacks to agents of other banking and financial institutions. By virtue of that practice, defendants attempted to avoid and did avoid scrutiny by other banking and financial institutions of the capital structure and financial viability of the BCC Group. In 1986 and 1987, to obtain deposits from and a banking relationship with the Central Reserve Bank of Peru, defendants Abedi and Naqvi authorized and directed employees of the BCC Group to open a bank account in a Swiss bank in Panama to transmit bribes and kickbacks in the amount of a percentage of the deposits maintained by The Central Reserve Bank of Peru to the two senior officers of that bank. The total of such payments was approximately $3,000,000.00.

Fourth, the defendants systematically engaged in a program known as the External Marketing Program in New York County during the period of from 1987 to 1990. Pursuant to that program defendants and agents of defendants actively solicited bank deposits from numerous persons in New York County and elsewhere for the BCC group. Accounts and deposits were solicited and obtained through false representations that the BCC Group was a safe and viable banking institution. As part of this program, the defendants and their agents also represented that said persons could open, at the agency of defendant BCCI S.A. located in New York County, banking accounts that would be booked at the overseas branches of the BCC Group, including but not limited to branches of defendant BCCI Overseas in Lahore, Pakistan and Dhaka, Bangladesh. By means of these solicitations and with the knowledge that the representations made concerning the financial condition and the capital and net worth of the banking institutions were materially false, defendants obtained property in the form of deposits at the BCCI SA agency in New York County on behalf of the BCC Group from American citizens and residents of New York County.

Fifth, the defendants systematically filed and caused to be filed with the Superintendent of Banks of the State of New York, in New York County, provided and represented as true to correspondent banks, and otherwise published financial statements which defendants knew to contain false and fraudulent representations materially overstating and falsifying the capital, net worth of the BCC Group, and, in particular, of defendants BCCI Holdings, BCCI S.A., and BCCI Overseas, as well as the ability of these institutions to repay their creditors.

SECOND COUNT:

AND THE GRAND JURY AFORESAID, by this indictment, further accuse defendants Bank of Credit and Commerce International S.A. and Bank of Credit and Commerce International (Overseas) Limited, and BCCI Holdings (Luxembourg) S.A., International Credit and Investment Company (Overseas) Limited, International Credit and Investment Company Holdings, Agha Hasan Abedi, and Swaleh Naqvi of the crime of GRAND LARCENY IN THE FIRST DEGREE, in violation of Penal Law Section 155.42, committed as follows:

Defendants, in the County of New York and elsewhere, on or about July 5, 1991, stole certain property from the American Express Bank Ltd., to wit, money, having an aggregate value of in excess of $1,000,000, to wit, greater than $12,900,000 in connection with foreign exchange trading between American Express Bank Ltd. and the BCC Group.

1325015-000-5088

DISTRICT ATTORNEY - COUNTY OF NEW YORK

News Release

Contact: Gerald McKelvey

(212) 335-9400

A New York County grand jury has returned an indictment that charges that the Bank of Credit and Commerce International (BCCI), its related entities and two of its founders engaged in a multi-billion dollar scheme to defraud its depositors, falsified bank records to hide illegal money laundering, and committed larcenies totaling more than $30 million, District Attorney Robert M. Morgenthau announced today. The indictment stems from an ongoing investigation of BCCI that began in the spring of 1989.

Charged in the indictment are AGHA HASAN ABEDI, who founded the bank in 1972, and SWALEH NAQVI, who was the bank's chief operating officer until October of 1990. The corporate defendants are BANK OF CREDIT AND COMMERCE INTERNATIONAL, S.A., the leading bank established by ABEDI in 1972, and four subsequently created entities, BANK OF CREDIT AND COMMERCE INTERNATIONAL (OVERSEAS) LIMITED; BCCI HOLDINGS (LUXEMBOURG) S.A.; INTERNATIONAL CREDIT AND INVESTMENT COMPANY (OVERSEAS) LIMITED; and INTERNATIONAL CREDIT AND INVESTMENT COMPANY HOLDINGS.

"This indictment spells out the largest bank fraud in world financial history," Mr. Morgenthau said. "BCCI was operated as a corrupt criminal organization throughout its entire 19 year history. It systematically falsified its records. It knowingly allowed itself to be used to launder the illegal income of drug sellers and other criminals. And it paid bribes and kickbacks to public officials."

All of the defendants are charged with the crime of Scheme to Defraud in the First Degree and three counts of Grand Larceny in the First Degree.

"By means of this scheme, the defendants obtained more than $20 billion from its depositors, including citizens and foreign nationals in New York City, banks headquartered in Manhattan, central banks of other nations, and thousands of depositors throughout the world," Mr. Morgenthau said. "The best estimates indicate at this time that upwards of $5 billion has been lost through this fraud."

The Scheme to Defraud count includes allegations that the defendants paid a bribe of $3 million to the two senior officers of the Central Reserve Bank of Peru, in exchange for receiving deposits from the bank.

The Grand Larceny counts relate to the loss of more than $30 million from the American Express Bank Limited on July 5, 1991, when the Bank of England and regulatory agencies in other nations, including the United States, ordered the closing of BCCI. Because BCCI obtained the deposits from American Express Bank through fraudulent means, by falsely representing BCCI's financial condition, the losses are thefts, Mr. Morgenthau said.

In addition, BCCI S.A. is charged with eight counts of Falsifying Business Records in the First Degree, relating to a series of instances on which the bank failed to file currency transaction reports on currency deposits of $10,000 or more in one of the bank's customer accounts, as is required by federal law.

"These transactions appear to be instances of money-laundering," Mr. Morgenthau said.

The top count in the indictment, Grand Larceny in the First Degree, exposes NAQVI and ABEDI to prison terms of up to 25 years on conviction. NAQVI, 57, is living in Abu Dhabi, one of the states in the United Arab Emirates, and ABEDI, 68, is living in Pakistan. The extradition of both men is being sought, Mr. Morgenthau said.

The corporate defendants are exposed to forfeiture actions and fines of millions of dollars on conviction of the charges.

"The corporate structure of BCCI was set up to evade international and national banking laws so that its corrupt practices would be unsupervised and remain undiscovered," Mr. Morgenthau said. "The defendants systematically falsified the capital structure of BCCI to make it appear as though it was a solvent, profitable bank secured by the backing of wealthy businessmen from the Middle East.

"In fact, much of the bank's capitalization and assets were fictitious and its backing illusory," the District Attorney continued. "The defendants created the appearance of respectability by persuading world leaders to appear with them and defrauded their thousands of depositors, both small and large, who relied on that appearance of respectability."

"This largest of Ponzi schemes is over," he said. "But we have much yet to discover about this bank, and much to do in reforming international banking practices. The key to the scheme was that BCCI was structured in such a way so that no single central bank was able to monitor its activities. No foreign bank should be permitted to operate in the United States unless it is supervised by a single, strong central bank and is not bound by bank secrecy laws of another jurisdiction. Without these reforms, the potential for massive worldwide bank fraud remains."

The investigation is continuing, Mr. Morgenthau said.

The District Attorney thanked the Federal Reserve Bank of New York and the Board of Governors of the Federal Reserve System, and the New York State Department of Banking, for their close cooperation from the earliest stages of the investigation. "Our combined efforts and resources have enabled us to understand one of the most complex and secretive criminal organizations that we have ever encountered," Mr. Morgenthau said. "Without the generous assistance and intricate knowledge of bank regulators, this investigation could not have been done."

He particularly thanked Federal Reserve Board Chairman Alan Greenspan, and William Taylor, Virgil Mattingly Jr. and Richard Small of the Federal Reserve System; and Gerald Corrigan, President of the Federal Reserve Bank of New York, and Ernest

Petrikas and Thomas C. Baxter Jr. of the Federal Reserve Bank of New York.

Mr. Morgenthau also thanked New York State Department of Banking Superintendent Derrick Cephas, Deputy Superintendent Vincent Conlon, former Superintendent Jill Considine, former counsel Barbara Barrantes, and Timothy Mahoney, Jerry Schwartz and Leon Ellen of the Department's Special Investigation Division.

The District Attorney also thanked the Bank of England for its invaluable assistance. "Under British law, the Bank could not assist us without some lawful basis to do so," Mr. Morgenthau said. "Since the time that stage was reached, however, we and the Bank have shared important information in a cooperative and helpful manner."

In the District Attorney's Office, the investigation was conducted under the supervision of Senior Investigator Andrew Finan, assisted by Investigators Mark Baldassare, Robert O'Donoghue and Fred Ghussin and Supervising Investigators Gerald McQueen, Mervin Woike and Thomas Jackson, under the supervision of Chief Investigator Andrew Rosenzweig.

The case was presented to the grand jury by Assistant District Attorney John W. Moscow, Deputy Chief of the Investigation Division, who, with Assistant District Attorneys Richard T. Preiss and Marc Frazier Scholl, is in charge of the prosecution. They were assisted by Investigation Division Chief Michael G. Cherkasky.

SWALEH NAQVI. :

THE GRAND JURY OF THE COUNTY OF NEW YORK, by this indictment, accuse defendants Bank of Credit and Commerce International S.A., Bank of Credit and Commerce International (Overseas) Limited, and BCCI Holdings (Luxembourg) S.A. [These defendants along with other related entities described below are hereinafter included in the appellation "BCC Group."], defendants International Credit and Investment Company (Overseas) Limited and International Credit and Investment Company Holdings [These defendants along with other related entities described below are hereinafter included in the appellation "ICIC Group."], and defendants Agha Hasan Abedi and Swaleh Naqvi of the crime of SCHEME TO DEFRAUD IN THE FIRST DEGREE, in violation of Penal Law Section 190.65 (1)(a), committed as follows:

The defendants, in the County of New York and elsewhere, during the period from November 1, 1972 through July 5, 1991, with intent to defraud ten and more persons and to obtain property from ten and more persons by false and fraudulent pretenses, representations, and promises, engaged in a scheme constituting a systematic ongoing course of conduct and so obtained property from one and more such persons, as follows:

The defendants, in the County of New York and elsewhere, made false and fraudulent pretenses, representations and promises as to (1) the identity of the owners of the BCC Group, and the degree of their financial involvement in the BCC Group, (2) the amount of shareholder capital at risk in the BCC Group, (3) the financial condition, net worth, and capital of the member entities of BCC Group, and (4) the ability of the BCC Group to repay creditors, including but not limited to depositors and banking institutions.

By means of the scheme described herein the defendants obtained property, the value of which has exceeded $20,000,000,000.00 (twenty billion dollars), from diverse persons, including United States citizens and foreign citizens residing in New York County, banks based in New York County, central banks of other nations, and thousands of depositors throughout the world.

The scheme was premised on the fact that banks rely on credit. The essence of the scheme was to convince depositors and other banking and financial institutions, by means of false pretenses, representations, and promises that the BCC Group was a safe financial repository and institution for funds, and thereby defendants acted to persuade depositors and banking and other financial institutions to provide the BCC Group banks with deposits and credit.

Foremost among the originators of the scheme was defendant Abedi, a Pakistani banker who had worked as chief executive of a number of Pakistani banks, until the nationalization of the banks in Pakistan in 1972. Abedi recruited co-schemers with the notion of establishing a third world bank which would be substantially owned by its employees and would be so structured that it could not be nationalized.

Defendants Abedi and Naqvi, acting with and assisted by others, established a series of banks and bank holding companies, as well as related corporate and investment entities, in more than seventy countries around the world. The leading bank, established first, was defendant Bank of Credit and Commerce International, S.A. [hereinafter BCCI, SA] established in 1972 in Luxembourg, Abu Dhabi, and England. Defendants Abedi and Naqvi, along with others, thereafter caused the incorporation and establishment of defendant Bank of Credit and Commerce International Holdings, S.A. [hereinafter BCCI Holdings] in Luxembourg in 1974, and defendant Bank of Credit and Commerce International (Overseas) Limited [hereinafter BCCI Overseas] in Grand Cayman in 1975. Those three entities, as well as the related corporate and investment entities established as subsidiaries to BCCI Holdings and as affiliates of defendants were collectively known as "the BCC Group."

BCC Group. Defendant International Credit and Investment Company Holdings [hereinafter ICIC Holdings] was established and was used to conceal stolen monies. ICIC Overseas and ICIC Holdings, together with a series of related corporate and non-corporate entities were collectively known as the "ICIC Group."

Defendant Abedi was in charge of the BCC Group and the ICIC Group. Defendant Naqvi rose to become the second in command. In the late 1980s, after defendant Abedi became incapacitated, defendant Naqvi took charge of the scheme and of the BCC Group and ICIC Group. Defendants Abedi and Naqvi, acting with a small executive staff, created the false pretenses, representations and promises to advance the scheme to defraud.

In the course of the scheme and in furtherance thereof certain acts were committed. Among those are the following:

First, to create the false impression that the BCC Group was a repository and a financial institution with which depositors and other creditors could safely do business, the schemers employed the ruling families of a number of Middle Eastern states and other purportedly wealthy businessmen as nominal shareholders of the entities comprising the BCC Group, in particular, of BCCI Holdings. The schemers falsely pretended, represented, and promised that the nominees owned and financially would stand behind the BCC Group. However, by the terms of the secret contractual agreements the nominees were insulated from any economic loss suffered by the BCC Group.

Among the nominees were Ghaith R. Pharaon, Sheik Kamal Adham, Sayed Jawhary, also known as El Sayed El Sayed El Gohari, and Faisal Saud al-Fulaij, all of whom assisted the defendants by knowingly permitting the BCC Group management to trade on their reputations for wealth by fraudulently using their names as shareholders in BCCI Holdings, and thus, as owners of the BCC Group. Defendants further advanced their scheme to defraud by causing documents to be filed with the Superintendent of Banks of New York State, in New York County, that gave false information concerning the identities of the true owners of the BCC Group, including BCCI Holdings.

In addition, Pharaon, Adham, Jawhary, and al-Fulaij permitted defendants Abedi and Naqvi, the BCC Group, including but not limited to defendants BCCI S.A., BCCI Overseas, and BCCI Holdings, and the ICIC Group, to create the false appearance that the BCC Group and the ICIC Group loaned them money. This resulted in the creation of false assets for the BCC Group in the form of loans receivable which were not genuine. The false and fraudulent impressions were further enhanced by false confirmations of indebtedness to the BCC Group which Pharaon, Adham, Jawhary, and al-Fulaij caused and permitted to be sent to auditors of the BCC Group.

The creation of false assets and the false assertions of ownership of the stock of defendant BCCI Holdings created the false and fraudulent impressions that Pharaon, Adham, Jawhary, and al-Fulaij were economically involved in defendant BCCI Holdings as shareholders, that their money was at risk in the bank, and that they would financially stand behind the BCC Group if necessary.

Second, defendants established separate subsidiaries of defendant BCCI Holdings in a number of countries, including Luxembourg and the Cayman Islands, which have strict laws against release of banking information. By so doing, defendants guaranteed that there would be no comprehensive regulation on a consolidated basis by any single regulator of the BCC Group. This permitted the inter-bank transfer of assets and liabilities to be conducted in a manner that could and did conceal the true economic position of the BCC Group.

Third, defendants authorized and caused to be authorized the payments of bribes and kickbacks to agents of other banking and financial institutions. By virtue of that practice, defendants attempted to avoid and did avoid scrutiny by other banking and financial institutions of the capital structure and financial viability of the BCC Group. In 1986 and 1987, to obtain deposits from and a banking relationship with the Central Reserve Bank of Peru, defendants Abedi and Naqvi authorized and directed employees of the BCC Group to open a bank account in a Swiss bank in Panama to transmit bribes and kickbacks in the amount of a percentage of the deposits maintained by The Central Reserve Bank of Peru to the two senior officers of that bank. The total of such payments was approximately $3,000,000.00.

Fourth, the defendants systematically engaged in a program known as the External Marketing Program in New York County during the period of from 1987 to 1990. Pursuant to that program defendants and agents of defendants actively solicited bank deposits from numerous persons in New York County and elsewhere for the BCC group. Accounts and deposits were solicited and obtained through false representations that the BCC Group was a safe and viable banking institution. As part of this program, the defendants and their agents also represented that said persons could open, at the agency of defendant BCCI S.A. located in New York County, banking accounts that would be booked at the overseas branches of the BCC Group, including but not limited to branches of defendant BCCI Overseas in Lahore, Pakistan and Dhaka, Bangladesh. By means of these solicitations and with the knowledge that the representations made concerning the financial condition and the capital and net worth of the banking institutions were materially false, defendants obtained property in the form of deposits at the BCCI SA agency in New York County on behalf of the BCC Group from American citizens and residents of New York County.

Fifth, the defendants systematically filed and caused to be filed with the Superintendent of Banks of the State of New York, in New York County, provided and represented as true to correspondent banks, and otherwise published financial statements which defendants knew to contain false and fraudulent representations materially overstating and falsifying the capital, net worth of the BCC Group, and, in particular, of defendants BCCI Holdings, BCCI S.A., and BCCI Overseas, as well as the ability of these institutions to repay their creditors.

SECOND COUNT:

AND THE GRAND JURY AFORESAID, by this indictment, further accuse defendants Bank of Credit and Commerce International S.A. and Bank of Credit and Commerce International (Overseas) Limited, and BCCI Holdings (Luxembourg) S.A., International Credit and Investment Company (Overseas) Limited, International Credit and Investment Company Holdings, Agha Hasan Abedi, and Swaleh Naqvi of the crime of GRAND LARCENY IN THE FIRST DEGREE, in violation of Penal Law Section 155.42, committed as follows:

Defendants, in the County of New York and elsewhere, on or about July 5, 1991, stole certain property from the American Express Bank Ltd., to wit, money, having an aggregate value of in excess of $1,000,000, to wit, greater than $12,900,000 in connection with foreign exchange trading between American Express Bank Ltd. and the BCC Group.

Memorandum

To : SAC, WMFO (29B-WF-171994) Date 2/6/92

From : SA [redacted] b6 b7C

Subject: HIDDEN INTERESTS;
MAJOR CASE 38;
OO:WMFO

On February 6, 1992, SA [redacted] (C-5 - BCCI), PLA [redacted] and SA [redacted] (FAST) met with Department of Justice (DOJ) Attorneys [redacted] (Trial Attorney) and [redacted] both of whom are in the Asset Forfeiture Office at DOJ. The meeting was held to discuss the asset forfeitures of BCCI and to determine the direction of the investigation as it relates to the assets of BCCI. b6 b7C

BCCI has agreed to a forfeiture of $550 million in assets, cash and other, however this amount can be exceeded if it is determined that BCCI possesses more than that amount in the United States. There is a 50/50 split, of the assets, between the US and a fund that was set up in England (for foreign loses). [redacted] broke the assets down into the four following categories: b6 b7C

1. Known Cash Assets: There is currently $340 million, known cash assets, held in US banks. Currently the US Marshals are collecting these funds. There is no further work needed on these assets.

2. Assets in Liquidation: There is currently $170 million of known assets which are currently in liquidation proceedings. These assets are held in the BCCI agencies of New York and California. There is no further work needed on these assets.

3. Assets belonging to BCCI that BCCI owns or doesn't own: These assets are either held in BCCI affiliates of BCCI subsidiaries. The total amount of these assets are unknown at this time. Of immediate concern are assets in the International Credit and Investment Company (Overseas), LTD (ICIC), ICIC Investment, LTD, ICIC Holdings, LTD, and ICIC Investment. On 1/31/92, $47 million in cash assets, which are currently held in the US by; 1. Oppenheimer & Co., New York, New York (NY); 2. Bear Stearns & Co., NY, NY; 3. Bank of New York, NY, NY; were frozen by the US government to allow the investigation to determine the ties with BCCI. If it is determined that ICIC was owned by BCCI their assets are then forfeited, however this matter must be expedited as the freeze on the assets expires 3/2/92 (an extension can be requested).

4. Unknown Assets. These assets no one knows about and just appear one way or another. One example is that of a computer soft-ware company in California, BCCI apparently held a note against the company, the company went bankrupt and then BCCI took the assets of the company. These assets were turned over to the US government. Another example is a piece of property in Alexandria which BCCI currently holds a note to, the property is an old Church which burned down recently. What needs to be determined is who owns the property, the estimated value is $4 - $5 million.

It was decided that WMFO's FAST team would not be needed at this time, however they may be needed at a later date. SA [redacted] advised [redacted] that he can not be dedicated entirely to the forfeiture task as he also is handling other parts of the investigation, SA [redacted] further advised that other SAs may be brought into the forfeiture task as it relates to their respective investigations. b6 b7C

It is requested that a Sub file be opened up in order to track the forfeiture end of the investigation.

The Order of Forfeiture having been entered, the United States hereby gives notice of its intention to dispose of each of the forfeited properties in such manner as the Attorney General of the United States may direct, consistent with the plea agreement entered into by the defendants and the United States on December 19, 1991. Any persons or entities having or claiming a legal right, title or interest in any of the aforementioned properties must , within thirty (30) days of the final publication of this notice or actual receipt thereof, whichever is earlier, petition the United States District Court for the District of Columbia for a hearing to adjudicate the validity of his/her alleged interest in the property pursuant to Title 18, United States Code, Section 1963(1). If a hearing s requested, it shall be held before the Court alone, without a jury. Claimants will bear the burden of proof in all such cases.Petitions that fail to allege an interest sufficient to maintain a claim under Section 1963(1) shall be subject to dismissal without a hearing.

The petition shall be signed by the petitioner under penalty of perjury and shall identify the particular property or properties in which the petitioner claims a legal right, title or interest; the nature and extent of the such right, title or interest; the nature and extent of the such right, title or interest in each property; the time and circumstances of the petitioner's acquisition of the right, title and interest in each property; and any additional facts and documents supporting the petitioner's claim and the relief sought.

A hearing on the petition shall, to the extent practicable and consistent with the interests of justice, be held within thirty (30) days of the filing of the petition. The Court may consolidate the hearing on the petition with a hearing on any other petition filed by a person other than any of the defendants named above. The petitioner may testify and present evidence and witnesses who appear at the hearing.

Your petition must be filed with the United States District Court for the District of Columbia in Criminal No. 91-0655 (JHG) at the following address:

3rd and Constitution Ave, N.W.
Washington, D.C. 20001

Furthermore, you must serve the United States Department of Justice with your petition at the following address:

Forfeiture Office
P.O. Box 27322, Central Station
Washington, D.C. 20038
Attn: Stefan D. Cassella, Esq.

And you should mail a copy of the petition to counsel for the court-appointed fiduciaries as follows:

Michael Nussbaum, Esq.
Nussbaum & Wald
Suite 200
One Thomas Circle
Washington, D.C. 20005

IF YOU FAIL TO FILE A PETITION TO ASSERT YOUR RIGHT, TITLE OR INTEREST IN THE ABOVE-DESCRIBED PROPERTY, WITHIN THIRTY (30) DAYS OF THIS NOTICE, YOUR RIGHT, TITLE AND INTEREST IN THIS PROPERTY SHALL BE LOST AND FORFEITED TO THE UNITED STATES. THE UNITED STATES THEN SHALL HAVE CLEAR TITLE TO THE PROPERTY HEREIN DESCRIBED AND MAY WARRANT GOOD TITLE TO ANY SUBSEQUENT PURCHASER OR TRANSFEREE.

4) After accepting the guilty pleas, Judge Green imposed the sentence included in the plea agreement - the forfeiture of all BCCI cash and other assets in the U.S., amounting to approximately $550,000,000. (A copy of the Notice of Filing of Memorandum of Intent and Plea Agreement is enclosed.)

On 2/6/92 SSA/PLA [redacted] (Supervisor, Legal Squad/FAST) and SA [redacted] (Legal Advisor, FAST) met with DOJ Asset Forfeiture Office Trial Attorneys (TA) [redacted] concerning the status of the payment/receipt of the $550 mil. We learned the following: b6 b7C

1) The $550,000,000 is an estimate of money and property to be forfeited. There may be more, there may be less. This estimate consists of the following categories of property:

A) $340,000,000: This amount consists of known cash deposits, which are presently being collected by the United States Marshals Service.

B) $170,000,000: This is the value of property presently subject to liquidation proceedings, in progress in California and New York. According to TA [redacted] the actual amount recognized as a result of these proceedings may be more in the neighborhood of $100,000,000 or so after settlement of creditor claims. b6 b7C

C) $47,000,000: ICIC (International Credit and Investment Company) - Grand Cayman Islands, assets in the United States. This money is located in three or more accounts, primarily in New York brokerage companies. JUDGE GREEN ordered that these assets be frozen for a period of thirty (30) days, at the request of DOJ, beginning 1/30/92. DOJ is now in the process of identifying these assets and attempting to secure their custody.

D) Miscellaneous: TA [redacted] advised that there may be other assets in the United States that are yet unidentified. JUDGE GREEN's Order specified that all assets identified as belonging to "BCCI" are to be forfeited. WMFO/BCCI squad has assigned personnel to work with [redacted] and [redacted] to identify these additional assets, if any. In addition, Court appointed fiduciaries who receive a percentage of assets found are also searching for additional assets. b6 b7C

2. TA [redacted] advised that all property forfeited is to be split 50/50 with overseas BCCI creditors. In addition, $10,000,000 is to go to the State of New York Attorney General's Office to cover its investigative expenses. Irrespective of the disposition of assets forfeited, credit b6 b7C will be given to DOJ and FBI/WMFO for the total value of property seized.

3. TA [redacted] is the point of contact to determine what has been seized/paid. He can be reached at the DOJ Asset Forfeiture Office, 1400 New York Avenue, WDC, telephone (202) [redacted]. b6 b7C

REQUEST OF FSPU: Advise WMFO/FAST how to report the BCCI court ordered forfeiture for statistical purposes. SSA [redacted] ext. 7272, or SA [redacted] ext. 7118/7223, may be contacted to respond to any questions concerning this matter. b6 b7C

INDICTMENT

THE GRAND JURY CHARGES:

COUNT ONE

Introduction

AT ALL TIMES MATERIAL TO THIS INDICTMENT:

1. The Federal Reserve System ("FRS") was an agency of the United States. The Board of Governors of the FRS ("the Board") had primary responsibility for supervising and regulating activities of bank holding companies and had residual responsibility for United States Offices of foreign banks.

2. The Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation ("FDIC") was an agency of the United States. The FDIC supervised FDIC-insured, state-chartered savings banks which were not members of the FRS. The FDIC examined and supervised those banks under its purview, approved or denied applications for structural or corporate changes, and ruled on applications for insurance. The FDIC insured deposits in amounts up to $100,000 per account in banks which it insured.

3. The Federal Home Loan Bank Board ("FHLBB") was an agency of the United States established to regulate and supervise savings and loan associations and savings banks insured by the Federal Savings and Loan Insurance Corporation ("FSLIC"). As part of its duties, the FHLBB governed the FSLIC. The FHLBB examined insured institutions to ensure they were operated in a safe and sound manner and in conformity with applicable laws and regulations.

4. The FSLIC was an agency of the United States established to protect depositors by insuring deposits in savings and loan associations and in certain savings banks in amounts up to $100,000 per account.

5. As of August 9, 1989, the Office of Thrift Supervision ("OTS") succeeded to the interests of the FHLBB and the FSLIC with respect to the regulation and supervision of savings and loan associations and certain savings banks, and the FDIC succeeded the FSLIC as the insurer.

6. Independence Bank ("Independence"), Encino, California, was chartered, regulated and supervised by the State of California and had deposits insured by the FDIC.

7. CenTrust Savings Bank, a State Savings Bank ("CenTrust"), was located in Miami, Florida, and was chartered by the State of Florida. CenTrust was regulated and supervised by the FHLBB and had deposits insured by the FSLIC until August 9, 1989. CenTrust was also subject to regulation and supervision by the Florida Department of Banking and Finance.

8. As of August 9, 1989, the insurance of the deposits of CenTrust was transferred to the FDIC and the OTS began its role as regulator and supervisor of CenTrust.

9. CenTrust Trust, formerly the Westport Company, was a wholly-owned subsidiary of CenTrust.

10. Defendant BCCI Holdings (Luxembourg), S.A. ("BCCI Holdings") was a foreign bank holding company established under the laws of Luxembourg.

11. Defendant BCCI Holdings owned and controlled Defendant Bank of Credit and Commerce International S.A. ("BCCI S.A."), a foreign bank established under the laws of Luxembourg. BCCI S.A. operated agencies in Los Angeles, California and New York, New York.

12. Defendant BCCI Holdings also owned and controlled Defendant Bank of Credit and Commerce International (Overseas) Limited ("BCCI Overseas"), a foreign bank established under the laws of the Cayman Islands. BCCI Overseas operated agencies in Miami, Tampa and Boca Raton, Florida.

13. The term "BCCI Group," as used in this indictment, means the combination of BCCI Holdings, BCCI S.A. and BCCI Overseas.

14. The term "BCCI Defendants," as used at times in this Indictment, means the Defendants BCCI Holdings, BCCI S.A., and BCCI Overseas.

15. Defendant International Credit and Investment Company (Overseas) Limited ("ICIC Overseas") was a foreign bank established under the laws of the Cayman Islands.

16. Defendant AGHA HASAN ABEDI was a principal of BCCI Holdings, BCCI (Overseas), BCCI S.A. and ICIC Overseas.

17. Defendant SWALEH NAQVI was a principal of BCCI Holdings, BCCI (Overseas), BCCI S.A. and ICIC Overseas.

18. Defendant GHAITH PHARAON was a Saudi Arabian businessman and a shareholder in the BCCI Group.

The Conspiracy

19. Beginning in or about January 1984, the exact date being unknown to the Grand Jury, and continuing until in or about December 1989, in the District of Columbia and elsewhere, the Defendants knowingly and willfully combined, conspired, confederated, and agreed together and with each other, and with others, both known and unknown to the Grand Jury,

(a) to defraud the United States, in particular the Board, FDIC, FHLBB, and FSLIC, of and concerning their right to have their business and affairs conducted free from deceit, dishonesty, impairment and obstruction, by impeding, hindering, obstructing and defeating by deceitful and dishonest means the lawful functions and operations of said agencies of the United States in regulating and supervising activities of the BCCI Group and their United States branches or agencies, ICIC Overseas, Independence and CenTrust, and

(b) to commit offenses against the United States, that is:

(1) to devise and intend to devise a scheme and artifice to defraud and to obtain money and property, namely, insurance protection and continued insurance protection by the FDIC, backed by funds and security of the United States, of deposits of Independence, by means of fraudulent and false pretenses, representations and promises, and to transmit and cause to be transmitted by means of wire communications in interstate and foreign commerce, certain writings, signs, signals, pictures, and sounds, for the purpose of executing such scheme and artifice, in violation of Title 18, United States Code, Section 1343;

(2) to devise and intend to devise a scheme and artifice to defraud and to obtain money and property, namely, insurance protection and continued insurance protection by the

FDIC, backed by funds and security of the United States, of deposits of Independence, by means of fraudulent and false pretenses, representations and promises, and for the purpose of executing and attempting to execute the scheme and artifice, knowingly to cause to be delivered by the United States Postal Service various mail matter, in violation of Title 18, United States Code, Section 1341;

(3) to knowingly execute and attempt to execute a scheme and artifice to defraud a federally insured financial institution, and by means of fraudulent and false pretenses, representations and promises to obtain moneys, funds and other property owned by or under the control of such a financial institution, in violation of Title 18, United States Code, Section 1344;

(4) to knowingly and willfully make false, fictitious and fraudulent statements to the FHLBB, and to knowingly and willfully make and cause to be made false entries in the books, reports and statements of CenTrust, in violation of Title 18, United States Code, Sections 1001 and 1006;

(5) to knowingly and willfully cause to be made false entries, including material omissions, in the books and records of Independence with the intent to deceive the Board and FDIC, in violation of Title 18, United States Code, Sections 1001 and 1005;

(6) to devise and intend to devise a scheme and artifice to defraud persons and entities throughout the United States of money and property, namely, funds from purchasers of subordinated debentures issued by CenTrust, by means of false and fraudulent pretenses, representations and promises, and for purposes of executing said scheme, to transmit and cause to be transmitted by means of wire communications in interstate and foreign commerce, certain writings, signs, signals, pictures, and sounds, in violation of Title 18, United States Code, Section 1343;

(7) to devise and intend to devise a scheme and artifice to defraud persons and entities throughout the United States of money and property, namely, funds from purchasers of subordinated debentures issued by CenTrust, by means of false and fraudulent pretenses, representations and promises, and for the purpose of executing said scheme, to cause to be placed in an authorized depository for mail matter things and matters to be delivered by the United States Postal Service, in violation of Title 18, United States Code, Section 1341.

The Manners and Means of the Conspiracy

It was a part of the conspiracy that:

20. The Defendants would enrich Defendants AGHA HASAN ABEDI, SWALEH NAQVI, the BCCI Defendants, ICIC Overseas and GHAITH PHARAON and their associates, by taking advantage of opportunities to deceive and exploit United States financial institutions, deceive United States Federal regulatory agencies, and deceive persons and entities throughout the United States.

It was further a part of the conspiracy that:

21. The BCCI Defendants, ICIC Overseas, AGHA HASAN ABEDI and SWALEH NAQVI would acquire and maintain control and influence over Independence with the aid of Defendant GHAITH PHARAON, through deceptive stock purchases by way of hidden stock pledges, nominee agreements, nonrecourse loans, loan releases, beneficial interest agreements and outright falsehoods, fabrications and omissions in applications and reports filed with state and federal regulatory agencies;

22. The Defendants would use Defendant ICIC Overseas to facilitate deception of the Board, FDIC, FSLIC, and FHLBB concerning the involvement of the BCCI Defendants, AGHA HASAN ABEDI, and SWALEH NAQVI with Defendant GHAITH PHARAON;

23. Defendant GHAITH PHARAON, the owner of approximately 25 percent of the stock of CenTrust, would use his relationship with the BCCI Defendants and SWALEH NAQVI to arrange for a branch of the BCCI Group to purchase approximately $25,000,000 of the total $150,000,000 CenTrust subordinated debentures in order to mislead and deceive regulators and investors as to the true market for the CenTrust subordinated debentures;

24. The BCCI Defendants, Defendant GHAITH PHARAON and another would cause material misrepresentations and omissions to be made to investors;

25. The Defendant GHAITH PHARAON and another would promise the BCCI Defendants and SWALEH NAQVI that CenTrust would repurchase any CenTrust subordinated debentures purchased by the BCCI Group;

26. The BCCI Defendants and Defendant SWALEH NAQVI would direct BCCI (Overseas) Paris to purchase approximately $25,000,000 of CenTrust subordinated debentures;

27. Defendant GHAITH PHARAON and another would cause CenTrust Trust to repurchase said subordinated debentures from BCCI (Overseas) Paris, after approximately six weeks, thus making the BCCI Defendants whole and completing the deception of other investors as to the true market for the CenTrust subordinated debentures.

Overt Acts in Furtherance of the Conspiracy

28. In furtherance of the conspiracy, and in order to effect the objects thereof, the defendants and their co-conspirators committed and caused to be committed, in the District of Columbia and elsewhere, the following overt acts, among others:

Overt Acts Relating to Independence Bank

1) On or about January 27, 1984, in Los Angeles, California, Defendant AGHA HASAN ABEDI had a conversation with an employee of the BCCI Group working in California, concerning the purchase by the BCCI Group of a bank on the west coast of the United States.

2) On or about August 28, 1984, in California, the employee referred to in Overt Act No. 1 had a conversation with the then-Chairman of Independence, Encino, California concerning the fact that Independence was for sale.

3) On or about November 13, 1984, the employee referred to in Overt Act No. 1 wrote letters to Defendants AGHA HASAN ABEDI and SWALEH NAQVI, in each of which he discussed the acquisition by BCCI of Independence.

4) In or about November 1984, Defendant AGHA HASAN ABEDI had a telephone conversation with the employee referred to in Overt Act No. 1 in California, in which it was discussed that Defendant GHAITH PHARAON was interested in purchasing Independence himself.

5) On or about November 30, 1984, the employee of the BCCI Group referred to in Overt Act No. 1 signed a "letter of intent," confirming the willingness of a then-unnamed principal to purchase all of the capital stock of Independence.

6) Between in or about December 1984 and January 1985, Defendant GHAITH PHARAON in his personal capacity and Defendant SWALEH NAQVI on behalf of the BCCI Group signed an Investment Advisory Agreement.

7) Between in or about November of 1984 and April of 1985, representatives, agents and/or employees of the BCCI Group had conversations with the then owners of Independence concerning the purchase of Independence.

8) In or about April 1985, an employee of the BCCI Group had conversations with employees of the First National Bank of Boston ("Bank of Boston") concerning obtaining financing for Defendant GHAITH PHARAON to be used for a portion of the purchase price for Independence Bank.

9) On or about April 30, 1985, Defendant GHAITH PHARAON

signed a stock purchase agreement with the then owners of Independence, pursuant to which Defendant GHAITH PHARAON agreed to purchase all of the capital stock of Independence Bank for $23,000,000.00.

10) On or about May 17, 1985, Defendant GHAITH PHARAON signed a memorandum agreement with Defendant ICIC Overseas, which agreement provided, among other things, that:

i. Pharaon and ICIC have agreed to acquire 100% of Independence from the present shareholders;

ii. all shares would be held in the name of Pharaon but only 15% were to be held by Pharaon as the beneficial owner; and

iii. Pharaon was to hold the remaining 85% of the shares in a fiduciary capacity for ICIC.

11) On or about May 17, 1985, Defendant SWALEH NAQVI signed the memorandum agreement referred to in Overt Act No. 10 on behalf of Defendant ICIC Overseas.

12) On or about June 10, 1985, Defendant GHAITH PHARAON signed a document entitled "Notice of Acquisition of Control" which was filed with the FDIC and the California State Department of Banking, which called for the following information in question number 3:

"Indicate the full name of each acquiring party or transferee, the total number of shares presently held by each, the total number of shares to be purchased or transferred to each and the total number of shares to be held by each following completion of the proposed transaction. Indicate names of beneficial owners if shares are to be registered in another name."

the response to which disclosed the only purchaser to be Defendant GHAITH PHARAON.

13) On or about June 11, 1985, in Los Angeles, California, Defendant GHAITH PHARAON met with members of the California State Banking Department, in the course of which meeting Defendant GHAITH PHARAON failed to disclose the existence of the agreement between Defendant ICIC Overseas and Defendant GHAITH PHARAON which was executed on or about May 17, 1985 and which is referred to in Overt Act No. 10.

14) On or about August 30, 1985, an employee of the BCCI Group had a conversation with another employee of the BCCI Group in which the first of these employees requested a loan be made by the BCCI Group to Defendant GHAITH PHARAON for purposes of acquiring Independence.

15) On or about August 30, 1985, an employee of the BCCI Group sent a telex which confirmed that the deposit of $8.5 million of Defendant GHAITH PHARAON will be held in an account at Banque Arabe et Internationale D'Investissement (BAII), Paris, France.

16) On or about August 29, 1985, an employee of the BCCI Group sent a telex to BAII which instructed BAII to confirm to the FDIC and the California State Banking Department, care of Defendant GHAITH PHARAON's attorney, that Defendant GHAITH PHARAON had in excess of $8.4 million on deposit with BAII, which funds were to be used by Defendant GHAITH PHARAON towards the purchase of Independence.

17) On or about September 4, 1985, BAII confirmed by telex to the California State Banking Department, care of Defendant GHAITH PHARAON's attorney, that it held in excess of $8.4 million on deposit for Defendant GHAITH PHARAON, which funds were to be used by Defendant GHAITH PHARAON towards the purchase of Independence.

18) On or about September 5, 1985, Defendant GHAITH PHARAON caused to be delivered to the California State Banking Department a letter. This letter stated that enclosed was a: "Telex dated September 4, 1985 also from BAII confirming that Pharaon has available in excess of $8.4 million on deposit for the portion of the purchase price not being financed."

19) In or about August 1985, employees of the BCCI Group had conversations with representatives of BAII concerning the issuance by BAII of a letter of credit to the Bank of Boston in the amount of $5 million.

20) On or about August 29, 1985, an employee of the BCCI Group sent a telex to BAII instructing BAII to confirm by telex to the FDIC and the California State Banking Department, care of Defendant GHAITH PHARAON's attorney, that BAII had agreed to issue a stand-by letter of credit in the amount of $5 million in favor of the Bank of Boston as security for the Bank of Boston's loan to Defendant GHAITH PHARAON to purchase Independence.

1325015-000-10729

Defendant GHAITH PHARAON's attorney, concerning the issuance by BAII of a stand-by letter of credit in the amount of $5 million in favor of the Bank of Boston as security for the Bank of Boston loan to Defendant GHAITH PHARAON to purchase Independence.

22) On or about September 5, 1985, Defendant GHAITH PHARAON caused his attorney to deliver a letter to the California State Banking Department confirming the availability of the $5 million letter of credit to be issued by BAII.

23) On or about September 30, 1985, Defendant GHAITH PHARAON signed an "Acquisition Promissory Note" for $12.6 million with the Bank of Boston.

24) On or about October 1, 1985, BAII issued a stand-by letter of credit in the amount of $5 million in favor of the Bank of Boston, which letter of credit secured the Bank of Boston loan to Defendant GHAITH PHARAON.

25) On or about October 1, 1985, the BCCI Group issued a $5 million counter-guarantee to BAII.

26) On or about October 1, 1985, agents of the BCCI Group, and Defendant GHAITH PHARAON caused the Bank of Boston to take acts affecting the distribution of funds completing the sale of all the capital stock of Independence Bank to Defendant GHAITH PHARAON.

27) In or about October 1, 1985, Defendant GHAITH PHARAON appointed the first of the employees of the BCCI Group referred to in Overt Act No. 14 as a Director of Independence.

28) From in or about March 1986 to in or about January

1989, Defendants AGHA HASAN ABEDI and SWALEH NAQVI met with and corresponded with the Chief Executive Officer of Independence on numerous occasions regarding personnel and operational matters involving Independence.

29) On or about June 25, 1986, in Paris, France, Defendant GHAITH PHARAON wrote a letter to Defendant SWALEH NAQVI which stated in pertinent part:

"According to [the Chief Executive Officer of Independence], and even if I established a holding co. for the purpose of sheltering some of the bank's income it is unlikely that under the present capital structure the bank would greatly grow without any additional capital. In the present circumstances, and until I have worked out some kind of re-scheduling with the Redec banks, I may face some difficulties in arranging independent facilities for Independence Bk for additional capital.

"Therefore I would suggest that for the time being the 15/85 arrangement be maintained until we can determine the course we want Independence to take, and the degree of capital that needs to be made available, if we want the bank to grow, as well as the return on this capital, when compared to other investment opportunities.

"If after meeting with [the Chief Executive Officer of Independence] you are convinced that additional capital is required and the returns on such capital are attractive, I would be prepared to meet with you and modify the 15/85 arrangement in accordance with my earlier discussion with you and Mr. Abedi. Should this be the course to be followed it may also be necessary to have more support from BCCI in terms of management support, and international contacts."

30) On or about July 3, 1986, Defendant SWALEH NAQVI directed agents of the BCCI Group to cause BCCI Overseas (Panama) to make a loan in the amount of $12,631,000 to Defendant GHAITH PHARAON, which proceeds were used to repay the Bank of Boston loan to Defendant GHAITH PHARAON referred to in Overt Act No. 23.

31) In or about July of 1987, in London, England, Defendants AGHA HASAN ABEDI and SWALEH NAQVI met with an individual concerning prospective employment with Independence.

32) On or about December 29, 1987, Defendant SWALEH NAQVI directed an employee of the BCCI Group to cause BCCI Overseas (Grand Cayman) to advance $3,500,000 to Independence.

33) On or about May 17, 1988, an employee of the BCCI Group caused a branch of the BCCI Group in Bahrain to advance $4,000,000 to Defendant GHAITH PHARAON, which proceeds were added to the capital account of Independence.

34) On or about August 7, 1989, an employee of the BCCI Group caused a branch of the BCCI Group in Bahrain to advance $10,000,000 to Defendant GHAITH PHARAON, which proceeds were used to repay a BAII loan dated on or about July 5, 1989, in the amount of $10,000,000 to Defendant GHAITH PHARAON.

Overt Acts Relating to CenTrust Savings Bank

Application to FHLBB for Sale of Subordinated Debentures

35) On or about April 12, 1988, Defendant GHAITH PHARAON and another person caused to be filed a document titled "Amendment No. 1 To FORM OC" with the FHLBB.

36) Between on or about April 1, 1988, and on or about May 19, 1988, throughout the United States, Defendant GHAITH PHARAON and another person and various other employees and agents of CenTrust, together with underwriters, Merrill Lynch Capital Markets and Drexel Burnham Lambert, distributed a preliminary prospectus and conducted marketing seminars relating to the sale of CenTrust's subordinated debentures.

37) On or about May 16, 1988, Defendant GHAITH PHARAON and another person caused to be filed a document bearing the title "Amendment 3 to FORM OC" with the FHLBB.

38) On or about May 19, 1988, Defendant GHAITH PHARAON and another person caused to be filed with the FHLBB a document bearing the title "Amendment 4 to FORM OC."

39) On or about May 19, 1988, in Washington D.C., Defendant GHAITH PHARAON and another person caused to be filed with the FHLBB a document bearing the title "OFFERING CIRCULAR" relating to subordinated debentures to be issued by CenTrust.

Contacts with United States Regulators

40) On or about May 3, 1988, Defendant GHAITH PHARAON caused a letter to be delivered to the FHLBB in Washington D.C., which stated in pertinent part that the "subordinated debt issue would add $200 million of additional regulatory capital and thus, additional protection for the FSLIC insurance fund."

41) On or about May 3, 1988, Defendant GHAITH PHARAON communicated by telephone from in or near Savannah, Georgia with a FHLBB employee in Washington, D.C., concerning the CenTrust subordinated debt issue.

42) In or about May of 1988, in Washington D.C., Defendant GHAITH PHARAON and another person met with employees of the FHLBB concerning the issuance by CenTrust of subordinated debentures.

Sale of Subordinated Debentures to Institutional Investors

43) On or about May 24, 1988, Defendant GHAITH PHARAON and others caused to be transmitted by wire approximately $2,500,000 from Safeco Insurance Co., Seattle, Washington, to a firm in New York, New York, for the purchase of CenTrust subordinated debentures.

44) On or about May 25, 1988, Defendant GHAITH PHARAON and others caused to be transmitted by wire approximately $3,000,000 from Washington Mutual Savings and Loan Association, Seattle, Washington to a firm in New York, New York, for the purchase of CenTrust subordinated debentures.

Sale to BCCI and Repurchase of CenTrust Subordinated Debentures

45) On or about May 23, 1988, in Savannah, Georgia Defendant GHAITH PHARAON caused a telex to be sent from Interedec, a company controlled by Defendant GHAITH PHARAON, to London, England, related to the purchase of the CenTrust subordinated debentures in which it was indicated that the beneficiary of the $25 million of the CenTrust subordinated debentures "will be BCC in Paris."

46) On or about May 24, 1988, in New York, New York and Paris, France, Defendants SWALEH NAQVI and GHAITH PHARAON and the BCCI Defendants caused BCCI Overseas (Paris), a branch of the BCCI Group, to purchase approximately $25,000,000 of CenTrust subordinated debentures.

47) On or about June 24, 1988, Defendants GHAITH PHARAON and SWALEH NAQVI caused to be mailed from New York, New York, to London, England, three CenTrust subordinated debenture registered certificates, labelled RU 10, RU 11 and RU 12, in the name of BCCI Paris, totalling $25,000,000.

48) On or about July 15, 1988, Defendant GHAITH PHARAON caused to be mailed a letter from an employee of Interedec, located in Georgia, to an employee of CenTrust in Florida, concerning the purchase by CenTrust of the subordinated debentures previously purchased by BCCI Overseas (Paris), a branch of the BCCI Group, in which it was stated:

"[The Chairman of the Board of CenTrust] had asked me to provide relevant details to you in order for Centrust to repurchase the USD 25 million Debentures from BCCI Paris on 27th July 1988 together with interest accrued up to 27th July 1988."

49) On or about July 25, 1988, defendant GHAITH PHARAON caused to be delivered a letter from London, England, to Richmond Hill, Georgia, which transferred the CenTrust debentures referred to in Overt Act No. 47.

50) On or about July 27, 1988, the Defendant GHAITH PHARAON and another caused CenTrust to transmit by wire approximately $25,000,000 to Security Pacific International Bank in New York, New York, related to the purchase by CenTrust of the subordinated debentures previously purchased by BCCI Paris.

51) Between on or about July 1, 1988, and March 1, 1989, on several occasions, in Atlanta, Georgia, Defendant GHAITH PHARAON and another caused false and fraudulent statements to be made to federal banking regulators concerning the actual level of regulatory capital of CenTrust.

(Title 18, United States Code, Section 371)

COUNT TWO

1. The allegations contained in paragraphs 3, 4, 5, 7, 8, 9, 10, 11, 12, 13, 14, 16, 17 and 18 of COUNT ONE of this Indictment are realleged and incorporated by reference as if fully set forth herein.

2. From in or about January 1988 to in or about July 1988, Defendants

BCCI HOLDINGS (LUXEMBOURG), S.A.,
BANK OF CREDIT AND COMMERCE INTERNATIONAL S.A., BANK OF CREDIT AND COMMERCE INTERNATIONAL (OVERSEAS) LIMITED,
AGHA HASAN ABEDI,
SWALEH NAQVI, and
GHAITH PHARAON

devised and intended to devise a scheme and artifice to defraud and to obtain money and property by means of false and fraudulent pretenses, representations, and promises;

3. It was part of said scheme that:

a) Defendant GHAITH PHARAON and another would seek to sell CenTrust subordinated debentures to investors;

b) Defendant GHAITH PHARAON, who owned approximately 25 percent of the stock of CenTrust, would use his relationship with the BCCI Defendants and Defendant SWALEH NAQVI to arrange for a branch of the BCCI Group to purchase $25,000,000 of the CenTrust subordinated debentures in order to deceive other investors as to the true market for the CenTrust subordinated debentures;

c) Defendant GHAITH PHARAON and another would agree with the BCCI Defendants and Defendant SWALEH NAQVI that CenTrust would repurchase any CenTrust subordinated debentures purchased by the BCCI Group;

d) Defendant SWALEH NAQVI would direct and approve the purchase by BCCI (Overseas) Paris, of approximately $25,000,000 of CenTrust subordinated debentures;

e) Defendant GHAITH PHARAON and another would cause CenTrust Trust to repurchase said subordinated debentures from BCCI (Overseas) Paris, after approximately eight weeks, thus making the BCCI Defendants whole and completing the deception of other investors as to the true market for the CenTrust subordinated debentures;

f) Defendant GHAITH PHARAON and another would cause material misrepresentations and omissions to be made to investors.

4. On or about May 3, 1988, in the District of the Columbia and elsewhere, the BCCI Defendants, and Defendants GHAITH PHARAON, SWALEH NAQVI, and AGHA HASAN ABEDI, aided and abetted by one another, for the purpose of executing the aforesaid scheme and artifice and attempting to do so, knowingly and willfully transmitted and caused to be transmitted in interstate commerce by means of wire communications certain writings, signs, signals, pictures and sounds to wit: a communication by telephone between the Defendant GHAITH PHARAON in Savannah, Georgia and an employee of the FHLBB in Washington, D.C.

(Title 18, United States Code, Sections 1343 and 2)

COUNT THREE

Introduction

1. The allegations in Paragraphs 1 through 14 and 16 through 18 of Count One of this Indictment are hereby re-alleged and incorporated by reference as if fully set forth herein.

The Enterprise

2. At all times material to this Indictment, the BCCI Group, International Credit and Investment Company (Overseas), Limited ("ICIC Overseas"), AGHA HASAN ABEDI, SWALEH NAQVI, GHAITH PHARAON, and others known and unknown to the Grand Jury, constituted an "enterprise" as defined in Title 18, United States Code, Section 1961(4), that is, a group of organizations and individuals associated in fact.

3. At all times material to this Indictment, this enterprise was engaged in, and its activities affected, interstate and foreign commerce.

The Racketeering Conspiracy

4. From in or about January of 1984, to in or about July of 1991, in the District of Columbia and elsewhere, Defendants

BCCI HOLDINGS (LUXEMBOURG), S.A.,
BANK OF CREDIT AND COMMERCE INTERNATIONAL S.A., BANK OF CREDIT AND COMMERCE INTERNATIONAL (OVERSEAS) LIMITED,
AGHA HASAN ABEDI,
SWALEH NAQVI, and

along with others known and unknown to the Grand Jury, being persons employed by and associated with the enterprise described in paragraph two of this Count, which enterprise was engaged in and the activities of which affected interstate and foreign commerce, unlawfully, willfully, and knowingly combined, conspired, confederated, and agreed together and with each other, and with persons known and unknown to the Grand Jury, to commit an offense against the United States, to wit: to violate Title 18, United States Code, Section 1962(c), that is, to conduct and participate, directly and indirectly, in the conduct of the affairs of the enterprise through a pattern of racketeering activity.

5. It was part of the conspiracy that the Defendants and their co-conspirators would and did commit acts of racketeering activity as set forth below in paragraph 8 of this Count.

6. It was a further part of the conspiracy that each defendant agreed that two or more of the acts of racketeering set forth below in this Count would be committed in the conduct of the affairs of the enterprise.

Manners and Means of the Conspiracy

7. The allegations of Paragraphs 20 through 27 of Count One of this Indictment are hereby realleged and incorporated by reference as if fully set forth herein.

The Pattern of Racketeering Activity

8. It was a part of the conspiracy that the Defendants and their co-conspirators would commit acts of racketeering activity consisting of the racketeering acts set forth below, and additional racketeering acts involving the unlawful control, operation, and manipulation of United States financial institutions and fraud against United States Federal bank regulatory agencies, and fraud against the investing public, constituting violations of Title 18, United States Code, Sections 1341, 1343 and 1344.

1325015-000-10740

Racketeering Act One

Wire Fraud Related to Independence Bank

1) Between on or about January 1, 1984, and December of 1989, Defendants AGHA HASAN ABEDI, SWALEH NAQVI, and GHAITH PHARAON, the BCCI Defendants, and ICIC Overseas (not charged in this Count as a Defendant), devised and intended to devise a scheme and artifice to defraud and to obtain money and property, namely, insurance protection and continued insurance protection by the FDIC, backed by funds and security of the United States, for deposits of Independence, by means of fraudulent and false pretenses, representations and promises;

2) It was part of said scheme and artifice that on or about May 17, 1985, Defendant GHAITH PHARAON and Defendant SWALEH NAQVI, acting in the name of Defendant ICIC Overseas, did enter into a secret agreement whereby 85% of the shares of the stock of Independence, with the attendant voting rights, purportedly to be purchased in their entirety by Defendant GHAITH PHARAON, were instead pledged to ICIC Overseas; it was further part of said scheme that Defendant GHAITH PHARAON did conceal and cause to be concealed this material fact from the FDIC and other regulators through fraudulent conduct and deceit; it was further part of the scheme that the BCCI Group exercised influence and control over the affairs of Independence Bank;

3) On or about the dates set forth below, the above Defendants transmitted and caused to be transmitted in interstate and foreign commerce, certain writings, signs, signals, pictures, and sounds, for the purpose of executing such scheme and artifice, in violation of Title 18, United States Code, Section 1343:

Mail Fraud and Wire Fraud in Connection with CenTrust

Racketeering Act Two

1. The allegations contained in paragraphs 1, 2 and 3 of COUNT TWO of this Indictment are realleged and incorporated by reference as if fully set forth herein.

2. On or about May 25, 1988, the BCCI Defendants, and Defendants GHAITH PHARAON, AGHA HASAN ABEDI, and SWALEH NAQVI, aided and abetted by one another, for the purpose of executing the aforesaid scheme and artifice to defraud and attempting to do so, knowingly and willfully transmitted and caused to be transmitted in interstate commerce by means of wire communications certain writings, signs, signals, pictures and sounds, namely, a wire transfer of approximately $3,000,000 of funds from Washington Mutual Savings and Loan Association, Seattle, Washington, to a firm in New York, New York, for the purchase of CenTrust subordinated debentures.

(Title 18, United States Code, Sections 1343 and 2)

Racketeering Act Three

1. The allegations contained in paragraphs 1, 2 and 3 of COUNT TWO of this Indictment are realleged and incorporated by reference as if fully set forth herein.

2. On or about the dates set forth below, the above Defendants transmitted and caused to be transmitted in interstate and foreign commerce, certain writings, signs, signals, pictures, and sounds, for the purpose of executing such scheme and artifice, in violation of Title 18, United States Code, Section 1343:

Act	Date	From	To	Nature of Wire
a)	5/3/88	GHAITH PHARAON Georgia	FHLBB Regulator Washington, D.C.	Telephone Call
b)	5/23/88	BCCI Group London, England	Interedec Savannah, GA	Telex
c)	5/24/88	Citibank New York, NY	BCCI Overseas (Paris) Paris, France	Wire Transfer approximately $25,000,000
d)	7/27/88	CenTrust Miami, FL	Security Pacific International Bank New York, NY	Wire Transfer approximately $25,000,000

(Title 18, United States Code, Sections 1343 and 2)

Racketeering Act Four

1. The allegations contained in paragraphs 1, 2 and 3 of COUNT TWO of this Indictment are realleged and incorporated by reference as if fully set forth herein.

2. On or about May 25, 1988, in the District of the District of Columbia and elsewhere, the BCCI Defendants and Defendants GHAITH PHARAON, AGHA HASAN ABEDI, and SWALEH NAQVI, aided and abetted by one another, for the purpose of executing the aforesaid scheme and artifice to defraud and attempting to do so, knowingly and willfully transmitted and caused to be transmitted in interstate commerce by means of wire communications certain writings, signs, signals, pictures and sounds, to wit: wire transfer of approximately $2,500,000 of funds from Safeco Insurance Co., Seattle, Washington, and a firm in New York, New York, for the purchase of CenTrust subordinated debentures.

(Title 18, United States Code, Sections 1343 and 2)

All in violation of Title 18, United States Code, Sections 1962(d) and 1963, and Title 18, United States Code, Section 2.

FORFEITURE

The Grand Jury further charges:

1. The allegations contained in COUNT THREE of this Indictment are hereby realleged and incorporated by reference herein, for the purpose of alleging forfeitures pursuant to the provisions of Title 18, United States Code, Section 1963.

2. The Defendants AGHA HASAN ABEDI,

SWALEH NAQVI, and GHAITH PHARAON have property constituting, and derived from, proceeds which they obtained directly and indirectly, from racketeering activity in violation of Title 18, United States Code, Section 1962, thereby making such property, or an amount of cash equivalent thereto, forfeitable to the United States of America pursuant to Title 18, United States Code, Section 1963(a)(3). Said properties consist of any and all proceeds the Defendants received as a result of the racketeering activity alleged in Racketeering Acts Two through Four of Count Three.

PLEA AGREEMENT

Parties and Purpose

WHEREAS, the United States of America, by its attorneys for the United States Department of Justice (the "DOJ"), the People of the State of New York, by the District Attorney for New York

all the rights set forth in the prior paragraph. The Court Appointed Fiduciaries' attorneys have explained those rights to the Court Appointed Fiduciaries, and the consequences of the waiver of those rights as contemplated herein. The Court Appointed Fiduciaries understand that they are waiving all appellate issues that might have been available if they had exercised its right to trial.

34. Upon imposition of the sentence contemplated herein, the DOJ will move to dismiss the remaining charges against BCCI currently pending in any U.S. District Court.

IN WITNESS WHEREOF, the parties hereto have executed this Agreement as of December _____, 1991.

GOVERNMENT'S MOTION FOR RESTRAINING ORDER

The United States of America, by its counsel, hereby moves for a restraining order pursuant to Title 18, United States Code, Section 1963(d)(1)(A), to preserve the availability of property for forfeiture. In support of this motion, the government says the following.

1. ICIC (Overseas), Ltd. is a defendant in this criminal case. Pursuant to paragraph 1(e) of this Court's Order of Forfeiture of January 24, 1992 ("Order of Forfeiture"), all assets of ICIC (Overseas), Ltd. are subject to forfeiture to the United States.

2. ICIC Investment, Ltd. is described in documents available to the government as a "sister company" to ICIC (Overseas) Ltd. These documents describe ICIC Investment and ICIC (Overseas) as having a common parent, ICIC Holdings, Ltd., and they describe ICIC (Overseas) as deriving "indirect economic benefit" from ICIC Investment through said parent company. (See Exhibit A.)

1325015-000-10892

3. Other documents reveal that ICIC (Overseas) has guaranteed the obligations of ICIC Investments in corporate resolutions and correspondence with third parties. (See Exhibits A and B.)

4. These documents also reveal that at least one of the directors of ICIC Investment, Mr. W.M. Jafree, also is, or has been, a director of ICIC (Overseas). (Compare Exhibit B with Exhibits C and D.)

5. ICIC Investment, Ltd. has assets at at least three financial institutions in the United States including Oppenheimer & Co., Inc., Bear Stearns & Co., Inc., and the Bank of New York.

6. The government infers from this information that there has been a transfer of funds between ICIC Investment and ICIC (Overseas), that there may be no real distinction between these two entities, that assets held in the name ICIC Investment are the assets of ICIC (Overseas), and that the assets held in the name of ICIC Investment, Ltd. are therefore subject to forfeiture under Title 18, United States Code, Section 1963(a) and paragraph 1(e) of the Order of Forfeiture.

WHEREFORE, the United States prays that this Court enter an order, pursuant to Title 18, United States Code, Section 1963(d)(1)(A) restraining the movement or other disposition of any assets held in the name of ICIC Investment, Ltd. at the following financial institutions for 30 days or until further Order of the Court, whichever is sooner:

Oppenheimer & Co., New York, New York

Dear Mr. McDonald:

This is to confirm that the powers of attorney granted to Mr. W.H. Jafree on June 10, 1987 and to Mr. A.H. Dossani on November 16, 1988 by International Credit and Investment Company (Overseas) Ltd. ("ICIC") have not been revoked and are still in full force and effect as of the date hereof.

Moreover, you are hereby advised that paragraph 3 of each of said powers of attorney contemplates the guarantee by ICIC of the obligations of its sister company, ICIC Investments Ltd. Such a guarantee evidences the indirect economic benefit ICIC derives from ICIC Investments Ltd. through our common parent, ICIC Holdings Limited.

We acknowledge that you will be relying upon our guarantee of the obligations of ICIC Investments Ltd. in entering into transactions with ICIC Investments Ltd. and in extending credit thereto.

Very truly yours,

International Credit and Investment Company (Overseas) Ltd.

This matter is commonly referred to as the BCCI Investigation.

Attached is a copy of an Airtel we recently sent to FBIHQ/Forfeiture and Seized Property Unit concerning seventeen bank account seizures conducted in this case so far by DOJ Money Laundering Section-Attn: Trial Attorney, [redacted] tele [redacted] These seizures are being processed through the United States Attorneys Office, WDC, Attn: Forfeiture AUSA [redacted] as criminal forfeitures pursuant to a Plea Agreement.

The extent of WMFO/FAST's involvement in this matter is limited to keeping FBIHQ/FSPU advised of seizures as we are made aware of them by WDC/USA's office.

The value of seizures conducted to date is:

$ 347,034,008.40

It is our understanding that this makes the case agent, [redacted], the world leader in forfeitures. Congratulations!

SUBJECT: BCCI FORFEITURE MATTER

Attached is a memo prepared by SA [redacted] regarding the captioned matter. During his recent file review, we determined that the forfeiture subfile on this matter is assigned to SA [redacted] of your squad. I would ask, if you and [redacted] do not object, that you reassign the subfile to us, where I will assign it to SA [redacted] We have sought to enter all FS subfiles into FOIMS and to further organize the administration of the WMFO forfeiture program. Towards that goal, we have asked that forfeiture subfiles be on our placed on our squad. b6 b7C

Because of the sheer size of the settlement in this matter, I would hasten to add that the success in this matter is that of the white collar SAs who worked the case; our involvement is only to administratively forward the list of properties identified as falling within the court decreed settlement to FBI Headquarters.

If you have any questions or problems, [redacted] could probably resolve them. b6 b7C

We were on a cruise ship and saw the yacht docked and I took a picture. Someone on had mentioned that they thought that this was the yacht that Princess Dianna was on with her boy friend (wrong yacht). I took the picture and did an internet search after I returned home and I found the articles below.

FBI ups ante in hunt for BCCI millionaire

By Paul Lashmar
Sunday, 13 August 2006

The FBI has issued an international alert for a Saudi millionaire thought to be living incognito in the Mediterranean, who is accused of being a key figure in the Bank of Credit and Commerce International fraud.

Gaith Rashad Pharaon, 65, was once a familiar figure in London business circles. But he is now wanted in Washington for a series of federal and international crimes ranging from fraud to financing terrorism.

An FBI despatch to police forces around the world describes Mr Pharaon as being involved in one of the biggest commercial frauds in history. The collapse of BCCI took almost $13bn (£6.9bn) in depositors' money and left 250,000 international creditors unpaid.

Mr Pharaon has evaded the US authorities for almost 15 years. A large reward is offered for information leading to his arrest.

The FBI says Mr Pharaon owns the yacht Le Pharone with a picture of the Sphinx painted on the stern. The yacht was spotted at the beginning of the summer docked off the tiny Italian island of Pantelleria near Sicily. The 90-ton, 60-metre vessel, which sails under the Panamanian flag, was intercepted by FBI agents deployed from Rome in a bid to arrest its owner.

But Mr Pharaon was not located, and the yacht was released. Italian police said the yacht's British captain reported he was heading to Algeria.

The FBI describes Mr Pharaon as extremely wealthy with "numerous contacts within governments around the world". The alert says he is "of stocky build with thinning black hair, graying at the temples". He speaks Arabic, French, English and Greek, and smokes cigars. "He normally wears a small pointed beard, but has been seen with a moustache," the FBI adds.

Mr Pharaon is alleged to have acted as a frontman for BCCI to acquire illegal stakes in American banks. The National Bank of Georgia was allegedly Mr Pharaon's first American target in 1978. According to BCCI's own records, the Luxembourg-based BCCI wound up with a controlling stake.

Fugitive Alert on the Riviera

August 10, 2006 8:02 AM

Brian Ross Reports:

The FBI has put out an all points bulletin for a wealthy fugitive, who has managed to elude U.S. authorities for almost 15 years, traveling on his yacht along the Riviera and around the Mediterranean Sea.

Gaith Rashad Pharaon, a Saudi citizen who once lived in a mansion in Georgia and traveled in elite social and political circles in the U.S., is being sought for his role in one of the largest commercial frauds and bank failures in U.S. history.

Pharaon faces charges of fraud, conspiracy and racketeering in connection with the fall of the Bank of Credit and Commerce International, BCCI, in the early 1990s.

The FBI says Pharaon owns the yacht "Le Pharaon" with a picture of the Egyptian Sphinx painted on the stern.

The yacht was spotted at the beginning of the summer docked at the tiny Italian island of Pantelleria off Sicily. Police raided the vessel at the request of the FBI, but Pharaon was not located, and the yacht was released. Italian police said the yacht's captain reported he was heading to Algeria.

The FBI describes Pharaon as extremely wealthy with "numerous contacts within governments around the world."

His son competes in international speedboat races, according to the FBI, and there is a possibility "that he occasionally watches those races."

Pharaon, 66 years old, is "of stocky build with thinning black hair, graying at the temples." The FBI says he speaks Arabic, French, English and some Greek and smokes cigars."

Title: HIDDEN INTERESTS;
MAJOR CASE # 38
OO:WF

Synopsis: Request CID-DAD concurrence to establish a $100,000 reward for information leading to the arrest and extradition of Ghaith Pharaon.

Details: As background, captioned matter was an investigation of the secret ownership interests in U.S. financial institutions by the Bank of Credit and Commerce International (BCCI). The collapse of world-wide BCCI was at the time the largest bank failure in history. The only remaining investigation related to captioned matter is a fugitive investigation for Ghaith Pharaon, who is thought to reside in Saudi Arabia.

Pharaon participated in a conspiracy with BCCI and its principal officers to defraud the U.S. Government and individual investors. With the assistance of Pharaon, and by employing fraudulent methods such as deceptive stock purchases, hidden stock pledges, nominee agreements, non-recourse loans, and false applications filed with various state and federal regulatory agencies in the U.S., BCCI acquired and controlled the National Bank of Georgia in Atlanta, Georgia, Independence Bank in Encino, California, and Centrust Savings Bank in Miami, Florida. Both Independence Bank and Centrust Savings Bank eventually failed, causing the U.S. Government and its citizens to incur millions of dollars in losses.

BCCI used Pharaon to secretly acquire the National Bank of Georgia and Independence Bank. Although Pharaon was the purported purchaser, BCCI and Pharaon had an agreement whereby the stocks of both banks, with its voting rights, were pledged to BCCI. As a result, BCCI exercised significant control over the personnel and operational decisions of the banks. At no time were U.S. banking regulators informed of the secret agreements between Pharaon and BCCI or of BCCI's true interest in acquiring the banks.

BCCI officials assisted Pharaon in facilitating a fraud by manipulating the financial market for an offering of subordinate debentures issued by Centrust Savings Bank (CSB) in Miami, Florida. In January 1988, Pharaon acquired approximately 25 percent of the stock in CSB. During the same year, CSB received regulatory approval to raise capital by selling 150 million dollars worth of subordinated debentures. Within a few days prior to the issuance date, CSB had not found subscribers for all the debentures. Pharaon and CSB made an agreement wherein BCCI would purchase 25 million dollars worth of debentures, thus ensuring the debenture offering would appear to be fully subscribed. The purchase by BCCI was not a bona fide purchase as BCCI's funds were never at risk. Approximately eight weeks after the issue date, CSB repurchased the debentures from BCCI, at full value plus interest, per the stated agreement. Pharaon and CSB used BCCI to artificially inflate the demand for the debentures and thereby deceived investors as to the true value of the notes. The Miami Division investigation of CSB was maintained as 290-MM-49881, titled "MAJOR CASE # 33; CENTRUST BANK; et al." Pharaon is also a fugitive in the Miami investigation.

In an indictment filed on November 15, 1991, in the U.S. District Court for the District of Columbia, Pharaon was charged with Conspiracy to Commit Wire Fraud, Wire Fraud, Conspiracy to Commit Racketeering, and Aiding and Abetting. A warrant for Pharaon's arrest was issued on the same date. On January 15, 1993, the aforementioned indictment was superseded by one which incorporated the initial indictment and broadened the alleged conspiracy.

Since Pharaon's indictment, the FBI has expended a great deal of effort attempting to locate and arrest Pharaon. One part of that effort throughout the years has been the tracking of the "Le Pharaon," a yacht owned by Pharaon. Law enforcement authorities in several countries have boarded and searched the yacht for Pharaon, with negative results. Pharaon is aware of the FBI's efforts to locate and arrest him and is believed to restrict his travel to countries where authorities would not assist the U.S. in his arrest and extradition. Pharaon's arrest warrant and his Interpol Red Notice, Number A355/8-1992, are active and valid.

In September 2009, SSA [redacted] FBIHQ Detailee to an Other Government Agency (OGA), notified WFO that the OGA was possibly in a position to provide information about Pharaon. In October 2009, SSA [redacted] and the WFO case agent met with OGA officials and learned that an individual with access to Pharaon, who was an OGA source reporting on other matters, had come forward offering possible information about Pharaon's whereabouts and travel plans. The OGA indicated the individual would provide the information in return for a reward, which the OGA suggested be a minimum of $100,000.00. WFO believes the information which may be provided by the OGA source represents a great opportunity to locate and arrest Pharaon. b6 b7C

The establishment of a significant reward may be the impetus needed for an individual close to Pharaon to provide information on his current whereabouts and travel plans. WFO requests CID-DAD concurrence to establish a $100,000 reward for information leading to the arrest and extradition of Ghaith Pharaon. As the payment of a $100,000 reward would severely impact WFO's annual criminal budget, the National Mortgage Fraud Team is requested to ensure program funds will be available to cover the payment of the reward.

The BCCI fraud was a world wide scandal. It was one of the largest commercial frauds and the largest bank failures in history. The fall of BCCI resulted in almost $12 billion dollars in depositors' moneys being lost and it left some 250,000 unpaid creditors around the world. Thousand of families lost their life savings in the bank's collapse. Within the United States, BCCI's fraudulent activities caused the closure of two banks.

Since Pharaon's indictment, the FBI has expended a great deal of effort attempting to locate and arrest Pharaon. One part of that effort throughout the years has been the tracking of the "Le Pharaon," a yacht owned by Pharaon. [redacted] b7D

Pharaon is aware of the FBI's efforts to locate and arrest him and is believed to restrict his travel to countries where authorities would not assist the U.S. in his arrest and extradition. Pharaon's arrest warrant and his Interpol Red Notice, Number A355/8-1992, are active and valid.

Through Legat Algiers, WFO was notified Pharaon may have interests in Algeria and may regularly travel to and from that country. Based on this information, WFO requests that a [redacted] b7D

FIF

Synopsis: Response to Internet Activity Report number 2600703.

Reference: 62F-HQ-C1353064-C Serial 654

Details: Per information received in referenced serial, further described as Internet Activity Report (IAR) number 2600703, [redacted] is residing in Hyderabad City, Andhra Pradesh, India and [redacted] Goldstone Technologies LTD, Sharma Apts., Opp, Sangeeth Theatre, S.D Road, Secunderabad. The IAR complainant alleged [redacted] was associated with the collapse of BCCI in which he borrowed over $30,000,000 through fraudulent acts. b6 b7C

As the IAR contained information that [redacted] was involved in the collapse of BCCI, writer queried UNI and ACS and located two serials referencing [redacted] within WFO's BCCI investigation, 290-WF-171994. Within serial 688, further described as a teletype dated April 19, 1996, WFO contacted the New York District Attorney's Office (DANY) to discuss an individual involved in the DANY investigation of [redacted] At the time, WFO had no investigation regarding [redacted] Within subfile D, serial 218, further described as a FD-302 dated August 4, b6 b7C

1992, WFO conducted an interview at the Small Business Administration (SBA) regarding the liquidation of assets from Falcon Capital Corporation, an investment company [redacted] [redacted] No additional serials referencing [redacted] were located during the review. b6 b7C

Through ACS, it was determined that [redacted] was the main subject of a Charlotte Division bank fraud investigation, 29B-CE-64886. Through a review of 29B-CE-64886, serial 54, it was noted that in 1990, [redacted] was accused of loan fraud involving BB&T Bank. [redacted] fled to India. DANY indicted [redacted] for similar activities and began extradition. On May 10, 2002, the extradition was denied by India and [redacted] remained in India. b6 b7C

On August 11, 2010, WFO conducted a query of NCIC and noted an outstanding arrest warrant for [redacted] from the New York City Police Department, telephone number (646) 610-5030. The warrant entry described [redacted] as follows: b6 b7C

Name: [redacted]
Race: White
Sex: male
DOB: [redacted]
SSAN [redacted]
Offense: [redacted]
Date of Warrant: 06/24/1993

update UNI record

On August 23, 2010, writer telephonically contacted the NYPD, Central Warrants Section, to provide them with the information regarding [redacted] location. NYPD indicated that given the warrant date and the location of [redacted] outside the U.S., that absent an arrest of [redacted] NYPD would take no action on the information. b6 b7C

On August 25, 2010, writer telephonically contacted [redacted] DANY Warrants Section, telephone number [redacted] and subsequently sent a summary of the IAR information to Leary at his electronic mail account, [redacted] b6 b7C

WFO considers the lead in referenced serial covered and will conduct no further investigation on this matter.

"Information regarding "Dr" Ghaith Pharaon
I have meet Mr. Pharaon last year in his ofice in Damascus, as we were asked to advice one of his companies (Tartous Cement). I have also meet with him together the director of the General Organisation for Cement & Building Materials and the environmental Minister of Syria. Mr. Pharaon lives in a nice Villa in the Mountains between Damascus and Lebanon- near to the Motorway.

I didnt knew that he is on your "most Wanted" List until I have made some internet research on his company, as they want to work with us- in the field of advice /consultancy in Cement Businuess.
If you are still looking for him- i have his mobile phone number and contact details. [redacted] wanted to visit us as well. b6 b7C
Just contact me if you need further information, with best regards

Easier To Find, Still Hard To Catch

Better communications networks are making it easier for law enforcement agencies in the United States to find people who have been charged with financial crimes and then flee to escape punishment. But even friendly nations sometimes resist American efforts to extradite financial criminals, and those fugitives with the most resources seem able to stay a step ahead of the law.

Solid lines indicate route of flight. Dotted lines indicate countries that fugitives are known to have visited.

A company founded by Marc Rich and now managed by close associates advertised in The Economist last month.

By PETER TRUELL

Giancarlo Parretti, the flamboyant former Hollywood mogul, could well be visiting his aging parents these days at the family olive farm just outside Orvieto, a medieval hilltop city some 70 miles north of Rome, his American lawyers say. They are not sure, though, since they communicate with him solely by fax.

Mr. Parretti, who mounted a $1.3 billion takeover of Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer Inc. in 1990 only to lose control of the studio a year later amid allegations of financial mismanagement, is, after all, a man on the run.

The financier jumped bail and fled to his native Italy shortly before a Jan. 6 sentencing hearing in Delaware, his lawyers said early this month. At the hearing, he faced as much as 10 years in prison on perjury and evidence-tampering convictions growing out of the legal battle for control of the studio.

Exactly how and when the 55-year-old Mr. Parretti left the United States is a mystery. But by skipping the country, he has become the latest addition to the band of rogue financiers who have put off their date with American justice. And in joining the likes of Marc D. Rich and Robert Vesco, he has entered the shadowy — and shifting — world of the high-powered fugitive.

Because of technological advances in international police work — chiefly the explosive growth in computer data bases and the lightning-fast transmission of photos — those fugitives are finding that they can hide, but not run, at least not easily after the initial flight. Those who last the longest find a safe haven and hunker down, law enforcement officials say, avoiding high profiles and unnecessary movement.

The authorities say that no fugitive is ever really safe in an age when the next-door neighbor or the kid down the block can be the kind of vigilant citizen who regularly checks out the Justice Department's wanted list on the World Wide Web. Tracking down fugitives "is getting a little bit easier using these sophisticated programs," said James Carney, an inspector with the United States Marshals Service, the agency that brings them back.

But for all that, the wheels of justice can still turn awfully slowly. The United States has had little success in persuading even friendly nations to tighten laws that provide safe harbors for financial fugitives. And often there are serious questions about how hard anyone tries to find these international scofflaws.

In Mr. Parretti's case, for instance, an arrest warrant has been issued by Delaware authorities and a bail-forfeiture hearing has been set for Jan. 24, according to Paul R. Wallace, the state prosecutor handling the case. But no American officials have been dispatched to Orvieto or anywhere else abroad to find Mr. Parretti, Mr. Wallace said, explaining that such bilateral matters take time to work out.

High Fliers as Frequent Fliers: For Fugitive Financi(

Even if he is found, it may be some time before he returns to the United States, if ever. One measure of how hard it can be to win extradition is that in fleeing the United States, Mr. Parretti left behind another legal battle in Los Angeles, where he had been fighting an arrest warrant issued by the French Government for other MGM-related charges.

The United States has been trying to get its hands on some fugitives for years, even decades. For example, Mr. Rich, a suave international commodities trader, has lived openly in Zug, Switzerland, since 1982 after fleeing the United States to avoid prosecution in a tax case. Mr. Vesco left the country in 1972, when he fled Federal charges that he defrauded mutual fund investors of $224 million. He is now serving 13 years in a Cuban jail for other matters.

Ghaith R. Pharaon, the former front man for the Bank of Credit and Commerce International and its illegal purchases of financial institutions in the United States, was indicted on fraud and racketeering charges in 1991. He now flits between his native Saudi Arabia and Pakistan, former associates say.

The number of fugitive financiers is growing, said an official at the Office of International Affairs in the Department of Justice's criminal division, though the official, who spoke on condition of anonymity, declined to provide specific figures. It is simply easier now than it was some years ago to get on a plane and disappear, at least at first, the official said, particularly since English has been increasingly adopted as the international language.

Meanwhile, the number of extraditions, relating to financial crimes and otherwise, has remained relatively flat. During the 12-month period ended Sept. 30, 160 people were extradited in all categories of crime, according to the Marshals Service. There were 191 extraditions for the period ending Sept. 30, 1995, and 177 for the year before that.

What hurts the "recovery" rate, Federal officials say, is that some countries, like Cuba, have no extradition treaty with the United States, while others, like Switzerland, make distinctions among forms of financial skulduggery that provide a safe haven to some.

"When you talk of financial crimes, you have to be careful," said Erwin Jenni, head of the extradition service at the Swiss Justice Department in Bern. In Switzerland, he explained, financial crimes involve fraud or embezzlement. Then there are so-called fiscal offenses, he said, which cover tax matters. "We don't extradite for fiscal and customs offenses," Mr. Jenni said, a policy that allows Mr. Rich, who has been indicted in the United States on charges of evading $48 million in income taxes, to live in Alpine comfort in Zug.

Another problem, said Mr. Carney of the Marshals Service, occurs when a fugitive successfully applies for citizenship in a foreign country. "Only some countries will extradite their own citizens," he explained.

To improve the Justice Department's record for capturing big-time fugitives, Attorney General Janet Reno last month started an interagency fugitive alert service, in conjunction with the United States Information Agency and the Voice of America. The effort includes a site on the World Wide Web (http://www.usdoj.gov/criminal/olafug/fugitives.htm) showing pictures of the most wanted fugitives.

In August, the Justice Department and the Voice of America began a radio broadcast, "International Crime Alert," that highlights a different fugitive each week. The program is heard in more than 50 countries.

While the new efforts have yet to bring in any well-known fugitive financiers, they did lead to the recent arrest in Guatemala of Leslie I. Roggé, a convicted bank robber who escaped from an Iowa prison, F.B.I. officials said. An American teenager living in Guatemala recognized Mr. Roggé from a picture on the F.B.I. web site, they said. Mr. Roggé had been working in the teen-ager's neighborhood as a handyman.

Most big-time fugitives have been a lot luckier than that. The anecdotal evidence suggests that those fugitives who have substantial reserves of money, like Mr. Rich, have a good chance of remaining at large. Mr. Rich even formed a new commodities trading firm in Zug. The firm, now run by others, has been a huge success — and a galling symbol of frustration to American authorities.

A fistful of passports also seems to help. Most of the long-term financial fugitives on the Justice Depart-

ers, Fewer Places to Hide

For businessmen on the run, the challenge is to keep a low profile.

ment's list appear to hold at least two. Mr. Rich, for example, has American, Israeli and Spanish citizenship, sometimes visiting Spain and Israel on secret sojourns out of Switzerland. Mr. Pharaon, of the B.C.C.I. case, is believed to have both Saudi and Pakistani passports.

It is not that the American authorities give up trying to recapture those fleeing overseas. There have, for example, been occasional negotiations through intermediaries between Mr. Rich's lawyers and American law enforcement agencies to see if his return could be arranged. A variety of elaborate ruses to catch Mr. Rich outside Switzerland have also been considered and sometimes tried. In one such attempt, the American authorities staged a complicated commodities deal in an unsuccessful effort to lure Mr. Rich either to Kazakstan or Monte Carlo.

Some famous fugitives find it hard to stay out of trouble. Mr. Vesco is now languishing in jail following his conviction in Havana in August on charges of "fraud and illicit economic activity."

Others raise their public profile too high. David Friedland, a former New Jersey state senator who masterminded a plot to defraud $20 million from a local teamsters pension fund, found that out. After faking a fatal diving accident in 1985 in the Bahamas, Mr. Friedland moved to the Maldive Islands in the Indian Ocean. Using an alias, he bought and ran a number of scuba-diving schools there and even had his picture printed on a postcard. Such showmanship helped American authorities track him down in 1987. Mr. Friedland, who pleaded guilty to racketeering charges, was extradited and sentenced to 15 years in jail.

Eddie Antar, a fugitive from fraud charges for two years after the collapse of the Crazy Eddie electronics discount chain he co-founded, also has himself to blame for getting caught. The authorities got on his trail after he went to the police in Switzerland in 1992 and demanded help in gaining access to a $32 million bank account he kept under an alias.

Mr. Antar was arrested a short time later in Israel and extradited to the United States, where he faced charges that he defrauded shareholders of more than $74 million. After Federal convictions were overturned, Mr. Antar pleaded guilty last year to one racketeering count. Mr. Antar, who has already served four years in prison, is expected to receive three to five years more at a hearing next month.

The failure of Mr. Friedland and Mr. Antar to stay hidden highlights a key problem for a fleeing financier. Often, the flamboyance and egotism that helped bring riches in the first place cannot be repressed. The fugitive finds it hard to keep out of the public eye, let alone out of trouble.

Mr. Parretti, who began his career as a hotel waiter, has a history of high living and may find it tough to avoid the limelight now. When he took over MGM, he bought a Rolls-Royce, a jet and a $9 million mansion even as the studio bounced checks to stars like Dustin Hoffman and missed interest payments on bonds.

But for the moment, Mr. Parretti seems to be lying low. Manlio Morcella, his lawyer in Orvieto, did not reply to questions sent to his office, though he has given short interviews in Italy to say that Mr. Parretti had returned to face separate charges there relating to criminal bankruptcy and tax fraud.

Getting in trouble in a number of jurisdictions generally bodes ill for a fugitive, making it that much harder to remain at large.

In addition to his Delaware convictions and the charges in Italy, Mr. Parretti is accused of fraud in France relating to the hundreds of took over the studio after accusing Mr. Parretti of defaulting on the loans and of gross mismanagement. It recently sold the studio to a group that includes Kirk Kerkorian, the investor who originally sold MGM to Mr. Parretti.

With all the legal swords hanging over his head, Mr. Parretti may find a much-needed sense of sanctuary in Orvieto. The city is famed for its soft white wine. It is also known for a fresco-filled marble cathedral, where many come to pray.

Synopsis: Request to reassign captioned matter.

Details: Due to the transfer of SA [redacted] it is recommended that this matter be reassigned. b6 b7C

The investigation remaining is centered around locating and apprehending fugitive GHAITH PHAROAN. To this end, the following investigation should be conducted:

1. Review case files to become acquainted with the contacts initiated between the former case agent and Naval Intelligence, regarding the whereabouts of PHAROAN'S yacht.

2. Contact DOJ Attorney's [redacted] b6 b7C regarding possible contact with PHAROAN'S attorney to negotiate a surrender and subsequent plea.

3. Provide FBIHQ with a current update regarding the status of the investigation.

It should be noted that SA [redacted] is co-case agent, and is also currently under transfer to Oklahoma City Division. b6 b7C

[redacted] Deloitte-Touche regarding the liquidation of the Bank of Credit and Commerce International (BCCI) was contacted by the writer at his residence. After being advised of the identity of the interviewing agent and of the purpose of the interview [redacted] provided the following information: b6 b7C

[redacted] was contacted by his client [redacted] did not provide the name), who is currently in Islamabad, Pakistan. [redacted] client advised he/she had heard that GHAITH PHARAON was going to be travelling to Islamabad to meet with Prime Minister SHARIF (phonetic - ph) to discuss possible business dealings. PHARAON is suppose to arrive, via an airline, in Islamabad on March 28th, 1997, the time and airline was unknown. The source of the original information is apparently [redacted] (ph), who at one time worked for PHARAON at ATTOCK, a company owned by PHARAON. [redacted] is supposed to be close to Prime Minister SHARIF. [redacted] is not [redacted] client who has provided the above and following information. b6 b7C

Along with meeting the Prime Minister, PHARAON may have other meetings with other individuals within the Pakistan Government. PHARAON had apparently invited Prime Minister SHARIF to Saudi Arabia in the past, however it was not known if the Prime Minister travelled to meet PHARAON. [redacted] further advised that PHARAON had purchased 15,000 acres of land in Pakistan and this could be the impetus for PHARAON's travel. b6 b7C

On 3/27/97, [redacted] telephonically contacted the writer to advised his client had just heard that [redacted] (ph), the [redacted] ATTOCK, had advised the [redacted] of Pakistan, [redacted] (ph), that PHARAON is a criminal and it might not be in the best interest to meet with PHARAON. [redacted] had no information as to what [redacted] was planning concerning the possible meeting with PHARAON. b6 b7C

Synopsis: Activity of fugitive GHAITH PHARAON.

Details: For the information of LEGAT ATHENS. PHARAON is a fugitive, having been indicted on bank fraud charges in the United States in 1991. PHARAON is known to live in Jiddah, Saudi Arabia and to travel throughout the Middle East.

PHARAON often travels via his yacht "LE PHARAON". On May 5, 1998 WFO was informed that PHARAON's yacht docked at the port in Limassol, Cyprus on May 3, 1998. The yacht had previously docked at Limassol on April 6, 1998 and departed for Syria on April 8, 1998. It was unknown when the yacht departed Syria, but it did arrive back in Limassol on May 3, 1998. Source information indicated that PHARAON was in Syria at the same time his yacht was at Syria. It is unknown if PHARAON departed Syria aboard the yacht.

The writer notified FBI Headquarters and the Department of Justice (DOJ) Fraud Section and Office of International Affairs (OIA) - Fugitive Section on May 5, 1998. DOJ advised there is an outstanding extradition treaty with Cyprus and that they would notify the State Department regarding PHARAON. DOJ-OIA notified Interpol regarding PHARAON.

On May 7, 1998, WFO contacted Special Agent [redacted] at Interpol, who advised that Interpol sent a message for Interpol to search the yacht "LE PHARAON" to determine if PHARAON is on the yacht. It is WFO's understanding that if PHARAON is located the Cyprian authorities have been requested to arrest PHARAON. There is an outstanding 'Red Letter Notice' on PHARAON. Should other information develops LEGAT Athens will be notified.♦♦ b6 b7C

Re: Abu Dhabi Parties

Dear Mr. [redacted] b6 b7C

In order to advance our meeting this coming Monday at 9:00 a.m. I am enclosing a tentative draft agreement.

I also expect that you will be able to advise me concretely about expeditious access to the three persons that we have discussed.

Finally, at Monday's meeting I would like to discuss with you at the meeting the ownership structure and mortgage details of the building at 330 Madison Avenue in New York.

Sincerely,

[redacted] b6 b7C

Ass[illegible]istrict Attorney

TENTATIVE DRAFT FOR DISCUSSION PURPOSES

AGREEMENT

This agreement embodies all promises, understandings, and agreements in existence between {Abu Dhabi parties} ("Abu Dhabi parties"), the New York County District Attorney's Office ("DANY") and the United States Department of Justice ("DOJ") regarding the hereinafter described "BCC scandal":

PREAMBLE

1. In _____, an individual, Agha Hasan Abedi, gained the trust of the ruling family of Abu Dhabi. He told them that he wanted to create a world wide banking institution. He told them that that bank would assist the development of Third World countries. The bank that Abedi and his associates described received the financial support of the ruling family of Abu Dhabi, and Abedi and his associates thereby gained access to billions of dollars, prestige and the trust of others. Further, Abedi and his associates were entrusted by the ruling family of Abu Dhabi and given broad authority to use and handle billions of dollars in additional funds. The resulting conduct by Abedi and those who associated with him through the BCC Group of companies and through the management of the billions of dollars to which Abedi and his associates were given access is what has become known as the BCC scandal. The BCC Group was comprised of the Bank of Credit and Commerce International Holdings, S.A., its subsidiaries and affiliates, including but not limited to Bank of Credit and Commerce International S.A., Bank of Credit and Commerce International (Overseas) Limited, ICIC Apex Holding, and their subsidiaries and affiliates.

2. The BCC scandal resulted in many victims. Numerous persons worldwide, many who can ill afford it, lost _____ of dollars. Several Third World countries had their treasuries depleted of millions of dollars. And, the ruling family of Abu Dhabi is now unable to account for billions of dollars entrusted to Abedi.

3. The ruling family of Abu Dhabi continues to express a moral concern over the losses to the victims of the BCC scandal.

4. The investigation into the facts and circumstances of the BCC scandal and to seek out those persons who share responsibility for it is a task of monumental proportions. The parties to this agreement agree that that investigation should bring to light all those who share that responsibility and agree to cooperate in that effort and to take all available steps to do so. The parties also agree that corruption in any form cannot go unrevealed.

5. This agreement is based upon the following main principles. First, the Abu Dhabi parties desire to cooperate with the investigations being conducted by or in conjunction with DOJ and DANY into the BCC scandal and to make available to them all evidence and witnesses for use in their respective investigations and court proceedings. Second, DOJ and DANY desire to cooperate with the investigations being conducted by the Government of Abu

Dhabi into the BCC scandal and to make available to it all evidence and witnesses for use in their respective investigations and court proceedings. Third, the Abu Dhabi parties desire to continue its efforts to mitigate the plight of those who have suffered from the BCC scandal.

6. The result of this agreement is that DOJ and the DANY, on the one hand, and the Abu Dhabi parties, on the other hand, shall provide cooperation to one another in the separate and independent investigations described above against other persons who share the blame for criminal conduct in connection with the BCC scandal to the full extent of their powers and abilities to do so.

COMMITMENTS

1. Cooperation

A. To cooperate means, in connection with any matter relating to the BCC scandal,

(1) to produce any investigative information that is or can be within the control of the relevant party;

(2) to use best efforts to produce any investigative information in the custody or control of third parties;

(3) to use best efforts to produce any person that is or can be within the control of the relevant party to testify in any duly convened grand jury, court, or other criminal, investigative, or administrative proceeding;

(4) to use best efforts to persuade and to facilitate the appearance of any person requested who is not within the control of the relevant party to testify in any duly convened grand jury, court, or other criminal, investigative, or administrative proceeding;

(5) to waive all privileges, including the attorney-client, accountant-client, privileges against self-incrimination, bank secrecy, and work product privileges, possessed by the relevant party.

B. "Investigative information" includes documents, records, tangible evidence or other information, in whatever media they might exist including, but not limited to paper, microfilm, microfiche, computer disks or other media.

C. "Produce ... investigative information" means to obtain access to, provide originals of where practicable, make and provide copies of, and permit use of such information, as specified by the requesting party.

D. The Abu Dhabi parties agree to and shall use their joint and individual best efforts to cooperate in the independent investigations being conducted by DOJ and NYDA individually and conjunction with other law enforcement or regulatory authorities in connection with matters relating to the BCC scandal. In signing this agreement, the Abu Dhabi parties specifically waive the the privileges set forth in Commitments clause 1 (A)(5).

E. DOJ agrees to and shall use its best efforts to cooperate in the criminal investigations being conducted by the Government of Abu Dhabi in connection with matters relating to the BCC scandal. Nothing in this agreement shall be interpreted to require DOJ to violate the laws of the United States or treaties to which the United States is a party, or to produce investigative information that is confidential, secret, or classified by virtue of the laws of the United States or treaties to which the United States is a party.

F. DANY agrees to and shall use its best efforts to cooperate in the criminal investigations being conducted by the Government of Abu Dhabi in connection with matters relating to the BCC scandal. Nothing in this agreement shall be interpreted to require DANY to violate the laws of New York, or the laws of the United States or treaties to which the United States is a party.

G. The Abu Dhabi parties agree to assume the reasonable costs of the cooperation set forth above.

2. Financial Assistance To BCC Victims

A. The Abu Dhabi parties believe that the misuse of power, authority, and monies entrusted to Abedi and his associates resulted in harm throughout the world. While the ruling family of Abu Dhabi and others in Abu Dhabi, including the Government of Abu Dhabi, cannot now account for billions of dollars entrusted to Abedi, the ruling family of Abu Dhabi continues to seek ways to ensure that the harm suffered to the innocent victims of the BCC scandal is mitigated in the largest possible manner. The ruling family recognizes that had Abedi not been entrusted with the power, authority, and monies entrusted to him, the BCC Group would not have had the wherewithal to abuse the trust placed in him and cause this victimization. In light of this, the ruling family of Abu Dhabi desires, has agreed to, and shall:

(1) provide the funds and establish a reasonable mechanism to ensure that each creditor of the branches of BCCI S.A. and BCCI Overseas located in the jurisdictions of: _____ whose BCC deposit accounts therein and throughout the world when offset by their loan accounts and reimbursements from other sources (such as liquidations or governmental grants) results in a net loss shall be provided an amount that makes up at least $_____ of the net loss by no later than December 31, 1993;

(2) provide the funds and establish a reasonable mechanism to ensure that the losses to the treasuries of the following

countries shall be made up by no later than December 31, 1993: _____;

(3) release all rights to their shares in CCAH, and their rights to the CCAH shares of any other CCAH shareholder, and all rights to any claim against debts owed by CCAH or its subsidiary companies by no later than _____, 1993;

(4) withdraw the claim of the Department of Private Affairs dated on or about September 8, 1992, against funds forfeited in connection with U.S. v. BCCI Holdings (Luxembourg), SA et al., by no later than _____, 1993;

(5) shall use their best efforts to utilize any monies or other property recovered in connection with any lawsuits or other proceedings brought by them or on their behalf relating to the BCC scandal to benefit all victims of the BCC scandal other than themselves.

3. Miscellaneous Provisions

A. The parties hereto agree to a tolling of any applicable statute of limitations to the extent that such is within their power as to criminal matters related to the BCC scandal during the term of this agreement and for 90 days thereafter.

TENTATIVE DRAFT FOR DISCUSSION PURPOSES

B. This agreement is the complete statement of all the promises, agreements, and understandings with respect to the subject matter of this agreement.

C. No amendments to this agreement shall be effective unless made in writing and signed by all parties. No representations, either orally or in writing, except those contained expressly in this agreement, were made to induce any of the parties to enter into this agreement. All prior negotiations, oral and written, are merged in this agreement. Evidence of such negotiations, including prior drafts, shall not be admissible for any purpose in any proceeding related to this agreement or its performance.

D. This agreement shall be governed by and construed in accordance with the laws of the state of New York, United States of America. Any dispute over this agreement shall be settled by action brought before in the courts of the state of New York, United States of America, and if any provision of this agreement is found to be unenforceable, this agreement shall be null and void (excepting the clause waiving statute of limitations rights) at the option of any of the parties to it.

D. This agreement may be executed in one or more identical counterparts, whether transmitted by telecopier or otherwise. Each such counterpart shall be deemed to be an original for purposes of this agreement.

The purposes of this memorandum are: to summarize a 3/18/93 meeting at DOJ, between Acting DAAG Laurence A. Urgenson, Attorney [redacted], ASAC [redacted], SSA [redacted] b6 b7C FBIHQ SSA [redacted] and myself; and to update you on efforts to capture GHAITH PHARAON.

The 3/18/93 meeting was held to discuss the status of the trial in New York; the prospects of trials of CLIFFORD and [redacted] occurring in the District of Columbia in or about June, b6 b7C 1993; and the existence and nature of additional, BCCI-related matters.

In the matter of the New York trial, [redacted] has been reviewing records at the [redacted] pursuant to a discovery order relating to witness statements. In doing so, [redacted] discovered indications that additional records (i.e., intercepts) relating to BCCI, CLIFFORD, [redacted] et al, exist at the [redacted] records which apparently have not been reviewed by anyone associated with the captioned matter. You will recall that only one [redacted] intercept was heretofore brought to our attention by DOJ Fraud Section Principal Deputy Chief [redacted] and we investigated that one. Supposedly, according to PDC [redacted] it was the only one which resulted from DOJ's inquiry t[redacted] knowledge, however, came from discussions wit[redacted] who reported having seen a large volume of possibly-relevant intercepts at [redacted] in or about mid-1991, when the [redacted] and other members of the Intelligence Community were drawing together records in response to judicial and congressional inquiries. [redacted] and ADAAG Urgenson agreed to assess exactly what DOJ had requested in the way of intelligence material, what was received, and what we now have on hand. b6 b7C b7E

With regard to any prosecution of CLIFFORD and [redacted] b6 b7C in WDC, the consensus seemed to be that, under the right circumstances, DOJ should dismiss the indictments against them, thereby deferring the prosecution of CLIFFORD to New York, then proceeding civilly, through the FED, against both CLIFFORD and [redacted] The "right circumstances" would include: CLIFFORD's surviving his scheduled (3/22/93) heart surgery and being pronounced able to stand trial; the NY trial of [redacted] getting underway and proceeding to some resolution; and the FED's readiness and willingness to proceed against them.

The avenues of further investigation would include: (1) attempts to capture, or negotiate deals with, fugitives [redacted] b6 [redacted] PHARAON, AGHA HASAN ABEDI and [redacted] b7C (2) forfeiture matters; (3) interviewing witnesses and reviewing records in Abu Dhabi, whose availability appears to be contingent on DOJ's and DANY's ability to strike a deal with the government of Abu Dhabi; and (4) identification and prosecution of an American subjects criminally involved in BCCI-related matters, particularly, in the areas of bribery, corruption and money laundering.

With regard to the fugitives, ADAAG Urgenson reported that efforts are continuing to get access to [redacted] once he is b6 extradited to the U.K. In the matter of PHARAON, negotiations b7C with his counsel were continuing, with the most likely place for b7D receiving [redacted] himself, now being Casablanca, Morocco.

There was some discussion of the propriety and value of attempting to negotiate with ABEDI. It was agreed that, using the rationale that we should be seeking to identify and prosecute culpable Americans, and realizing that capturing ABEDI is highly unlikely anyway, an attempt should be made to contact him in a negotiating-posture, initially through [redacted], who b6 reputedly is still in close communication with him. We will b7C explore this through DOJ [redacted] currently detailed to the NY prosecution, where [redacted] is to testify.

On the matter of forfeitures, efforts are continuing to identify and acquire control over all of BCCI's U.S. assets. Currently, information is being received from [redacted] b6 [redacted] to the trustee for the sale of First American b7C Bankshares, who is examining such things as whether BCCI actually owned of the building at 350 Park Avenue, NY, NY, in which FAB leased space.

With regard to the status of Abu Dhabi, vis-a-vis the captioned matter, DOJ and DANY are "pushing in the direction of" striking an agreement with Abu Dhabi in which the latter would pay an additional $230 million to the U.S. and grant unlimited access to the records and witnesses--e.g., [redacted]--now under its control. ADAAG Urgenson was to travel to NY on 3/22/93, to jointly, with DANY, meet with attorneys for Abu Dhabi in furtherance of the negotiations. b6 b7C

ADAAG Urgenson reported that DANY Robert Morganthau and ADANY [redacted] both have stated their beliefs that U.S. Senator Orrin Hatch was bribed by BCCI. ADAAG Urgenson intends to formally request that DANY provide any "hard" evidence it has. b6 b7C

Concerning GHAITH PHARAON, on 3/19/93, Legat Rome reported having been in contact with [redacted] in Amman, Jordan, regarding whether PHARAON came into that country recently, as a source had reported to [redacted]. As of 3/22/93, Rome had determined that, on 3/16/93, PHARAON did enter Amman to testify as a defendant in a civil proceeding. The source of the information, [redacted] reportedly identified PHARAON from [redacted] and told that [redacted] that PHARAON's [redacted] PHARAON [redacted] Rome further reported that, although Jordan and the U.S. have no MLAT or extradition treaty, [redacted] believed that Jordan would entertain a request for assistance. b7D b7E

On 3/19/93, after talking with Rome, I immediately discussed the information about PHARAON with ADAAG Urgenson. Without hesitation, he agreed with me that, although negotiations leading [redacted] seem to be progressing, that should in no way preclude taking advantage of an opportunity to capture him. ADAAG Urgenson said he would contact DOJ OIA immediately. On 3/22/93, OIA Assistant Director Linda Candler informed me that one of [redacted] had spoken with [redacted] in Amman, who reportedly told OIA that, although neither he nor the ambassador was optimistic that the Jordanians would assist, the ambassador was willing, if DOJ wanted it, to personally approach the Jordanian minister of justice with a request for assistance. I recommended to AD Candler that the ambassador be asked to proceed with making the request. b6 b7C b7D b7E

Title: HIDDEN INTERESTS;
MC #38;
FIF; FAG;
OO: WFO

Synopsis: Request for consideration of captioned case for placement on the FBI's Internet Home Page. Request is for placement of HIDDEN INTEREST, the Bank of Credit and Commerce International (BCCI), as well as the last remaining BCCI fugitive, Gaith R. Pharaon, in both the Major Investigations section of the FBI's Home Page and the Fugitives section of the FBI's Most Wanted category on the Home Page.

Enclosures: Enclosed for the National Press Office/Fugitive Publicity Office are two copies of the following:

1. World Wide Web Request Form.

2. World Wide Web Fugitive Publicity Request Form for fugitive Gaith R. Pharaon.

3. EC regarding captioned investigation and Pharaon's involvement.

4. Photographs of Gaith R. Pharaon.

Details: The worldwide closure of the Bank of Credit and Commerce International (BCCI) in 7/91, surfaced the greatest scandal in international banking history. The investigation in the United States focused on the secret ownership interest or attempted ownership interest by BCCI in American Banks.

Ghaith R. Pharaon participated in a conspiracy with BCCI and its principal officers, Agha Hasan Abedi and [redacted], [redacted] to defraud the United States government and individua[redacted] b6 b7C investors. As part of the conspiracy, BCCI used Pharaon to secretly acquire the Independence Bank of Encino, California in 1985. Although Pharaon was the purported purchaser, BCCI and Pharaon had an agreement whereby 85 percent of the Independence Bank stock, with its voting rights, was pledged to BCCI. Thereafter, BCCI exercised significant control over the personnel and operational decisions of Independence.

29B-WF-171994 [redacted]

At no time were state and federal regulators informed of the agreement between BCCI and Pharaon, or of BCCI's true interest in acquiring Independence. The concealment of this secret agreement and of BCCI's interest in Independence was a violation of federal regulations. This deception enabled Independence to fraudulently obtain insurance protection from the federal government, backed by the funds and the security of the United States.

Also as part of the conspiracy, Pharaon utilized BCCI to facilitate a fraud by manipulating the financial market for subordinated debentures issued by the CenTrust Savings Bank in Miami, Florida. In January 1988, Pharaon acquired approximately 25 percent of the stock in CenTrust. During that same year, CenTrust received regulatory approval to raise capital by selling 150 million dollars worth of subordinated debentures. In order to maximize its profits, it was important to CenTrust that there appear to be a demand for all 150 million dollars worth of the debentures. With the issuance date just several days away and CenTrust unable to find subscribers for all of the debentures, Pharaon and BCCI reached an agreement whereby BCCI would purchase 25 million dollars worth of the debentures, thus ensuring that the subordinated debenture offering would appear to be fully subscribed.

The purchase by BCCI was not a bona fide purchase, as BCCI's funds were not truly at risk. Approximately eight weeks after the issuance, pursuant to their agreement, CenTrust repurchased the debentures from BCCI, at full face value with interest, and CenTrust did not record the repurchase in its' financial records required by federal regulators. Thus, Pharaon and CenTrust used BCCI to artificially inflate the demand for the subordinated debentures and deceive investors as to the true value of the notes. Federal regulators were also deceived as to the true regulatory capital maintained by the bank.

On 11/15/91, Pharaon was indicted for Federal Wire Fraud and Racketeering offenses. He is one of the subjects of Indictment No. 91-655-7 (JHG), filed in the United States District Court for the District of Columbia. The indictment charges Pharaon with (1) Conspiracy to Commit Wire Fraud, in violation of Title 18, United States Code, Section 371; (2) Wire Fraud, in violation of Title 18, United States Code, Section 1343; (3) Conspiracy to Commit Racketeering, in violation of Title 18, United States Code, Section 1962(d); and (4) Aiding and Abetting, in violation of Title 18, United States Code, Section 2. A warrant for his arrest was issued on 11/15/97, by United States Magistrate Judge Alan Kay.

The offenses charged are felonies under United States law and are punishable by imprisonment of not more than 20 years, fines and/or court-ordered restitution. Pharaon has also been indicted in the Northern District of Georgia, the Southern District of Florida, and the State of New York. As a result, Pharaon is wanted on three federal warrants and one state warrant, all relating to fraud and racketeering.

The United States government has actively sought the apprehension of Pharaon since his indictment. The United States Department of Justice has made provisional arrest requests to various countries throughout the world, including France, Korea, the United Kingdom, Saudi Arabia, Pakistan, Syria, Jordan, Morocco, Italy, and others. A request for arrest also has been made by the FBI through Interpol.

Pharaon, a Saudi Arabian citizen, is extremely wealthy and considerably influential in the Middle East. He reportedly travels extensively between Morocco, Egypt, and Saudi Arabia. To date, he has been able to evade arrest and extradition. In the past, Pharaon was able to have his name removed from Interpol's computer when he traveled to Jordan. Previous investigation has determined that Pharaon's villa in Cannes, France, is next door to one belonging to the King of Jordan. Pharaon has been known to travel on his personal yacht, the Panamanian flag, marine vessel "Le Pharaon," which in the past year frequented the Caribbean.

Pharaon is believed to have been in Islamabad, Pakistan, between 3/28/97 and 3/30/97, to chair an Attock Oil Board meeting. It is believed he departed Pakistan for Jedda, Saudi Arabia, on 4/1/97. His current whereabouts are unknown.

Extradition will be requested if arrested in any country which has an extradition treaty with the U.S. for crimes that are clearly extraditable.

Anyone with information regarding the whereabouts of Gaith R. Pharaon should contact Unit Chief [redacted] or Supervisory Special Agent [redacted] Federal Bureau of Investigation, 935 Pennsylvania Avenue, N.W., Washington, D.C., b6 b7C

Summary of case: In 1985, PHARAON and the Bank of Credit and Commerce International (BCCI) secretly acquired the Independence Bank of Encino, California. The concealment of this secret agreement was a violation of the federal regulation and enabled the Independence Bank to obtain insurance protection fraudulently from the Federal Government, backed by the funds and security of the United States. PHARAON and other BCCI officers used wire communications in order to transmit information to further this scheme. In January 1988, PHARAON participated in a conspiracy with BCCI and its principal officers to defraud the U.S. Government and individual investors. PHARAON used BCCI to facilitate a fraud by manipulating the financial market for debentures issued by the Centrust Savings Bank in Miami, Florida.

When they issued the offer, Centrust Savings Bank secretly agreed with PHARAON and BCCI to cause the price of the stock to go up by mean of a false transaction. Thus it appeared that BCCI had purchased US $25 million worth of the debenture offer. In reality, the debentures were bought by Centrust which wanted the issue to appear popular in order to inflate the price artificially.

An arrest warrant was issued on November 15, 1991, as a result of an indictment, by the judicial authorities in the District of Columbia, United States, for: Conspiracy to commit wire fraud; wire fraud; and racketeering conspiracy.

Extradition will be requested from all countries with which the United States has an extradition treaty currently in force which permits extradition for the offence charged.

PHARAON had business interests in the Middle East, United States and elsewhere. Currently all his assets in the United States are frozen, an estimate of which is $300 million. Currently there is a claim, by various enforcement agencies, against PHARAON's U.S. assets for about $110 million.

PHARAON has [redacted]. On the weekend of September 5-6, 1998, there will be a race held at Istanbul, Turkey. It is believed that on occasions

G. PHARAON's means of transportation to the races is unknown. However, PHARAON often travels via his private yacht LE PHARAON'. PHARAON is known to have traveled via commercial air lines in the past.

The Office of Navy Intelligence (ONI) has been tracking PHARAON's yacht. ONI advised that the yacht has been located near Monte Carlo during the Monte Carlo Grand Prix. The yacht has been located at Cannes, France during the Cannes Film Festival. Finally, the yacht has spent the summer season on the French Riviera, mostly at Antibes near Nice, France.

The yacht was spotted at the port in Limassol, Cyprus on May 3, 1998. The yacht had previously docked at Limassol on April 6, 1998 and departed for Syria on April 8, 1998. It was unknown when the yacht departed Syria, but it did arrive back in Limassol on May 3, 1998. Source information indicated that PHARAON was in Syria at the same time his yacht was at Syria. It was unknown if PHARAON departed Syria aboard the yacht. IT IS KNOWN THAT THERE HAVE BEEN AUTOMATIC WEAPONS (SHOULDER WEAPONS) ON BOARD THE YACHT. Caution is warranted should the opportunity arise to board the yacht.

It is believed that PHARAON had contacts within INTERPOL in 1995. If at all possible contact with INTERPOL should be avoided. Should other information develop the appropriate LEGATs will be notified.

Details: The captioned matter was an investigation into the Bank of Credit and Commerce International (BCCI) and its activities in the United States. Mainly, whether or not BCCI, its Officers, and PHARAON attempted to defraud the United States government and federal banking regulations by secretly acquiring Independence Bank of Encino, California. Also, whether or not BCCI, its Officers and PHARAON participated in a conspiracy to defraud the U.S. government by manipulating the financial market for an offering of subordinate debentures issued by the Centrust Savings Bank (CAB) in Miami, Florida.

As a result of the investigation, PHARAON, along with AGHA HASAN ABEDI and [redacted] of BCCI), were indicted in November of 1991 by the judicial authorities in the District of Columbia, United States, for : [redacted] An arrest warrant was issued on November 15, 1991. ABEDI is deceased. [redacted] is incarcerated. PHARAON has since been a fugitive, living mainly in Saudi Arabia. b6 b7C

PHARAON has business ventures throughout the Middle East. It is believed that PHARAON had contacts within INTERPOL in 1995. Attempts to detain and extradite PHARAON have failed due to his high profile and closeness to the Government of Saudi Arabia.

In December of 1997, a request was made of Legat Riyadh to have Bahraini authorities detain and extradite PHARAON. Legat Riyadh advised that the Charge d'affaires of the U.S. embassy, Manama, was advised by the Bahraini Foreign Minister (FM), as well as the Minister of Interior (MOI), that although the Bahraini government desired to accommodate the U.S. government in the matter, they were also unwilling to create any ill-feelings with the Saudi government by detaining one of its most influential citizens. Due to this information no action was taken.

However, Legat Riyadh did conduct telephone and business checks regarding PHARAON. These checks revealed the following numbers were subscribed to PHARAON: [redacted] (cellular). The check of the business directory revealed that PHARAON is one of the owners/shareholders of UNITED COMMERCIAL AGENCIES LIMITED (UCA). The other owner is BIN LADIN MIDDLE EAST GROUP. UCA has offices in Jeddah, Riyadh and Al-Khobar, Saudi Arabia, as well as in Beirut, Lebanon. b6 b7C

WFO searched indices for the above companies and individuals and found no known association with BIN LADIN. In fact the only individual, except for PHARAON, in indices was [redacted] However, WFO was unable to determine if the SAWAH in indices was identical to the SAWAH associated with UCA. b6 b7C

WFO is in the process of submitting a request for a reward for the capture of PHARAON. But prior to submitting the request WFO needs to determine if there is any association between PHARAON and BIN LADIN.

Summary of case: In 1985, the Bank of Credit and Commerce International (BCCI) secretly acquired the Independence Bank of Encino, California. The concealment of this secret agreement was a violation of the federal regulation and enabled the Independence Bank to obtain insurance protection fraudulently from the Federal Government, backed by the funds and security of the United States. BCCI officers used wire communications in order to transmit information to further this scheme.

Further, in January 1988, BCCI officials participated in a conspiracy to defraud the U.S. Government and individual investors. BCCI Officials assisted GHAITH PHARAON in facilitating a fraud by manipulating the financial market for an offering of subordinate debentures issued by the Centrust Savings Bank (CSB) in Miami, Florida.

When CSB issued the subordinate debenture offer, CSB agreed with PHARAON to buy back the $25 million subordinate debenture purchase PHARAON had made. This made it appear that the subordinate debenture offering was fully funded. In reality, the subordinate debentures were bought by CSB which wanted the issue to appear popular in order to inflate the price artificially. PHARAON originally purchased the subordinate debentures with funds he had received from BCCI.

[redacted] was indicted on November 15, 1991, the result of an indictment, by the judicial authorities in the District of Columbia, United States, for: [redacted] b6 b7C

Again, it is anticipated that [redacted] would be able to assist in the ongoing investigations being conducted by the FED and the BCCI Liquidators. Further, [redacted] assistance in a trial of PHARAON, who is a fugitive related to the 1991 indictments, could be helpful and required. Thus knowledge of [redacted] whereabouts is important. b6 b7C

[redacted] had previously been under House Arrest in Abu Dhabi by the ruler SHEIK ZAYED BIN SULTAN AL-NAHYAN. It is unclear what actions would be taken by the other Governments (Pakistani, British or Abu Dhabi), should [redacted] return to said countries. b6 b7C

Package Copy: Being forwarded under separate cover are volumes 1 through 6 and 1A1 through 1A77 of 29B-WF-171994.

Details: During 9/91, an investigation was initiated by the Washington Field Division concerning THE BANK OF CREDIT AND COMMERCE INTERNATIONAL. Washington Field opened a case with case number 29B-WF-171994. Investigation revealed that BCCI had secretly acquired THE NATIONAL BANK OF GEORGIA (NBG), Atlanta, Georgia. The Atlanta Division began an investigation regarding this matter and it was requested that the investigation be conducted under file number 29B-WF-171994. The Atlanta investigation produced 6 volumes and 77 1As, all under the 29B-WF-171994 case file number. Due to the file destruction program, Atlanta closed files wanted to destroy these volumes. These volumes cannot be destroyed due to the fact that GHAITH PHARON, a Subject in this case, is still a fugitive. The volumes and 1As are being returned to the OO office for storage.

Synopsis: Provide Washington Field with the Atlanta portion of the captioned investigation.

Package Copy: Being forwarded under separate cover are volumes 1 through 6 and 1A1 through 1A77 of 29B-WF-171994.

Details: During 9/91, an investigation was initiated by the Washington Field Division concerning THE BANK OF CREDIT AND COMMERCE INTERNATIONAL. Washington Field opened a case with case number 29B-WF-171994. Investigation revealed that BCCI had secretly acquired THE NATIONAL BANK OF GEORGIA (NBG), Atlanta, Georgia. The Atlanta Division began an investigation regarding this matter and it was requested that the investigation be conducted under file number 29B-WF-171994. The Atlanta investigation produced 6 volumes and 77 1As, all under the 29B-WF-171994 case file number. Due to the file destruction program, Atlanta closed files wanted to destroy these volumes. These volumes cannot be destroyed due to the fact that GHAITH PHARON, a Subject in this case, is still a fugitive. The volumes and 1As are being returned to the OO office for storage.

[redacted], NEW YORK STATE BANKING DEPARTMENT (NYSBD), was contacted at his place of employment located at 530 Fifth Avenue, 7th Floor, New York, NY 10036, telephone number [redacted]. After being advised of the identity of the agent and the purpose of the interview, [redacted] furnished the following information:

[redacted] is currently employed with the NYSBD as a [redacted]. The BANK OF CREDIT AND COMMERCE INTERNATIONAL S.A. (BCCI) was placed into receivership by the SUPERINTENDENT OF BANKS FOR THE STATE OF NEW YORK for liquidation. [redacted] was previously employed by BCCI where he was hired due to his strong background in commercial lending. However, shortly after [redacted] began his employment with BCCI, the bank was closed by authorities. Due to his previous work experience and knowledge of BCCI customers/loans, [redacted] was contracted by the NYSBD as a [redacted] and tasked [redacted]

Through his work with BCCI/NYSBD loans, [redacted] has learned of an apparent fraud and criminal violations regarding the loans of BCCI customer DR. [redacted] also known as DR [redacted] described it as the most complex series of fraudulent transactions that he has ever seen in his fifteen years experience in banking. [redacted] obtained loans totaling approximately $34 million from BCCI which were to be used in [redacted] related entities. [redacted] has failed to make payments on any of the debt except through refinancing both principal and accrued interest. In addition, [redacted] has discovered that loans were obtained through false representations as well as loan proceeds being misdirected from the intended purpose. In addition, it appears that two former BCCI officers may have aided and abetted [redacted] with his dealings at BCCI.

According to a credit report, [redacted] determined that [redacted] began his banking relationship with BCCI in 1987. The credit report associated [redacted] with companies known as SCANDIA INTERNATIONAL and MC DOWELL ENTERPRISES. However, no records were found at BCCI regarding those companies or [redacted] involvement with them. In late 1987 [redacted] had established a $1.5 million standby letter of credit to cover potential overdrafts in connection with a hotel acquisition project. This lending relationship lasted approximately six months. b6 b7C

[redacted] major borrowing at BCCI began in March 1988. CAPROCK PROPERTIES, INC. (CPI) and CAPROCK HOSPITALITY, INC. (CHI) were two "special purpose corporations" that [redacted] and/or his associates established in order [redacted] HOWARD JOHNSON HOTEL in Dumfries, Virginia and the HOWARD JOHNSON HOTEL in Raleigh, North Carolina, respectively. CPI and CHI [redacted] a company known as TITLE USA, which was a subsidiary of CAPROCK SAVINGS & LOAN (CAPROCK S&L) located in Dallas, Texas. b6 b7C

[redacted] recalled that CAPROCK S&L failed and its [redacted] was under indictment in Texas. DILLMAN's name appears in some of the [redacted] related documents involving a company known as MARKETPLACE GEORGIA. The registered addresses for CPI and CHI were the same as [redacted] ZURICH CORPORATION (ZURICH) and P.S. INVESTMENT COMPANY (PSIC), which were in Greensboro, North Carolina. This was unusual considering that CPI and CHI were owned by the Dallas, Texas based TITLE USA / CAPROCK S&L organization. b6 b7C

[redacted] believes that the common link between CAPROCK S&L and [redacted] is through [redacted] (phonetic). [redacted] CAPROCK S&L and has been charged criminally along with [redacted] in Dallas. [redacted] signature appears on some of the documents as [redacted] BELL PETROLEUM and as a [redacted] PHARMA CONTROL, which are both [redacted] related entities. Further, First Name Unknown (fnu) [redacted] was listed as [redacted] CAPROCK S&L and REGAL INTERNATIONAL. b6 b7C

[redacted] believes that [redacted] was [redacted] in CAPROCK S&L and obtained [redacted] CPI and CHI for S&L stock. Apparently [redacted] transferred the hotel properties into the corporations and the stock value was determined by the appraised value of the property less the existing debt against the hotels. [redacted] has learned that the appraisals were inflated explained that this procedure of trading the inflated stock values for S&L stock, created a fictitious capital injection to the S&L and made CAPROCK S&L appear to be more stable than it actually was. By rolling the inflated values b6 b7C

through TITLE USA and then to CAPROCK S&L, actually mislead regulators from the FEDERAL SAVINGS AND LOAN INSURANCE CORPORATION (FSLIC) into believing that CAPROCK S&L had received an additional capital injection through the acquisition of those properties. COOPERS & LYBRAND (C&L), a national accounting firm, conducted an audit of CAPROCK S&L as of December 31, 1988. [redacted] believes that the FSLIC relied upon C&L audit as a basis for allowing the S&L to continue in operation. [redacted] believes that the auditors from C&L did not go beyond the subsidiary company, TITLE USA, to verify the actual substance of the equity purported to be in CPI and CHI. Therefore, the false capital injection was insulted from regulators by making CPI and CHI subsidiary companies of TITLE USA. b6 b7C

In August 1988, BCCI made a $500,000 loan to CPI for the benefit of the HOWARD JOHNSON HOTEL located in Raleigh, N.C., which was actually owned by CHI. The [redacted] DR. [redacted] who was [redacted] CPI at the time. [redacted] is a medical doctor from Pittsburgh, Pennsylvania, and purportedly, was [redacted] the HOWARD JOHNSON HOTEL located in Dumfries, Virginia, to CPI. [redacted] had a management agreement/contract with CPI. [redacted] was uncertain whether [redacted] had such an agreement with CHI. b6 b7C

[redacted] was a [redacted] SRIVASTAVA. [redacted] also served as [redacted] ZURICH and REGAL INTERNATIONAL, INC., a publicly traded company that [redacted] subsequently [redacted] b6 b7C

[redacted] believes that [redacted] CPI series of transactions, and [redacted] followed the example at CHI. [redacted] was uncertain as to how [redacted]/BCCI became involved with CAPROCK S&L. b6 b7C

In November 1988, [redacted] HILTON HOTEL located in Lansing, Michigan. b6 b7C

In early 1989, BCCI funded a $500,000 loan to [redacted] - ZURICH or PSIC) for a project involving the RAMADA INN located in Chattanooga, Tennessee. BCCI obtained a second mortgage on the property and the BANK OF INDIA (BOI) held the first mortgage to secure its $3.5 million loan. b6 b7C

The $500,000 has never been repaid.

BCCI later learned that the BOI conveyed its first mortgage to POLYSTAR, which was believed to be another publicly traded company that [redacted], in exchange for a first mortgage position on another hotel property [redacted] by [redacted] SUMARA CORPORATION. Therefore, the BOI simply substituted collateral for [redacted] $3.5 million loan. [redacted] knew of no reason for BOI to assign its mortgage interest to POLYSTAR. b6 b7C

SUMARA CORPORATION owned various motels in Tennessee and the southeast. [redacted] believes that [redacted] is a former policeman from India who has a reputation of being a [redacted] b6 b7C

Subsequently, [redacted] JASAVI, which was [redacted] admitted during a deposition that JASAVI was set up as a shell company in order to default on loans allow them [redacted] group) to retain the hotel property. b6 b7C

In August 1989, BCCI made a $7.5 million loan to [redacted] DOWNTOWN HOTEL (formerly the HILTON HOTEL) located in Macon, Georgia. BCCI held the first mortgage as collateral. At the time of the loan presentation, the appraisal provided to BCCI by [redacted] and [redacted] reported that the property was valued at $13 million. However, in February 1991, BCCI had the property re-appraised and it was determined that the property was worth $6.4 million instead of $13 million. Later, it was discovered that [redacted] was an associate or employee of [redacted], and had [redacted] properties located in Dumfries, Virginia, Lansing, Michigan, and Raleigh, North Carolina. [redacted] noted that the property in Raleigh was appraised by [redacted] at $18 million, however the property was subsequently sold for $3 million. b6 b7C

In October or November 1989, [redacted] BCCI [redacted] and [redacted], made a trip to inspect the [redacted] properties located at COX TRAILERS, INC. (CTI) in Grifton, NC and the hotel in Raleigh, NC. After they returned [redacted] drafted an internal b6 b7C

BCCI memorandum regarding 'Special Loans' that recommended that all those loans, including [redacted] loans, be handled by Senior Management. [redacted] recommended that [redacted] and another officer handle those loans. After the recommendation was sent out for approval, [redacted] crossed off the third loan officer's name, thus leaving himself [redacted] as the only two BCCI officers that should deal with those 'Special Loans.'

Also after their return from North Carolina, they [redacted] propose that the total Raleigh loan be taken out with a $11.5 million loan. In this manner, BCCI could acquire the first mortgage from the RESOLUTION TRUST CORPORATION (RTC) and the second mortgage held by the BANK OF BARODA (located in India). BCCI held a third mortgage on the property at the time. [redacted] explained that the RTC acquired its interest in the property after CAPROCK S&L failed and was turned over to the RTC for liquidation. Shortly thereafter, the Raleigh operation filed for bankruptcy under Chapter 11.

By this time, BCCI had already been criticized by bank examiners from the FEDERAL RESERVE for its large concentration in real estate loans as well as its credit concentration in one customer, [redacted] BCCI subsequently published a new policy advising its loan officers to reduce the amount of real estate loans made by the bank. However, BCCI officials continued to increase the [redacted] loans/credits from $4-5 million up to $34 million.

At the end of November 1989, [redacted] obtained a loan in the amount of $250,000 from BCCI, of which $100,000 went directly to [redacted] and $123,000 went into one of [redacted] entities. Prior to the loan, [redacted] had established a loan in the amount of $100,000 which was secured by deposit account balances owned by [redacted] believes that [redacted] needed cash at the time, so he arranged for [redacted] to represent to BCCI that he [redacted] company known as MARKETPLACE GEORGIA (MG), which owned a shopping center in Valdosta, Georgia. [redacted] has since determined that [redacted] MG and later conveyed [redacted] DR. [redacted] Shortly after obtaining the loan, [redacted] filed for personal bankruptcy. In essence, [redacted] managed to obtain release of his $100,000 from

BCCI by having [redacted] obtain a fraudulent loan and disbursing [redacted] collateral of $100,000 directly to him.

Through the bank's efforts to obtain repayment for the $250,000 MG loan, they began dealing with the reported MG named [redacted]

In January 1990, BCCI made a $14 million loan to [redacted] for the purpose of [redacted] QUALITY HOTEL AT LAGUARDIA AIRPORT in New York, New York. $10 million was allocated to [redacted] $4 million for the [redacted]. One of the conditions for the loan was that [redacted] DOWNTOWN HOTEL in Macon, Georgia, which [redacted] Subsequently, [redacted] furnished a sales agreement which disclosed that the (Macon) hotel [redacted]. The sales was never funded so no funds were received by [redacted] to service the existing debt against the Macon hotel.

During this time period, [redacted] REGAL INTERNATIONAL, INC. (REGAL), a publicly traded company. After [redacted] REGAL. Subsequently, [redacted] conveyed his [redacted] was replaced by [redacted] REGAL. [redacted] was the [redacted] ZURICH and CTI. In addition, fnu DEAN, who is a former U.S. AMBASSADOR to India, and [redacted] (phonetic), [redacted] EQUITABLE LIFE INSURANCE COMPANY, were appointed [redacted] REGAL.

In April 1990, [redacted] was hired by BCCI [redacted] was a very credible and respected banker who previously worked for the BANK OF AMERICA and CHASE-MANHATTAN BANK. [redacted] believes that [redacted] and his associates started to get worried at this time, because [redacted] would be monitoring the credits of [redacted]

In May 1990, a $500,000 loan was made by BCCI [redacted] for the benefit of COX DISTRIBUTING, INC. (CDI). A review of the credit file revealed that nothing was disclosed about the relationship between CDI and COX TRAILERS, INC. (CTI), as well as the relationships to ZURICH and PSIC. The [redacted] CDI [redacted] and the [redacted] At this time, it was known that [redacted] would be coming in soon to BCCI to take over the operation. [redacted] emphasized that the amount of the loan, $500,000, because that was the maximum loan amount that the New York Division could lend without requiring approval from the CENTRAL CREDIT DIVISION, which is located at the BCCI-LONDON, ENGLAND. During the loan process, BCCI received an appraisal of $1 million for the CDI property which was located in Greensboro, NC. Subsequent investigation determined that the appraisal report was bogus because the appraiser and the appraisal company did not exist. In addition, the telephone number provided for the appraiser was apparently chosen at random because the subscriber of that number came back to an unrelated party. b6 b7C

Just prior to the funding of the $500,000 loan to CD, [redacted], an attorney, conveyed property described by [redacted] as a defunct gas station, to CD, and then filed a first mortgage against the property for CD for the benefit of BCCI. The cost of the property for according to the documents filed was $80,000. [redacted] has learned that the bogus appraisal for $1 million on the property was apparently designed to make it appear that the property owned and pledged on the loan included a warehouse that was located near the aforementioned gas station. However, the deeds conveying the property revealed that only the gas station was included in the conveyance. [redacted] has also learned that [redacted] was owed $25,000 for estate services by the lady who previously owned the gas station, however [redacted] was uncertain as to whether [redacted] had any knowledge of the fraudulent appraisal that was provided to BCCI. b6 b7C

In May 1990, [redacted] requested a $2 million draw on the $11.5 million loan facility in order to buy out the RTC's first mortgage in the Raleigh property. [redacted] received the money but the RTC was never paid. When confronted with the use of the money, [redacted] stated that he had incurred cost overruns on the LaGuardia hotel project and used the money there. Also in May 1990, [redacted] obtained a draw of $2.5 million from the Raleigh facility and used the funds [redacted] DAYS INN MOTEL AND LODGE located in Tarpon Springs, Florida instead of paying off the BANK OF BORDAN (Indian Bank) as represented. Most of the funds obtained from the $11.5 million loan were used to pay the interest current on existing debts. However, in June 1990, $1.2 million was also channelled from the $11.5 million loan to [redacted] in order for [redacted] to use the funds to maintain deposit account requirements mandated by the loan. b6 b7C

Also in May 1990, the BCCI officers attempted to push through another loan in the amount of $500,000 to BELL PETROLEUM, which is another subsidiary of ZURICH, which is [redacted] b6 b7C The loan amount was approved locally, however it was somehow held up until the new BCCI-NY [redacted] arrived and was never funded.

In July 1990, the HOWARD JOHNSON HOTEL in Raleigh, NC, filed for bankruptcy. The [redacted] is fnu [redacted] b6 b7C [redacted] suggested that [redacted] be interviewed regarding the "looting" of property by [redacted] 'henchmen."

In September 1990, the LaGuardia hotel project was approximately 90% complete. [redacted] personally inspected the project and agreed that they [redacted] needed $200,000 to pay some bills or the project may fall into bankruptcy. The bank did not want to take over the hotel project and preferred that [redacted] complete it because the bank did not want to become involved with organized crime people that were always involved in the hotel and construction industries in the New York area. [redacted] explained that he had learned fro[redacted] that a company known as THE RIGHT CONNECTION COMPANY had been investigated for alleged Organized Crime connections with the GREEK MOB.

The bank decided to handle the payment of the sub-contractors and pay them directly on invoice. The bank made provided for a loan to [redacted] for $208,000 to cover the expenses. The checks were disbursed to a variety of sub-contractor companies. However, it was later discovered upon reviewing the endorsements on some of the checks, that the monies were endorsed back to [redacted] related entities by known associates of [redacted] endorsed at least one of the checks. [redacted] was listed in a DUNN & BRADSTREET (D&B) report as [redacted] HOWARD JOHNSON HOTEL in Dumfries, Virginia. However, [redacted] falsely represented to BCCI officials during an interview that he did not become employed by [redacted] until he began working at the QUALITY HOTEL AT LAGUARDIA AIRPORT in New York, New York. [redacted] provided the interviewing agent with photocopies of the original checks, which are presently maintained in the vault at [redacted] office.

[redacted] believes that approximately $100,000 of the $208,000 was expended for legitimate costs associated with the project. [redacted] also believes that several of [redacted] associates posed as sub-contractors and furnished bogus invoices to support disbursements of the $208,000 loan and the funds were later funnelled back to [redacted]

b6 b7C

b6 b7C

After [redacted] took over as [redacted] BCCI-NY, the bank requested photocopies of documents to support the funds that were advanced for the construction / renovation project at LaGuardia. Subsequently, [redacted] and/or his associates, provided photocopies of company checks, front side only, of the alleged disbursements. However without the reverse side of the checks, the bank could not determine if the checks had actually been paid or if they were just written out for purposes of giving the bank justification for the funds received by [redacted] explained that the loan documentation at BCCI-NY was very poor and he was uncertain as to whether the lack of documentation was intentional or not.

[redacted] defaulted on his loans and the bank wanted to restructure [redacted] entire credit portfolio. [redacted] had no equity in many of the projects and was advanced funds in order to pay the accrued interest on the loans. The bank insisted that [redacted] restructure all of his loans at BCCI-NY. [redacted] expressed his displeasure because it was not consistent with his previous dealings with BCCI.

In October 1990, BCCI exercised its right of offset and applied $2,100,000 of [redacted] deposit account balances at the New York Agency to the loans, as well as $422,000 of deposits at BCCI-Bombay. [redacted] recalled that this upset [redacted] and put him in a defensive position. At that time, BCCI-NY was trying to get approval from the London office to foreclose on some of the loans. [redacted] was not cooperating with the bank's efforts to restructure the loans. [redacted] believes that [redacted] had someone at the bank that was keeping [redacted] apprised of the bank's activities. [redacted] recalled having telephone conversations with [redacted] wherein [redacted] would use the same words as [redacted] had used in a memorandum to the file two days before the telephone conversation.

[redacted] told [redacted] THE RIGHT CONNECTION COMPANY [redacted] also stated that he had other bills that needed to be paid and if the bank would advance [redacted] $50,000, he [redacted] would agree to and sign a restructured loan agreement. Originally, [redacted] had a list of several creditors that he wanted to disburse the $50,000 advance to, however he [redacted] later decided to pay the entire amount to THE RIGHT CONNECTION COMPANY. As a condition of the $50,000 loan, [redacted] b6 b7C pledged $100,000 of accounts receivable from the airline companies that were owed to the LaGuardia hotel. [redacted] verified the receivables and felt that the $50,000 loan was adequately secured.

The restructuring agreement was completed in March 1991. It provided for COOPERS & LYBRAND (C&L), a public accounting firm, to audit and monitor the cash flow of [redacted] b6 various operations. After signing the agreement, [redacted] flew to b7C India. Later, when auditors from C&L tried to conduct their audit procedures, [redacted] associates, consisting primarily of his brothers and brother-in-laws, denied the auditors access to the companies' books.

At the present time, C&L is compiling an accounting analysis for the civil lawsuit which has identified eighty (80) different bank accounts relating to [redacted] and his affiliated entities.

In November 1991, NEW YORK STATE BANKING DEPARTMENT (NYSBD) filed a Civil RICO lawsuit against [redacted] wife, b6 b7C ZURICH CORPORATION and P.S. INVESTMENT COMPANY. Representatives from the NYSBD and its outside counsel, went to the hotel located at LaGuardia to search for documents. At that time, the found [redacted] employees shredding business records. [redacted] recalled that the shredder was still in the box and just the top of the box had been ripped open in order to start using the machine. The NYDA's office helped NYSBD with the legal process in retrieving the documents at LaGuardia.

[redacted] has also learned of six (6) other boxes of b6 b7C records that were allegedly removed from the LaGuardia location with the help of one of the LaGuardia employees, to a relative of [redacted] who resides on Middle Island in New York.

One particular item found at the LaGuardia hotel during the search and seizure of records was an original contract dated August 1990 between [redacted] and [redacted] BCCI- [redacted] which stated that [redacted] was to be b6 b7C paid $12,000 per month for consulting services provided to

[redacted] During that time period, [redacted] was still employed by BCCI.

b6 b7C

After the problems with the [redacted] related loans surfaced and BCCI was attempting to rectify the situation, [redacted] associates started depositing checks into each others' spouse's accounts before writing checks back to their own wife's accounts, in an apparent effort to disguise the source and recipient of the funds.

b6 b7C

[redacted] believes that [redacted] and his associates may have "prepaid themselves" before filing for bankruptcy on the Raleigh hotel project in North Carolina. Also, it appeared that [redacted] associates did not realize that federal income taxes withheld from employee's paychecks are not dismissed under bankruptcy, and now they are trying to generate $100,000 in order to satisfy a claim filed by the [redacted] in connection with the bankruptcy filed for the hotel operation in Dumfries, Virginia.

b6 b7C b7E

[redacted] also learned that one of [redacted] law firms had faxed instructions to [redacted] advising how to document a transfer of funds from a corporation to [redacted] so it appeared to have occurred at an earlier date than it actually did.

b6 b7C

[redacted] is an attorney that has worked with [redacted] since the time the alleged BCCI informant told [redacted] that the bank was planning on foreclosing on [redacted] loans.

[redacted], SMALL BUSINESS ADMINISTRATION (SBA) was contacted at his office located at 677 11th Street N.W., Washington, D.C., telephone number [redacted]. b6 b7C

After being advised of the identities of the interviewers, [redacted] furnished the following information:

[redacted] is a contract employee for the SBA and tasked with [redacted] FALCON CAPITAL CORPORATION (FALCON), which was remanded to the SBA for liquidation by a federal court order dated December 17, 1991 in the Eastern District of North Carolina. b6 b7C

[redacted] explained that FALCON is a SBA Small Business Investment Company (SBIC) and as such, obtained loans from the SBA to loan to other small businesses. The court order (91-100-CIV-4-F) also awarded a judgement in the amount of $1,265,590.01. b6 b7C

The SBA was unable to locate FALCON's accounting records and identify the company's assets (loans) for liquidation. [redacted] learned that [redacted] representing ZURICH CORPORATION (ZURICH) was in possession of some of FALCON's company records. ZURICH is a company that is owned by FALCON's [redacted] (DR. [redacted]) In addition, [redacted] also determined that there were FALCON records at an accountant's office in Washington, North Carolina, as well as another [redacted] COX TRAILERS, INC. Through his efforts in reconstructing the company's assets for liquidation, [redacted] compiled a variety of records in an effort to identify FALCON's loan customers and the amounts owed. ADAMS provided a list of 32 borrowers with outstanding loans totaling $1,960,499.00. b6 b7C

[redacted] FALCON in approximately 1983 and provided loans to related parties and affiliates. [redacted] explained that the regulations governing SBICs loan policies did not permit the SBA funds to be loaned to the SBIC owners. b6 b7C

Dr. P.S. Prasad allegedly owes $34 million to BCCI — more than any other U.S. citizen. The bank's liquidator wants the money, but his lawyer says, "I don't think he'll be back here tomorrow."

A PASSAGE BACK TO INDIA

A Greenville psychiatrist heads home after dealing his way into the world of Milken, failed S&Ls and BCCI.

By David Mildenberg

Banker Kurt Lewin doesn't mince words about Dr. P.S. Prasad, a psychiatrist who gave up mending sick minds to cut slick business deals: "He was a con artist."

Nevertheless, Lewin understands why so many people were charmed by Prasad. "He had this facade that he was a good ol' Christian boy," Lewin says. "When he talked with you, he wanted you to think he was so sincere and friendly. But I always knew there was more to the book than the cover."

The book on Ponnapula Sanjeeva Prasad has a convoluted, twisted plot and many chapters, the last of which has yet to be written. Operating out of Greenville, an unlikely base for an Indian-born wheeler-dealer, he spent the '80s spinning a web of complicated transactions that brought him together with some of the most controversial figures in American business, including junk-bond king Michael Milken; crooked Texas S&L operators; and Bert Lance, Robert Altman and other key players in the scandal surrounding the Bank of Credit and Commerce International, better known as BCCI.

Because most of his major deals involved out-of-state businesses, he gained little notoriety in North Carolina. But his impact within the state was considerable: Prasad played a part in running a major North Carolina savings and loan into the ground, sticking two Tar Heel banks with more than $2.5 million in unpaid loans and destroying Cox Trailer Inc., a boat-trailer manufacturer that for 80 years was an institution in the tiny Pitt County town of Grifton.

Now Prasad's empire has crumbled, and even those investigating his affairs are unsure how much money he has. "He apparently just walked away from it," says Ernest Richardson, the trustee overseeing the Cox Trailer liquidation. "He's disappeared."

Treywick "Buzzy" Stubbs, a New Bern lawyer representing Prasad's company, says the 46-year-old psychiatrist is back in India with his wife and two daughters. They're evading angry litigants scattered across the country, including Derrick Cephas, New York's superintendent of banking, who alleges that Prasad fraudulently received $34 million in loans from BCCI — more than any other U.S. citizen — without any intention of paying it back. "There's so much flack here," Stubbs says, "I don't think he'll be back here tomorrow."

Many in Greenville still respect Prasad, who converted to Christianity before coming to the United States. They remember him as a generous supporter of Trinity Free Will Baptist church and his businessmen's prayer group. Few know much about Prasad, who attracted scant media attention.

Most tend to think that Prasad got overleveraged and stumbled trying to do too much.

"Whatever he told us, you could hang your hat on it," says Max Ray Joyner, a Greenville insurance-agency owner and former chairman of the defunct North State Savings & Loan Association, of which Prasad was a major borrower and stockholder. "He never cost [North State] any money that I know of. Highfliers reach a peak, and then they get bumped off. It happens all the time."

Others aren't so charitable. "He was a thief," contends Claire Sites, spokeswoman for the New York banking superintendent. "He owed more money to people than most of us will ever dream about in our lifetime." Adds Lewin, who worked for North State and its successor, Barclays Bank of North Carolina, from 1985 to 1989: "To say that Dr. Prasad's loans had no part in the demise of North State is like saying that atom bombs didn't end World War II."

Prasad liked to tell why he moved from medicine to mortgages, recalls Mike Allison, his pilot from 1988 to 1990. Back in the early '80s, Allison says, Prasad "was making $55,000 a year at Walter Jones [Rehabilitation Hospital] when he made a ridiculous, low-ball offer for a house on a Tuesday. For some reason, the sellers accepted his offer. So Dr. Prasad on that Friday agreed to sell the house to someone else. He made $70,000 on the deal, and he says he went home and told [wife] Indrani that he was in the wrong business. That's what started all of this."

Medicine was Prasad's ticket to the United States. After graduating from Gandhi Medical College in India in 1970 and completing a residency in Binghamton, N.Y., he came to North Carolina in 1974 to work at John Umstead Hospital, the state psychiatric hospital in Butner. Eighteen months later, he moved to Greenville, where he became clinical director of the 76-bed Walter Jones alcohol-rehabilitation center. Like many physicians within an hour's drive of East Carolina University's new medical school, he received a clinical faculty appointment that put him in occasional contact with students and professors. "As a psychiatrist, he was considered a perfectly ethical person," says Dr. James Mathis, former chairman of the psychiatric department at the ECU medical school. "But once he was into the business world, it was said you'd better watch yourself when you were around him."

As an Indian with a thick accent trying to help North Carolinians overcome alcoholism, Prasad was at a disadvantage, says Ken Walker, assistant director of the Jones hospital. "He was a knowledgeable fellow, but I don't think he understood the culture of Eastern North Carolina very well." Mathis recalls asking a patient of Prasad's how her counseling was going. "She told me, 'Oh, we're doing fine. But, hell, I can't understand a word of what he says.' "

According to Walker, Prasad's commercial real-estate investments started with a small Greenville office building where the doctor had a part-time private practice. "He rented out all of the offices, then sold it for a profit, and he got hooked. From there, he was on his way."

Prasad bought his first motel, in Wrightsville Beach, followed by one in Greensboro, then one near Jekyll Island, Ga., his former colleague says. He also spent more than $300,000 renovating and expanding his two-story brick house to more than 6,500 square feet. "At the time, when he was making a lot of money, I remember kicking myself for not having the money to invest with him," Walker says.

Mathis, too, almost got involved in a Prasad deal. "He once tried to sell me some land that sounded good but which I later learned was totally inaccessible," Mathis says. "And I think he knew damn well what he was doing."

In 1982, Prasad, then 36, left Walter Jones to devote full time to his investments. Though his personality was subdued, his ambition wasn't, associates say. "He was full of ideas on how to get rich, and he said he really wanted to help India," says Norma Doty, who went to work for Prasad on April 1, 1983, and served as his office manager for nearly eight years. He also wanted to help Greenville. "Once he was even audited by the IRS because they couldn't believe how much he gave to religious groups," Doty says. "But we had the checks that showed he had done all of this."

Because of the burgeoning medical school, Greenville real estate was booming. And Prasad didn't have to look far for financing. Formed in 1980 by a group of Greenville businessmen, North State Savings & Loan grew to $216 million in assets within four years by offering high certificate-of-deposit rates and acquiring thrifts in New Bern, Windsor, Wilson and Southern Pines. It was a classic, highflying early '80s S&L, paying above-market wages to lure attractive tellers from competing banks and providing company cars to more than two dozen employees. Forging a tight relationship with North State President William Reagan Jr., also in his late 30s, Prasad quickly became intricately involved in North State's business.

By March 1983, he had acquired 7% of the thrift's stock, worth more than $150,000 at the time. North State and Prasad became equal partners in North State Service Corp., a joint venture intended to combine North State's money with Prasad's skills at trading real estate. It was an instant success, reporting a profit of $1.37 million during the year ended March 31, 1983. North State's share totaled $695,772.

Since North State's net income that year was $504,497, it's easy to see why Prasad quickly became a golden boy to the board of directors. Without his deals, it appears that North State would have reported a loss. Without that reported profit, it probably couldn't have outbid a Kinston S&L to acquire First Colony Savings & Loan Association, a Southern Pines institution full of ill-advised loans on real-estate developments in South Carolina, Colorado and Florida. The disastrous $11.5 million merger in 1983, which doubled North State's size, led to its collapse by the following year.

"His deals had a very positive effect on North State initially," says Tony Gaeta, a New Bern lawyer who worked on North Prasad wasn't a long-term investor. "He only wanted to own things for a short period of time," Max Ray Joyner says.

State's acquisitions. "It was a time when all the S&Ls were diversifying and looking for ways to make money. And Dr. Prasad was a prominent, smart guy who brought in transactions that in the short term were very profitable."

North State executives shoveled money at Prasad about as fast as he could take it, adds Don Beason, who headed the state-chartered fund that insured the S&L's deposits. "In most of those deals, North State's management went looking for him," Beason contends. "It wasn't a case of where he was coming in the back door looking for money."

But long-term investing wasn't Prasad's style. "He was a trader," Joyner says. "He only wanted to own things for a short period of time." The short-term gains from Prasad's deals often turned into expensive, long-term problems. One of Prasad's early winners was the acquisition of a motel near Houston's Astrodome for $1.8 million. Less than a month later, North State Service Corp. sold the hotel to a group of Taiwanese investors for $3.3 million, says Lewin, who later investigated the deal. North State put the profit on its books, and Prasad came home a hero. There was just one catch: North State had lent more than $3 million to the new buyers, who eventually had financial problems.

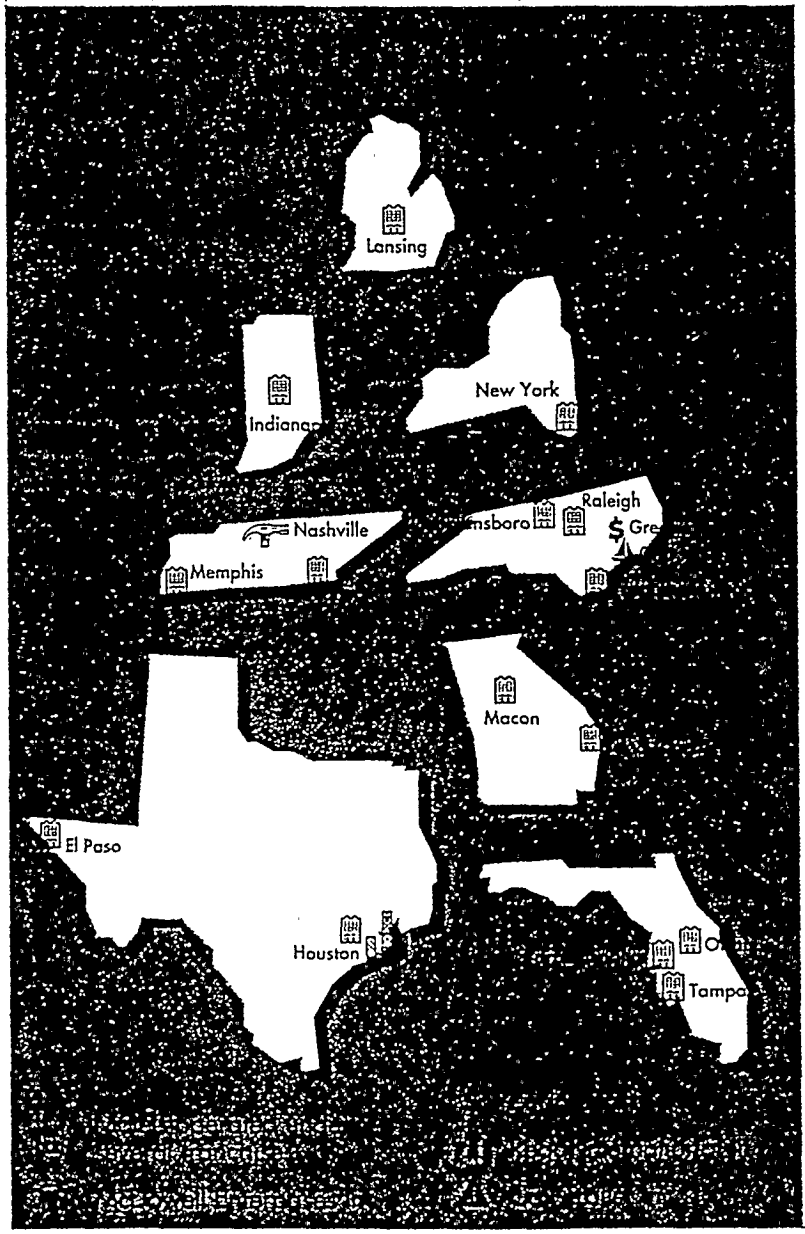
"This motel was 20 years old, and the deferred maintenance was terrible," banker Lewin says. "It was in Houston's Tenderloin district, and they rented out rooms by the hour. I remember the first time I saw the property at night, I said, 'I'm not going to stay there.' "

Nearly a decade later, however, people knowledgeable about North State's demise contend that Prasad's deals didn't hurt the S&L. "As far as I know, the dealings he had with North State didn't contribute to their losses," says Bob Jacobson, North Carolina's S&L administrator since 1989.

Beason also doesn't pin blame on Prasad. "I didn't feel like he was a crook," Beason says. "The business judgment of the deals was questionable, but at the time no one raised the question of Prasad's integrity."

Somebody should have, says Lewin, who later tried to collect on several of the loans that Prasad had arranged. "North State allowed Dr. Prasad to go into parts of the country that were light-years away from Greenville, buy a dilapidated, aging motel, then provide the financing for the flip." Barclays Bank, which took over North State in a deal arranged by state regulators, ended up losing money on Prasad-related motel ventures in Houston, Memphis and El Paso, Lewin says. The bank also has been unable to collect on a $450,000 judgment in Pitt County Superior Court against Prasad for other unpaid loans.



Prasad, however, emerged from North State with his reputation intact — and his net worth unharmed by the collapse of the S&L's stock. He told acquaintances that he had sold his shares long before they became worthless. More than $6 million of stockholders' equity was wiped out when Barclays took over North State's operations in 1986. The S&L's demise ended up costing the state's private insurance fund and Barclays more than $50 million.

North State had also lent Prasad $525,000 in early 1983 to acquire Falcon Capital Corp., a small-business investment company regulated by the Small Business Administration. Prasad used Falcon as a vehicle to help finance a variety of ventures. "He treated it as his own personal bank," Doty says.

Among Falcon's loans was $20,000 to Betty Williams, who with Mairead Corrigan won the Nobel Peace Prize in 1976 for their work in uniting Catholics and Protestants in Northern Ireland. By the mid-'80s, Williams was living in Florida and wanted to start a business that made Irish-style dolls. As collateral, Prasad asked her to hand over her Nobel award. "She felt very foolish for having to put it up as collateral," says Doty, who drove Williams to the Greenville airport after her meeting with Prasad. Williams later defaulted on the loan; the statuette is now in the possession of the state of New York, which claimed it late last year after seizing several of Prasad's businesses.

As for Falcon, it was placed into liquidation in April 1990, owing the federal government $1 million.

Not satisfied with small motel and apartment investments, Prasad yearned to be involved in larger deals. What got him interested in bigger hotels, Allison says, was the big profit he made from trading a Hilton Hotel in Lansing, Mich. "P.S. told me that the hotel had been on the books for $15 million, but he was able to buy it for less than $4 million," he says. "He only held onto it for six months, then sold it for 30% more than he had paid. And he also made $700,000 [in operating profits] while he was running it."

Then, in January 1985, he made his biggest strike: His Keystone Financial Corp. paid several million dollars for a 49% stake in McDowell Enterprises, a Nashville, Tenn.-based asphalt-paving and construction company with annual revenues of about $90 million.

In doing so, Prasad bought into a company listed on the American Stock Exchange that had lost money for four consecutive years. But the doctor was enormously proud of the acquisition, associates say. "To buy a publicly traded American company really made him something back in India," Doty says. Several of his associates say impressing people back home was important to Prasad, who boasted of his close relationship to the administration and family of former Indian Prime Minister Rajiv Gandhi.

But there was no turnaround in McDowell's fortunes, and the acquisition quickly soured. By September 1985, Prasad had installed himself as chairman and CEO and put himself and his accountant, William Zachmann of Washington, N.C., on the board. The losses continued.

By early 1987, Prasad had sold off McDowell's construction businesses and got into generic-drug manufacturing through a merger with a Long Island, N.Y.-based company called Interpharm. Reflecting the change, McDowell was renamed MaxPharma Inc., and headquarters was moved to Greenville. Prasad said the name change and move was intended "to rebuild [the company's] reputation with the financial community," according to a Nashville Banner story in 1987. That's not how Harry McMullen III remembers it, however.

"The business had severe operational problems that were a reflection of bad management, and it had ceased to exist by the time of the move," says McMullen, a Washington, N.C., native and Oklahoma City businessman who had accepted Prasad's offer to invest in McDowell in 1985. "I bitterly regret getting involved in that venture. It was very expensive."

McDowell stock, which once had traded for $17.75 a share and was in the $5 range when Prasad's group took control, became worthless. By 1988, control of MaxPharma had passed into the hands of wealthy Virginia developer Mohammed Hadid and John Roberts Jr., a Plano, Texas, S&L owner who later was convicted of bank fraud. On Nov. 15, 1990, MaxPharma filed for bankruptcy in federal court in Oklahoma City.

McMullen was also involved with Prasad in two Florida motel deals, including a Days Inn in Tarpon Springs on which he still holds a second mortgage. "My theory from having known him is that his original intent was to be a successful business person, but that as some things went wrong, he began using money from one place to pay a more pressing demand at another place," McMullen says. "It started out small and controllable, but ended up, as dishonesty often does, as a monster.

"I think it was a case of a basically good person who got caught in a bad situation and was unwilling to admit defeat. So he ended up causing 10 to 20 times as much harm as he would have had he stopped."

Like the North State collapse, McDowell's problems appeared to do little to slow down Prasad. On the contrary, the connections made through McDowell propelled him into a new, wider sphere of contacts and deals. It was during this period that Prasad twice attended the annual Predators' Ball, the gathering of financiers held in California by Drexel Burnham Lambert and Michael Milken, who is now serving a 10-year prison sentence for violating securities laws. Though Prasad talked with Drexel officials on several occasions, Doty says she doubts that he became part of Milken's network.

"Dr. Prasad was caught in the excitement of the time," former office manager Norma Doty says. "Yes, I think he became a deal junkie."

"Dr. Prasad was caught in the excitement of the time," she says. "With the deregulation of the S&Ls, people were fawning over him, and he thought he was becoming important, making deal after deal. Yes, I think he became a deal junkie."

McDowell also served as Prasad's entree to T. Bert Lance, a company director who had been Jimmy Carter's first budget director. According to several people close to Prasad, Lance linked Prasad to the complex, 62-nation BCCI operation. Several of Prasad's associates believe Lance introduced the doctor to officials of Atlanta-based National Bank of Georgia and Washington-based First American Bank, both of which were illegally acquired in the late '80s by BCCI. (Lance had sold the Georgia bank to Atlanta businessman Ghaith Pharaon, who later sold it to First American.) Lance, now a business consultant in Calhoun, Ga., could not be reached for comment.

Prasad often mentioned his relationship with Lance, who visited Greenville at least three times. According to a Dallas Morning News story last year, Lance had guaranteed a $3 million loan to Prasad from the National Bank of Washington. That loan was later assumed by Hadid and Roberts when they took over MaxPharma, the newspaper reported. The Washington bank, headed for many years by former NCNB executive Luther Hodges Jr., failed last year.

About the same time, Prasad began his relationship with BCCI's New York agency office, one of the three official U.S. offices of the bank, which was started in Pakistan and based in Luxembourg. In January 1988, BCCI lent $5.5 million to Prasad's PS Investments Inc. to acquire the 314-room Raleigh Inn, which had gone bankrupt twice since opening as the capital's largest hotel in 1973. After overseeing a $6 million renovation of the hotel and changing its affiliation to the Howard Johnson chain, Prasad sold the inn on Oct. 1, 1988, to Dallas-based Caprock Savings & Loan Association.

Less than a year later, in August 1989, Caprock was taken over by the federal Office of Thrift Supervision. The S&L was officially closed in September 1990 at an estimated cost of $299 million. Chairman and CEO George Dillman and director William Hatfield were convicted in March of bank fraud, misapplication of bank funds and money laundering. Both men are appealing the convictions.

Prasad's plan for the Raleigh hotel was the same approach that had worked dozens of times before, says Allison, who recalls flying Prasad to meetings with New York bankers on more than 100 occasions. "His thing was to buy a hotel where they said they were going to pull the franchise, do some minor renovations and put in new carpet and wallpaper and bedspreads and whatever it took to satisfy the hotel company, then sell it to somebody else," he says.

But Caprock's financial problems ended up costing Prasad heavily because he had received stock from the S&L rather than cash when the hotel was sold, Allison says. "He told me that he lost $762,000 in six months on that hotel." Providence Baptist Church now owns the property and uses the ballroom as its sanctuary.

The problems in Raleigh, however, apparently did little to change Prasad's style. That's because BCCI's New York office was pouring money into his operations, even though the loans weren't being repaid. Among BCCI's loans to Prasad during the next 18 months: $500,000 in May 1989 for a Ramada Inn in Chattanooga, Tenn.; $7.5 million in August 1989 for a Hilton in Macon, Ga.; $14.1 million in January 1990 for a Quality Inn next to New York's LaGuardia airport; and $500,000 in May 1990 for Cox Trailers.

Several of the loans were based on appraisals by Charles Smith of Durham. Andrew Tulloch, a consultant who investigated BCCI for the New York State Banking Department, said in a deposition in December that Smith's appraisals were "grossly inflated." Contacted in March, Smith said Tulloch's comment was "a gross misstatement" that showed an ignorance of the appraisal process. Smith based his appraisals on income projections submitted by Prasad, not comparable values of similar hotels. That Prasad's projections turned out to be wildly optimistic is not the appraiser's fault, Smith says. "It says in there that the appraisal is based on certain conditions," he adds. "If there's fraud involved, what are you going to do?"

Separately, Prasad came up with more than $2 million in February 1990 to acquire 45% control of Regal International Inc., a Corsicana, Texas-based drilling-equipment manufacturer. Speculating on a rebound in oil and gas drilling had little to do with Prasad's investment. Rather, the doctor picked Regal because it was the lowest-priced stock on the New York Stock Exchange, trading for about a quarter per share, and he thought the listing in itself was quite valuable, according to former business partner Gary Sharma. "Some company that isn't public might want to join Regal, which could significantly increase the value of the stock," says Sharma, an Augusta, Ga., businessman.

But Regal had lost money for eight consecutive years, and its annual sales had fallen from $22 million in 1981 to $9.8 million in 1990. Despite its puny stock price, Regal is held by more than 25,000 investors, most of whom received their shares when it was spun off in the early '80s by Texas International Corp.

There was no turnaround, however, as Regal continued to lose money. Compounding the problem, Prasad got into a fight with Ruben Aragon, Regal's CEO since 1986. Aragon resigned in January 1991 when Prasad's group ordered him to appoint an Indian to the management team, according to a letter Aragon sent to Regal's board of directors. Aragon later sued Regal for breaching his employment contract, leading to a $420,000 settlement last October. Then last year, Prasad gave up his interest in the company to Sharma, who had lent him $2.5 million, according to a Securities and Exchange Commission filing.

Staffing his hotels and companies with Indians was typical of Prasad. At its peak, the headquarters office in downtown Greenville employed about 15 people, including a couple of the doctor's relatives. His top assistants since 1988 were Vijay Dandapani, a graduate of Cornell University's School of Hotel Administration, and Mahesh Shetty, a certified public accountant who is now Regal's chief executive officer. Dandapani is back in India, according to several of Prasad's associates.

His operations were scattered all over the nation, but one of Prasad's final deals involved an old North Carolina business. Formed in 1903, Cox Trailer was a long-established manufacturer of boat trailers. But slow sales in the marine industry and conflict among Cox family members prompted the decision to sell. Oldest brother Bill Cox favored selling to a competing manufacturer in 1985, but he says his brothers Gerald and David nixed the idea. Four years later, with the business needing a capital infusion, they finally agreed it was time to get out.

One of his final deals was a Pitt County business started in 1903. Within two years, Cox Trailer was out of business, owing more than $4 million.

At the time, David Cox was taking flying lessons from Mike Allison, Prasad's pilot. Within a month after Allison mentioned to Prasad that Cox Trailer was for sale, the doctor had acquired the business. "He wanted it because of the name, which was highly respected," Allison says.

But other evidence suggests Prasad had little interest in making boat trailers. To acquire Cox in 1989, Prasad's Zurich Corp. borrowed $1.5 million from the Bank of Oman, a Middle Eastern BCCI affiliate that received a first deed of trust on the property. Six months later, according to bankruptcy court trustee Ernest Richardson, Zurich borrowed $2.5 million from BB&T — which received an identical deed of trust on the property. BB&T made the loan based on a deed of release showing that the Bank of Oman had given up its first-lien position. "I don't think there is any doubt that the deed of release was forged," Richardson says.

The forgery didn't stop there, however. Zurich based its loan application on an appraisal by Greenville real-estate appraiser Bruce Sauter. Trouble is, Sauter says his name was forged on a document that put the Cox property value at $2 million — double the value of his previous appraisal. "Someone took my appraisal, changed the cover sheet and made up a fictitious appraisal company, then forged my name," he says.

Meanwhile, Cox Trailer continued a Prasad business tradition: It flopped, closing in December 1990 with 400 trailers completed or in progress on site. The bankruptcy file lists total assets of $944,000, dwarfed by liabilities of $4.67 million, most owed to BB&T and the Bank of Oman. About 40 people lost their jobs.

BB&T made the loan to Prasad because of his excellent credit record at the bank during the previous decade, says Horst Vann, the bank's business services manager in Greenville. Prasad had owned the business for a year, and he had $500,000 in a BB&T account, Vann adds. That account has been seized, leaving BB&T out $2 million. All in all, it was another example of Prasad's superb ability to use other people's money.

"He was a practicing, licensed psychiatrist, and he was very, very good," Kurt Lewin, now a banker in Key West, Fla., says. "He had the capability of getting money. We tried chasing Prasad, and we tried finding the money, but we never could because he kept doing these leveraged transactions. I've spent hours thinking about it, and I'm sure there's a box somewhere with money in it."

Investigators for the state of New York have told Richardson that Prasad may have gotten away with as much as $25 million. That's nonsense, says Stubbs, Prasad's lawyer. He says Prasad's brother, Pasha, is now trying to raise money to resurrect Zurich, which is being reorganized in federal bankruptcy court in Raleigh. The company's main assets, hotels in Macon, Chattanooga and New York City, are being managed by a Florida-based hotel company.

Zurich was one of the many companies Prasad created for his holdings. Former employees say the doctor had a box full of corporate seals used in his ventures.

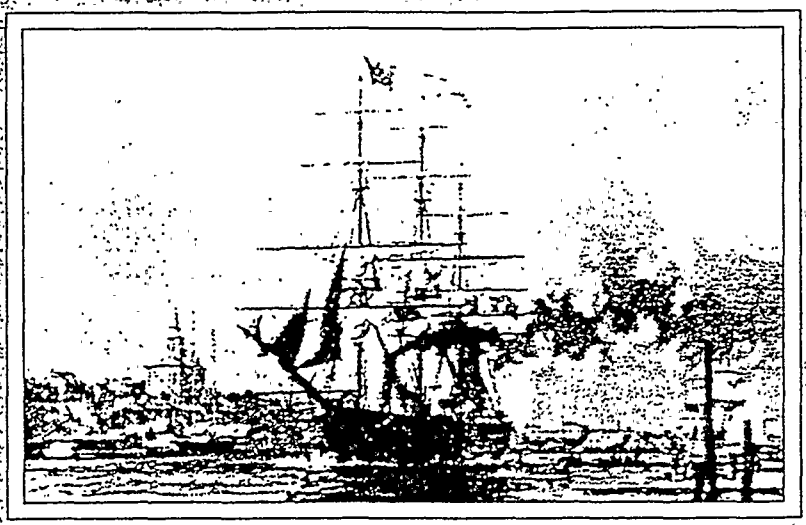
"I think [Pasha will] be able to get that [New York] hotel back again after the Chapter 11 reorganization," Stubbs says, adding that he expects Zurich to lose the Macon and Chattanooga hotels through foreclosures. New York regulator Cephas, however, considers the transfer of Zurich from Prasad to his brother to be a sham transaction. Cephas has sued Prasad under the federal Racketeer Influenced and Corrupt Organizations (RICO) Act.

Others who were close to Prasad question whether he made off with much money. Though she knows he had bank accounts in Switzerland, Norma Doty doubts if Prasad got rich off his decade of deal-making. "The last few months [until Prasad turned over his company to his brother in March 1991], he was a nervous wreck," she says. "I had a litigation file that was incredible, and we had law bills that were staggering."

The financial stress may have showed when his home — on which Prasad's brother held the title — was foreclosed, and Prasad moved his family to an apartment in Greenville. "They wanted to get away from people," Doty says, "but when you have two big Mercedes parked in front of an apartment it's pretty hard to hide."

Though his dealings proved costly to thousands of people and businesses, the doctor showed a more humane side. Last year, after Prasad had fled Greenville, he called Allison and asked, "Are you doing OK, my friend?" Allison told him that he was $400 short on a house payment. The next morning, a Federal Express package arrived with a $400 check, written on the account of the Days Inn in Tarpon Springs, Fla. ■

RISK MANAGEMENT SOLUTIONS
Since 1868



"Savannah," World's First Steam Ship Leaving Savannah, Georgia, May 20, 1819. From the Collection of Morris Newspaper Corporation.

Crossing the Atlantic in 1819, the 25 foot wide, 100 foot long, S.S. Savannah, became the first steamship to cross any of the world's oceans. This 30 day voyage secured the "Savannah" a place in America's maritime hall of fame.

Palmer & Cay/Carswell embraces the "Savannah" as a symbol of our southern heritage and a hallmark of our reputation for charting innovative risk management solutions for an increasing number of clients.

Synopsis: Requests reimbursement for expenditures made by the [redacted] in Ankara, Turkey, in support of instant investigation.

Administrative: Re telcall between SA [redacted] and Legal Attache [redacted] b6 b7C

Enclosures: Enclosed for SA [redacted] are copies of receipts obtained by [redacted] who provided investigative and administrative support for instant matter regarding a fugitive believed to be in Istanbul, Turkey. [redacted] worked with [redacted] in response to a lead set re instant. b6 b7C b7E

Details: Pursuant to re telcall, WFO is requested to facilitate reimbursement in the amount of $294.60 to [redacted] provided assistance requested by Athens [redacted] in support of a lead set by WFO regarding instant matter. b6 b7C

The original receipts are no longer available; however, receipts enclosed include those for individual expenses, to include $153.57 for room rental; $75.00 for the rental of a boat and crew; $23.40 for food served on board the boat; $25.20 for film developing; and $17.43 for the purchase of film, for which there is no receipt; for a reimbursement total of $294.60.

Current Legal Attache Athens has reviewed this matter and, while recognizing that this situation is unusual, believes that the reimbursement is both reasonable and justified. While it is the opinion of Legat Athens that these expenditures should have been incurred by [redacted] since they were at his request and in support of a Bureau investigation, it is also his opinion that every effort should be made to facilitate reimbursement in a timely manner. b6 b7C

Dear Ms. Lewis:

Enclosed is a S-Visa application which requires the signature of the United States Attorney from the District of Columbia.

The application is for [redacted], who is applying for the S-Visa in order that he may stay in the United States upon release from prison. Mr. [redacted] plead guilty and then was sentenced in the Bank of Credit and Commerce International (BCCI) investigation. Since his sentencing, Mr. [redacted] has been cooperating in identifying assets of BCCI which are then forfeited. b6 b7C

Mr. [redacted] should be able to continue to assist in identifying assets of BCCI. It is also anticipated that Mr. [redacted] would be able to provide testimony against Ghaith Pharaon, a fugitive in the BCCI investigation, should Pharaon ever be arrested and extradited to the United States. Further, the Federal Reserve currently has all of Pharaon's assets in the United States frozen and are estimated to be near $300,000,000. Of the $300,000,000 the United States Government has a claim against approximately $110,000,000. b6 b7C

The Department of Justice, Fraud Section, has requested that the Federal Bureau of Investigation (FBI) be the sponsoring law enforcement agency for Mr. [redacted] In addition to Mr. [redacted] request, his spouse and one of his sons still living in Pakistan are also in the process of applying for S-Visas. That paperwork is yet to be completed as the Legat in Islamabad is trying to obtain the necessary information. When their information is received, S-Visa applications will be completed and forwarded to your office for your signature. b6 b7C

Dear [redacted] b6 Per FBI b7C

Pursuant to our recent telephone conversation, I write with regard to the materials now in possession of the FBI that were obtained from Ghaith Pharaon during a search of his offices and residence in Savannah, Georgia.

As you may be aware, in 1996, after an extensive hearing on the merits, a $37 million penalty was assessed against Pharaon as the result of an action brought against Pharaon by the Federal Reserve. We have now begun the process of attempting to forfeit the penalty from funds that we have frozen in the United States. A federal District Judge recently allowed us to begin the proceedings that, we hope, will eventually allow us to obtain funds.

To this end, I believe that the materials in the possession of the FBI will be provide us with information that will assist in this matter. Therefore, I propose that the FBI provide the documents to us for our use in this matter. I would note, that we currently are in possession of other "Pharaon" documents that were originally in the possession of the FBI, but we turned over to us for use in our prosecution of Pharaon.

For your information, once the materials are received by us, they will be placed in a locked storage facility, within the Federal Reserve buildings in Washington. Access to this locked storage facility is limited to those individuals assisting in the Pharaon matter and controlled by me. I am in possession of the only key to this facility.

So that the record is clear, I have been accumulating, sensitive documents since the beginning of the BCCI investigation

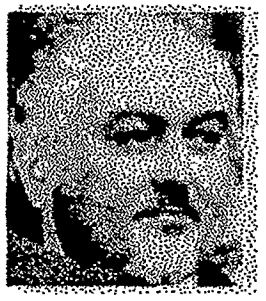
WANTED BY THE U.S. FEDERAL BUREAU OF INVESTIGATION and THE INTERNAL REVENUE SERVICE

Gaith Rashad PHARAON



DESCRIPTION: Born on September 7, 1940, in Saudi Arabia, Gaith Rashad Pharaon is a white male, 175 centimeters in height and weighing 113 kilograms. He is of stocky build with thinning black hair, graying at the temples. He normally wears a small pointed beard, but has been seen with only a moustache.

Pharaon is a citizen of Saudi Arabia and travels on a Saudi passport. He speaks Arabic, French, English, and some Greek. He smokes cigars, and wears traditional Arab clothing when in Saudi Arabia. In other countries, he usually wears Western-style business attire.

Pharaon owns a yacht named "Le Pharaon" with a picture of the Egyptian Sphinx painted on the stern. Its home port is believed to be London. Since 1992, Pharaon has traveled through Europe, North Africa, the Caribbean and Latin America, and Asia.

CASE DETAILS:It was one of the largest commercial frauds and the largest bank failure in history. The fall of the Bank of Credit and Commerce International, or B. C. C. I., took almost twelve billion dollars in depositors' money and left some two hundred fifty thousand unpaid creditors around the world. Thousands of families lost their life savings in the bank's collapse. B. C. C. I. officials and their agents are charged with bribing bank regulators and central bankers in Pakistan, Nigeria, Morocco, Senegal, Tunisia, Ivory Coast, Congo, Zambia, Argentina, and Peru. In some cases, B. C. C. I. funds were used to defraud lending agencies, including the International Monetary Fund.

In the United States, B. C. C. I. illegally purchased American banks and defrauded American investors and the U. S. Government. A key should be avoided. Should other information develop LEGAT ROME will be notified.

The purpose of this memorandum is to summarize my 6/3/93 discussion with DOJ Attorney/Advisor [redacted] and what has occurred since. b6 b7C

We discussed prospective questions to submit to the [redacted] ongoing debriefing of [redacted] b6 b7C b7D

[redacted] for [redacted] relating to the captioned matter, was sent to FBIHQ, DOJ, FBI Tampa and Denver, and to the USA, Middle District of Florida, where [redacted]

On 6/10/93, MDF AUSA [redacted] called to say he had received, reviewed and approved of my list of questions for [redacted] b6 b7C b7D

[redacted] per AUSA [redacted] is being only partially truthful (I agree), particularly with regard to questions about the relationship between Capcom and BCCI. She reasons that, if [redacted] tells the truth, i.e., that Capcom was just another arm of BCCI, then the liquidator can look to Capcom for money and records.

On 6/3/93, A/A [redacted] related a conversation he recently had with Wall Street Journal [redacted] in which he was told that [redacted] had provided FBIHQ SSA [redacted] b6 b7C

[redacted] with a copy of a 1986 document, purporting to be a proposal from [redacted] On 6/3/93, I contacted SSA [redacted] and learned that he had received such a document from [redacted] several months earlier and had turned it over to SA [redacted] on the BCCI Squad. b6 b7C

A/A [redacted] also heard from [redacted] had very recently been subpoenaed by the Senate Ethics Committee, apparently in re the committee's inquiry into whether [redacted] was bribed on behalf of BCCI by MOHAMMED M. HAMMOUD. On 6/4/93, I informed DOJ Fraud Section Trial Attorney [redacted] of what A/A [redacted] had said, and asked her if, as part of the [redacted] investigation (our Lead #45), she had sought the cooperation of the Ethics Committee. She responded that, as of 6/2/93, DOJ's Office of Legislative Affairs was finalizing a letter to the committee, requesting access to its witnesses and records. TA [redacted] also said she had requested that SA [redacted] analyze a "small amount" of subpoenaed Senate Credit Union records on [redacted] account, which, she says, appear to show several, large wire-transfers to that account from BCCI. b6 b7C

Next, in re Lead #73 (which seeks to determine what, if any, role BCCI played in the "Iran-Contra Affair"), we agreed to continue--and hopefully complete--our review of records at [redacted] during the week of June 14-18, 1993. Subsequently, I arranged wit [redacted] that A/A [redacted] and I will come there on 6/15/93. The [redacted] is researching a list of BCCI-related names we gave them to determine if any were "targets" of [redacted] collections. b6 b7C b7E

Also with regard to Lead #73, A/A [redacted] reported having learned from the OIC that the OIC had been unsuccessful in tracing the source of [redacted] money any further than its coming from BCCI/Monaco. I agreed to send a request to the liquidator, via the [redacted] to determine if the records of BCCI/Monaco are available. On 6/8/93, a letter with that request was sent. b6 b7C b7D

In anticipation of the possible travel of GHAITH PHARAON to Amman, Jordan, on 6/7/93, A/A [redacted] called DOJ OIA attorney [redacted] during our meeting to request that a reminder of the U.S.' interest in his capture and prosecution be passed to the Jordanian foreign ministry. [redacted] said she was aware that a diplomatic note--requesting Jordan to expel PHARAON if he should come there--had been passed to Jordan's foreign minister prior to PHARAON's last scheduled visit. She assured us that DOJ OIA would request the State Department to follow up with a reminder. As you will recall, 6/7/93 came and went in Jordan, but apparently PHARAON did not. As of 6/9/93, Legat Rome was b6 b7C still attempting to gather more information on what happened in Amman on 6/7/93; but it appears that the American Embassy's efforts to monitor the situation were stymied by several factors: the judge hearing the Jordanian civil case against PHARAON was away on a pilgrammage to Mecca, and had transferred the case to an unknown place; the "whole government" in Jordan had changed in the last ten days, leaving the U.S. ambassador to deal with a new, uninformed group of officials; and the added confusion of the Regional Security staff trying to deal with a death threat against the ambassador.

On 6/3/93, I informed A/A [redacted] of Legat Hong Kong's [redacted] b6 b7C b7D b7E

Laurence A. Urgenson has on his desk and is considering [redacted] request for a dismissal of the MDF charges, but is waiting "until all U.S. interests have been satisfied" before acting on the request. A/A [redacted] and I agreed that we should interview [redacted] at the earliest opportunity, at least about: his knowledge of and participation in the workings of the "inner circle" of BCCI management, otherwise known as ABEDI's "kitchen cabinet"; corruption matters; BCCI's role in intelligence-community activities; and [redacted] ability and willingness to approach ABEDI to ascertain whether ABEDI would consider a deal with the U.S., such as, immunity in the U.S. in return for complete cooperation regarding any U.S. subjects. A/A [redacted] says that, according to [redacted] is still close to ABEDI and could act as a facilitator for the U.S.

We also discussed and agreed that we should interview [redacted] when he has completed testifying in NY (which should occur sometime within the next two weeks). The purpose for the interview would be to ascertain [redacted] knowledge on the remaining areas of concern in the captioned matter, i.e., BCCI-related federal violations by U.S. citizens. b6 b7C

The purpose of this memorandum is to summarize recent events in the captioned matter.

DOJ Attorney/Advisor [redacted] informed me on 7/12/93 that a hearing would take place before Judge Joyce Hens Green at 2:00 p.m., 7/13/93, in U.S. District Court, WDC, on motions relating to the disbursement of funds in the trust holding FAB, et al. [redacted] trustee, have told ADAAG Urgenson and A/A [redacted] that they want to wait for the outcome of this hearing before allowing anyone to examine the documents on which the civil RICO suit recently filed by the FAB shareholders is based. b6 b7C

A/A [redacted] further reported that, during his review of [redacted] records for discovery in the New York case, he has found some information which relates to BCCI's participation in the "Iran/Contra Affair" and which may be of investigative interest in the captioned matter. When he completes the writing of the status report on which he is currently working for ADAAG Urgenson (to use in briefing the incoming AAG), we will review the [redacted] records. I reminded A/A [redacted] that, unless there is a discernable tie to the captioned matter, any investigation predicated by the information would be handled as a separate matter. b6 b7C b7E

With regard to our inquiry into whether BCCI had anything other than a passive role in the "Iran/Contra Affair" (i.e., Lead #73), A/A [redacted] and I plan to complete it by interviewing [redacted] and by finishing the reviewing of [redacted] documents. The interview of North should occur next week. b6 b7C b7E

The hearing on 7/13/93 was mainly on the motion filed by attorneys for Sheik ZAYED, et al, who, in seeking distribution of the proceeds of the sale of FAB, have petitioned the court to intercede by ordering the "clarification of the application for the trust agreement," i.e., by setting criteria for the trustee to use in deciding what debts FAB has are "bona fide" and to not independently investigate those debts. Under the terms of the trust agreement, "bona fide debts" are to be identified by the trustee, and are due and payable when he does so.

With regard to the ongoing attempt to gain the assistance of the Jordanians in apprehending GHAITH RACHAD PHARAON, a call to Legat Rome on 7/16/93 to ascertain whether PHARAON had appeared in court in Amman as scheduled on 7/14/93 was unproductive: the Legat had heard nothing. Legat [redacted] said he would check with the RSO and report by 7/19/93. b6 b7C

Subject: BCCI NOMINEES

Pursuant to our recent discussions about including, in the "things-to-be-done" section of your upcoming report, a subsection on seeking prosecution of certain BCCI nominees, please consider the following:

The FBI believes sufficient evidence is already in hand or is known to exist to require and support prosecution of certain individuals or corporate entities which served as nominees for BCCI in its admitted RICO scheme. Based on the precedent set in the pleas of BCCI-nominees [redacted] -i.e., each of them, or a corporation each controlled, plead guilty to one minor fraud count, and was sentenced to pay a multi-million-dollar fine--the FBI believes that the U.S. should seek indictments of, or in lieu of that, negotiate pleas with:

Re: WF airtel to NY, 8/10/93 (copy attached); My memo, dated 4/9/93 (copy attached).

PURPOSE:

[redacted] b7D

DETAILS:

Several weeks ago, DOJ Attorney/Advisor [redacted] and I began discussing ways of resolving the various, outstanding issues in the captioned matter. One such issue, the capturing and prosecution of extraterritorial fugitives--e.g., BCCI's founder and chairman, AGHA HASAN ABEDI--was seen as particularly troublesome. ABEDI, a Pakistani, who, in 1988, reportedly suffered a heart attack and, later, a stroke, is living in Pakistan and is in poor health. It is apparent from the lack of any response to DOJ's overtures that Pakistan has no interest in, or intention of, extraditing him to face the charges brought against him anywhere, including those in the 11/15/91 RICO indictment in Washington, D.C. b6 b7C

It should be recalled that WMFO and DOJ are in total agreement that further investigative efforts in the captioned matter should be directed at three goals: identification and prosecution of U.S. citizens, or others, who participated in BCCI's illegal activities in the U.S.; mounting successful prosecutions of those already charged; and the identification and forfeiture of any of BCCI's U.S. assets. In attempting to reconcile the ABEDI-situation with those stated goals, A/A [redacted] and I agreed that consideration should be given to approaching ABEDI to see if he would be interested in giving a proffer on which an offer to negotiate a plea and his cooperation might be based. b6 b7C

Based on the foregoing, SSA [redacted] (formerly the co-case agent on the captioned matter) and I have formulated a relatively-simple way to [redacted] b6 b7C b7D The plan would take into account several factors which we believe demand consideration:

(1) The above-stated goals for the captioned matter.

(2) The history of this case: arranging for and taking proffers from subjects and important witnesses has been a turbulent process, at best, due to the number of competing interests and attorneys and "investigators" involved, e.g., the Federal Reserve; District Attorney NY; USAs in Florida, Georgia, California, and WDC, not to mention our own DOJ Fraud Section; the British and the French.

(3) The need to protect sources and methods: this plan, if implemented, would strictly be an FBI operation, which would involve the use of two Bureau informants and two Bureau agents, operating internationally and, to a certain degree, clandestinely, in a potentially dangerous situation.

PROPOSAL:

With your concurrence and assistance:

(1) Consistent with the already-established line of communication with the lead prosecutor in the captioned matter (Acting Deputy Assistant Attorney General Laurence A. Currently, MC #38 is at a point where singular, inside information is required to identify, investigate and prosecute any U.S. citizens, who were/are culpable in any illegal, BCCI-related activities. Also at this time, MC #38 has several fugitives, all foreign nationals, who could provide such inside information and whose capture and presentation for U.S. trial is, at best, problematic. These fugitives include: AGHA HASAN ABEDI, the founder and chairman of BCCI, who reportedly is in extremely poor health in his native Pakistan; [redacted] a Pakistani who [redacted] BCCI, who presently is being detained in Abu Dhabi, by order of its ruler, SHEIK ZAYED BIN SULTAN AL-NAHYAN; GHAITH RACHAD PHARAON, a Saudi Arabian, who was a major BCCI nominee and whose exact whereabouts are unknown; and

The purpose of this memorandum is to update you on the status of the prospective travel to Abu Dhabi to interview witnesses and review records in captioned matter.

On 9/7/93, DOJ Attorney/Advisor (A/A) [redacted] reported that Abu Dhabi, through its U.S. counsel, PATTON BOGGS & BLOW (PB&B), has requested further information from DOJ Acting Deputy Assistant Attorney General (ADAAG) Laurence A. Urgenson on who would be coming there and what they would be seeking. (ADAAG Urgenson's consistent reply to this same question has been that we want unconditional access to all records and witnesses--i.e., the detainees. The issue ADAAG Urgenson has delineated as critical in the U.S. dealing with Abu Dhabi is one of culpability: Should the U.S. view Abu Dhabi's ruler, as well as some of its officials and institutions, as BCCI's conspirators or victims? b6 b7C

On 9/20/93, AUSA [redacted] said she had asked [redacted] b6 b7C

On 9/21/93, A/A [redacted] reported that ADAAG Urgenson has a meeting scheduled with DANY and PB&B on 9/22/93, on the question of dealing with Abu Dhabi. As far as A/A [redacted] knows, ADAAG Urgenson's position remains the same: the primary purpose for which law enforcement officials, e.g., the FBI, would go to Abu Dhabi would be to interview the detainees and other witnesses. If, from those interviews, it became likely that evidence of criminal acts or forfeitable assets was present in the BCCI documents currently located there, then a review of only relevant documents would occur--neither DOJ nor the FBI is contemplating doing a general review of all the BCCI records currently in Abu Dhabi. b6 b7C

Re my memo of 8/24/93.

The purpose of this memorandum is to summarize the meeting which ASAC Donald Thompson, SSA [redacted] and I had on this date with DOJ CID Acting Assistant Attorney General (AAAG) Jack Keeny, Acting Deputy AAG Laurence A. Urgenson and Attorney/Advisor [redacted] b6 b7C

AAAG Keeny and ADAAG Urgenson had reviewed A/A [redacted] 8/20/93 report on the status of the BCCI investigation. With regard to the recommendations which A/A [redacted] made in his report, it was their consensus was that, while "we (i.e., DOJ and the FBI) can't do all of them, we must do some of them." The latter included: completion of the reviews of [redacted] records and an evaluation of the results of those reviews; completion of the "European issues," i.e., the payment of costs for document-production in France, and the execution there of the searches requested in the existing, supplementary letters rogatory; interviewing detainees and reviewing documents in Abu Dhabi. b6 b7C b7E

It was generally agreed that both A/A [redacted] and I should and would be assigned full-time to the accomplishment of the remaining BCCI-related investigation. b6 b7C

A discussion ensued on the topic of how the remaining work on BCCI would be financed. ADAAG Urgenson reported that he had called the Asset Forfeiture Office that day about using proceeds from the Asset Forfeiture Fund to pay the obligation in France and to finance other investigation, e.g., a trip to Abu Dhabi. AFO's preliminary response was that the AFF could pay some, but not all, of the costs, and that the matter was still being researched. Our consensus was that all BCCI-related matters have either demonstrated or anticipated forfeiture potential, which should be a pivotal factor in AFO's decision.

ADAAG Urgenson reported on the status of matters relating to investigation in Abu Dhabi. DOJ's goal is to determine Abu Dhabi's culpability in the BCCI case. Accomplishment of that goal is critical to the disposition of both civil and criminal issues. The civil issues include the necessity of DOJ (1) responding to District of Columbia District Court on whether Abu Dhabi is a bona fide debtor in the dissolution of the trust which holds First American Bank, and (2) deciding whether to support or refute the FAB shareholders' RICO suit. The criminal issues include determining whether DANY can charge Abu Dhabi officials and entities. Currently, DOJ is awaiting a letter from the State Department (due 9/30/93) on the issue of "sovereign immunity," i.e., on the "prosecutability" of Abu Dhabi officials and entities.

In negotiations with counsel for Abu Dhabi, DOJ is currently demanding (1) that an index of documents in Abu Dhabi be provided; (2) that counsel be appointed for the detainees; (3) that certain documents be delivered for review to the Abu Dhabi embassy in WDC; (4) that all conditions be expeditiously met.

For its part, Abu Dhabi has offered to make the [redacted] documents and, possibly, [redacted] available. In fact, [redacted] could be extradited to the U.S. for prosecution; although it remains undecided whether DANY or DOJ would get to prosecute [redacted] first. ADAAG Urgenson's position was that, since DANY got [redacted] and CLIFFORD first, DOJ should get [redacted]. From an investigative perspective, [redacted] should be of assistance in matters, such as, political corruption (e.g., Sen. Orrin Hatch; [redacted]; the intelligence community's role vis-a-vis BCCI; and matters yet unknown. b6 b7C

On the issue of the DOJ's and FBI's participation in the prospective investigation in Abu Dhabi, ADAAG Urgenson was adamant in his view that, given the fact that both the FED and DANY will be going, DOJ "can't not go" (if for no other reason than that the authors of the Kerry Report will, at some point, want to know what DOJ did with regard to the items which Kerry identified as being worthy of further, criminal inquiry). It was agreed that it would be impractical, at best, to try to review all documents in Abu Dhabi--no matter what the actual number might be; that the roles of DOJ and the FBI there would be to first interview the detainees and (Abu Dhabi official) [redacted] and, from that exercise, to determine what, if any, documents should be sought. b6 b7C

Anticipated investigation at the [redacted] b7E

1325015-000-9051

ADAAG Urgenson reported having just learned from [redacted] at the FED that, on 9/2/93, [redacted] would be part of a group going to Casablanca, Morocco, to interview GHAITH RACHAD PHARAON. The group is to include an SA and AUSA from Miami on the CenTrust Savings Bank matter; [redacted] from the FED; and DOJ Fraud Section Trial Attorney [redacted] on National Bank of Georgia matters. ADAAG said he had condoned the trip on the understanding that those going had no authority to obligate or speak for DOJ in any negotiated settlement of the charges PHARAON faces. It was agreed that this was not to be a general debriefing of, or proffer from, PHARAON, as had been discussed with PHARAON's attorneys on an earlier occasion; that it was not necessary for WMFO to participate. ADAAG Urgenson was to continue negotiating for a full proffer from PHARAON.

Subject: HIDDEN INTERESTS;
MAJOR CASE #38;

OO: WMFO

Attached is a copy of a letter from the law firm of PATTON, BOGGS & BLOW (PB&B) to DOJ, dated 9/22/93.

The purpose of this memorandum is to summarize recent meetings with DOJ.

On 9/28/93, I attended a meeting with DOJ Acting Deputy Assistant Attorney General (ADAAG) Laurence A. Urgenson; DOJ Attorney/Advisor [redacted] New York County, NY, Assistant District Attorney [redacted] and Federal Reserve Board Special Counsel [redacted] The meeting was primarily for the purpose of discussing certain issues which affect the combined approach by DOJ, DANY and the FED to BCCI-related pleas and prosecutions: b6 b7C

(1) [redacted] is technically in default on his promised, 8/93 payment of $20 million. His attorney will be contacted.

There was some discussion about how [redacted] initial payment of $15 million had been parsed out: $3 million each (to defray the costs of investigations-?!) to DOJ, DANY and the FED; $4 million in a fine; and $2 million to the world-wide liquidator, [redacted] for the victim's fund.

(2) The still-upcoming trip to Abu Dhabi; particularly:
--the (attached) letter from PB&B to DOJ, et al, which essentially says that (a) they will deliver a copy of a requested document (a memorandum by [redacted] to the Abu Dhabi embassy for our review; (b) the index to the documents is incomplete, but they're working on it...; (c) the Abu Dhabi government must be diplomatically consulted and must approve both our trip and our examination of documents; and (d) we should be aware that "(t)he documents (we) seek and the witnesses (we) wish to interview are in most cases not within the direct control of the BCCI Majority Shareholders, who do not have the legal authority to provide this access...absent the acts of competent authorities." It should be noted that, in the propaganda put out by the "BCCI Majority Shareholders" in various media--often in the form of full-page advertisements in which they declare themselves victims of BCCI--they identify themselves as the royal family (i.e., Sheik ZAYED, et al); the Department of Private Affairs; the Abu Dhabi Investment Authority (ADIA); and the Government of Abu Dhabi. As both a gesture of good faith and a means of establishing the veracity of Abu Dhabi's insistence that it wants to cooperate, ADAAG Urgenson intends to send an all-encompassing, "civil-discovery"-type of request for records and interviews to the Abu Dhabi attorney general, independent of and in addition to any request made through PB&B.

--the date for the trip, which had been 10/16/93, is now projected for some unspecified date in early December, 1993. DOJ's stated priorities for its own people and the FBI are (1) the interviews of the detainees, including [redacted] and (2) locating and reviewing records, NOT from a general review of all 7 million-plus documents, rather, only those which are either selected from the index, or identified and described by the detainees. ADAAG Urgenson is adamant when he says that no one involved in the BCCI investigation should or will be asked to go to Abu Dhabi unless and until the document index has been received and reviewed, and believable assurances from PB&B or the government of Abu Dhabi have been received, indicating that our demands will be met. Contrary to what the attached PB&B letter says, however, [redacted] reportedly was told on the day of this meeting by PB&B attorney [redacted] that, after having been in Abu Dhabi for 15 days [redacted] had decided all was in readiness for our visit, and that our visit would not be like the recently-completed visits of the [redacted] in which the [redacted] representatives were not given any access to the detainees and only limited access to records.

b7D

(In my estimation, based on the work to be done [interviews of most, if not all, of the 17 detainees; and review of a portion of the millions of pages of BCCI records stored there) the FBI's contingent in Abu Dhabi should include 6 SAs, who should plan to be there for about a month: [redacted] LA; [redacted] MM; [redacted] AT; and from WMFO, [redacted] and myself.)

On 10/1/93, a meeting of what ADAAG Urgenson (who convened the meeting) called "the BCCI team" was held at the DOJ Fraud Section. The overall purpose of the meeting was to sufficiently assess the status of the various aspects of the BCCI investigation to enable ADAAG Urgenson to report to the members of DOJ's hierarchy who have to decide on direction and resource issues. In addition to FBIHQ FIFU Unit Chief [redacted] and SSA [redacted] and myself, DOJ-attendees included newly-appointed AAG [redacted] ADAAG Urgenson, A/A [redacted] as well as the chiefs and representatives of the Fraud Section, Asset Forfeiture Office (AFO), Civil Division, and Office of International Affairs. b6 b7C

The topics discussed related to issues remaining with regard to BCCI, including (1) criminal investigations (i.e., what A/A [redacted] and I have been doing, and matters relating to the fugitives); (2) asset forfeiture, particularly, the "L-claims" which DOJ may have to litigate, and what resources are available or would be needed in that eventuality; (3) DOJ's need to decide and declare whether Abu Dhabi was culpable in BCCI's scheme to defraud; (4) whether Saudi Arabia, due to the participation of [redacted] NATIONAL COMMERCIAL BANK in BCCI's scheme, should be pressed to participate in any "global settlement" regarding BCCI's criminal and civil liabilities; and (5) what the U.S. government's position should be vis-a-vis the civil RICO suit brought by the FIRST AMERICAN trustee against BCCI, Abu Dhabi, et al. b6 b7C

With regard to the criminal investigations, UC [redacted] SSA [redacted] and I each pointed out that the FBI's commitment of resources in BCCI-related matters should and would be dependent on the existence of discrete matters to investigate with the goal and likelihood of a federal prosecution resulting. However, I also made the point that there is a "political" side to this case, which dictates that, at some point, law enforcement must be able to say and prove that it took every logical step to discover and resolve all BCCI-related crimes in the U.S. We further made the point that it is necessary to proceed with such avenues as gathering evidence to support prosecution of the existing indictments should the government suddenly find itself with (for example) GHAITH PHARAON in custody. b6 b7C

In regard to PHARAON, the matter of the need for $100,000.00 to defray the cost of the production of records in France was discussed. It was announced that the Fraud Section had received a favorable response from the Asset Forfeiture Fund (AFF) in this regard. (A subsequent teletype from Legat, Paris confirms that OIA is seeking an invoice to pay. The making of this payment should unfreeze the French court from its position of not approving supplemental letters rogatory requesting searches of three PHARAON-related locations in France. You will be kept apprised of developments and resource needs in that matter.)

claims" numbering in the hundreds and varying in size from a few thousand dollars to Abu Dhabi's claim, which exceeds $91 million. The total dollar-value of the 40 L-claims in which litigation is still a possibility is about $160 million. Should U.S. District Court Judge Joyce Hens Green decide to order litigation in any or all of them, investigative assistance would be required. One claim--from Bangladesh, for $4 million--is likely to be litigated (to settle out of court would set bad precedent). Presently, AFO and the Civil Division are sufficiently staffed with attorneys, but they need at least one investigator to work on the Bangladesh and Abu Dhabi claims, and on some leads "of unknown value" which may lead to other forfeitable assets. Also, the claims-period just opened for the third forfeiture order, which relates to seizures exceeding $101 million. AFF Chief Administrator Lee Radek said he sees no reason why AFF would not provide financial support for any such investigation.

It was pointed out by AFO that, if successful in defending against all claims, the AFF presently stands to receive close to a billion dollars from BCCI forfeitures. Also, the BCCI case is setting nationwide-precedent: about half of all forfeiture case-law now on the books relates to BCCI.

DOJ is faced with the task of aiding Judge Green in deciding the questions of Abu Dhabi's standing as a bona fide debtor as it relates to the dissolution of the trust holding the proceeds of the sale of FIRST AMERICAN. Also before Judge Green and, therefore, DOJ and the U.S. State Department (USDS), are questions of whether Abu Dhabi's ruler, as well as certain officials and institutions, have such special dispensations as "head-of-state" immunity from criminal prosecution, or civil immunity as it relates to the trustee's civil RICO suit. As to whether Abu Dhabi is a "majority shareholder" in FIRST AMERICAN, the FRB is charged with determining what percentage of FIRST AMERICAN was owned by BCCI--which, at present, seems to have been about 72 percent. Abu Dhabi's various claims against funds under U.S. control are for (approximately): $220 million from FIRST AMERICAN in debts; $20 million in FIRST AMERICAN stock; and $91 million in the L-claim.

As to the Abu Dhabi trip, ADAAG Urgenson said the next projected date would be in or about the first two weeks in December, 1993. However, he is adamant that no travel should occur unless and until Abu Dhabi accedes to the U.S.' demands for unconditional access to witnesses and documents. DOJ will ask the USDS to deliver a "Civil-Rule-34-type" document demand to the attorney general for Abu Dhabi. Again, one primary goal for the Abu Dhabi trip is to provide DOJ with the evidence to determine Abu Dhabi's criminal culpability and civil liability (which, obviously, is closely tied to the question of whether Abu Dhabi should be judged to be a bona fide debtor), and ultimately, whether and how to negotiate some "global" settlement with Abu Dhabi (and whether Saudi Arabia's participation should be sought, due to the roles [redacted] NATIONAL COMMERCIAL BANK OF SAUDI ARABIA played with BCCI). The U.S. parties to such a settlement would be DOJ, DANY and the FRB, hence the need for all of them to participate in the Abu Dhabi trip. [redacted] of FIRST AMERICAN, [redacted] has asked to be included in access to documents and interviews, citing his belief that, by virtue of his position [redacted] DOJ is working on determining his legal status; but, for the moment, it would appear that the U.S. is paying the law firm of JONES DAY REAVIS & POGUE for its representation of the trustee in the civil RICO suit, with the money coming out of the proceeds of the sale of the U.S.' asset, FIRST AMERICAN.

This matter, which is "the BCCI case," was predicated on a criminal referral form, received from the Board of Governors of the Federal Reserve System (BGFRS) in 2/91, and which alleged that, at the behest of the BANK OF CREDIT AND COMMERCE INTERNATIONAL, Americans CLARK MCADAMS CLIFFORD [redacted] and a number of foreign nominees made false statements to the BGFRS that allowed BCCI to acquire, own and control a U.S. bank holding company, which in turn owned FINANCIAL GENERAL BANKSHARES, the predecessor to FIRST AMERICAN BANKSHARES. b6 b7C

This almost-three-year, complex, multidivision, international investigation has resulted in 5 indictments, including an outstanding RICO indictment in WMFO territory; 1 arrest; 6 WMFO felony, corporate pleas/convictions, which produced forfeitures now approaching $800 million (of which almost half was cash). Currently, WMFO is pursuing three goals: successful apprehension/prosecution of those already charged; identification/-prosecution of other U.S., BCCI-related crimes and subjects; and identification/forfeiture of BCCI's U.S. assets. Toward those ends, WMFO is:

(1) after 3 foreign fugitives: AGHA HASAN ABEDI (BCCI's founder and chairman, now in Pakistan); [redacted] (BCCI's [redacted] now in Abu Dhabi); and GHAITH RACHAD PHARAON (BCCI's leading nominee, now in Saudi Arabia). With regard to ABEDI, WMFO currently is receiving a his preliminary proffer, which will form the basis for further negotiations on a plea-and-cooperation agreement. b6 b7C

(2) seeking to review records and interview witnesses in Abu Dhabi, Luxembourg, France and Pakistan. Also, a continuing review of records at the U.S. [redacted] will likely result in a BCCI-related, spinoff, OOJ investigation. b7E

(3) assisting DOJ's Asset Forfeiture Office. One aspect is seeking to use Asset Forfeiture Fund resources to cover current and future investigative costs.

What really was the BCCI Entity?

BCCI was basically an international financial institution, designed and built by Pakistani bankers AGHA HASAN ABEDI and [redacted] on a foundation of OPEC capital from the UAE and Saudi Arabia; and used to rapidly build deposits on short-term, illicit transactions, i.e., money laundering and flight capital. Legitimate commercial- or investment-banking accounts formed only a small share of its actual business. The management command and control of the illicit financial, corporate structures was primarily in London, with major illegal operations being run out of and booked in Luxembourg, Panama and Grand Cayman. In 1990, BCCI's operations were consolidated in Abu Dhabi; in 1991, it was almost universally shut down.

Attached is a copy of the agreement which the U.S. Government struck with "the Abu Dhabi parties" on 1/8/94 in Geneva, Switzerland. The copy was provided by DOJ Attorney/Advisor [redacted] b6 b7C on 1/11/94.

The following is a summary of the salient points which impact on the captioned matter:

"The Abu Dhabi parties" are Sheik ZAYED; [redacted] b6 b7C the Abu Dhabi Department of Finance; Sheik ZAYED's Department of Private Affairs (DPA); the Abu Dhabi Investment Authority (ADIA); and the members of ADIA's board of directors. (Preamble)

By 4/1/94, Abu Dhabi will deliver all original, BCCI books and records in its possession, or under its control, to the "liquidating authorities," unless Abu Dhabi reaches "binding, comprehensive agreements" with such authorities. (P.1, par. #2)

The Abu Dhabi parties agree to "cooperate fully" with ongoing state and federal investigations into violations of U.S. laws, and the U.S. agrees to "assist" the law enforcement authorities of the U.A.E. in their investigation. (P.3ff, par. #3) "Cooperation" defined as using all available, legal means to produce requested records and persons, and initially includes:

(a) the so-called [redacted] private records), in the U.S., within 45 days; b6 b7C
(b) access, starting 2 weeks after 1/8/94, to all detainees and other witnesses in Abu Dhabi;
(c) immediate access to all BCCI records in Abu Dhabi;
(d) [redacted] being turned over to the U.S. within 120 days to face charges.

The Abu Dhabi parties further agreed to renounce, by 1/22/94: (P. 9ff, par. #4)

(a) claim to (approximately $93 million in) forfeited funds from ICIC INVESTMENTS;
(b) all rights, claims and indebtedness of CCAH;
(c) all right, title and interest in shares of CCAH capital stock, to allow the Fed to establish a "restitutionary fund," to benefit innocent depositors, creditors and others who suffered losses at the hands of BCCI (none of which would, at any point, revert to Abu Dhabi).

The Abu Dhabi parties are immune from further U.S. civil or criminal actions, unless the agreement is "breached" (P. 12ff, par.#8), e.g.:

(a) [redacted] or his documents are not delivered on time; b6 b7C
(b) timely access not given to records or persons in Abu Dhabi;
(c) Abu Dhabi does not renounce titles and claims, as specified.

If the Abu Dhabi parties "unintentionally" renege on the agreement to provide records and persons, the U.S. parties may demand that they be brought to the U.S. within ten days after written notification. If a "willful and intentional violation" occurs, the Abu Dhabi parties will be liable for a payment of $5 million for each violation, up to a maximum of $100 million, into the "restitutionary fund."

For its part, the FIRST AMERICAN CORPORATION trustee agrees to settle its civil RICO suit against the Abu Dhabi parties within 14 days.

To avoid the issue of "sovereign rights," members of the Abu Dhabi royal family will not be required to appear personally.

AGREEMENT

This Agreement dated January 8, 1994, including Exhibits A-E attached hereto and incorporated by reference herein, embodies all promises, understandings, and agreements in existence among the Abu Dhabi parties (as defined below), the United States Department of Justice ("DOJ"), the New York County District Attorney's Office ("DANY"), and the Board of Governors of the Federal Reserve System ("Board"), and certain promises, understandings and agreements with First American Corporation ("FAC"), the trustee of FAC appointed by the United States District Court for the District of Columbia pursuant to the Order Appointing Trustee entered June 23, 1992 ("FAC Trustee"), and First American Bankshares, Inc. ("FAB") regarding the hereinafter described matters related to BCCI. The "Abu Dhabi parties" are the following: (i) H.H. Sheikh Zayed bin Sultan Al-Nahyan, (ii) H.H. Sheikh Khalifa bin Zayed Al-Nahyan, (iii) H.H. Sheikh Sultan bin Zayed Al-Nahyan, (iv) H.H. Sheikh Mohammed bin Zayed Al-Nahyan, (v) Abu Dhabi Department of Finance, (vi) the Department of Private Affairs of Sheikh Zayed bin Sultan Al-Nahyan ("DPA"), (vii) Abu Dhabi Investment Authority ("ADIA"), and (viii) the members of the Board of Directors of ADIA, as set forth in Exhibit A hereto.

1. This Agreement relates to a series of entities that became known as the Bank of Credit and Commerce International. These entities grew rapidly through the 1970's and 1980's under the management of Agha Hasan Abedi [redacted] and, as ultimately structured, comprised the BCCI Holdings (Luxembourg),

S.A., Bank of Credit and Commerce International, S.A., Bank of Credit and Commerce International (Overseas) Ltd., ICIC Apex Holding, Ltd., International Credit and Commerce Company (Overseas, Ltd., and/or any one or more of either of their direct and indirect affiliates, subsidiaries, or parent companies (all of which entities are hereinafter, for purposes of this Agreement only, collectively referred to as "BCCI"). Fraud and criminal conduct were involved in the operations of BCCI, and in 1991, BCCI was closed. The illicit activities and the circumstances that led to the closure of BCCI have become known (and are referred to herein) as "the BCCI affair."

2. The Abu Dhabi parties are entering into this Agreement because of their concern for victims of the BCCI affair and in furtherance of their desire to cooperate with and to assist DOJ, DANY and Board in matters relating to the BCCI affair. In addition to their own severe financial losses, the Abu Dhabi parties recognize that numerous innocent individuals and entities worldwide have suffered substantial economic losses, and agree to cooperate further with DOJ, DANY and Board in an effort to make accountable those persons responsible for such losses. Accordingly, the Abu Dhabi parties, at their expense, shall deliver or cause to be delivered without conditions, by April 1, 1994, to designated representatives of the court-appointed liquidators of the Bank of Credit and Commerce International, S.A. in Luxembourg and in England, the court-appointed liquidators of BCCI Holdings (Luxembourg), S.A. in Luxembourg, and the court-appointed liquidators of the Bank of Credit and Commerce International (Overseas) Limited in the Cayman Islands ("Liquidating Authorities"), at their request, all of the original books and records of BCCI that are within their collective or individual, actual or constructive possession, custody, or control. Such delivery of documents to the Liquidating Authorities shall not be necessary if, by April 1, 1994, the Abu Dhabi parties reach binding comprehensive agreements with the Liquidating Authorities (which are conditioned only upon the Liquidating Authorities' obtaining any court approvals that they require to enter into such agreements). In the case of documents relating to or property of the United Arab Emirates branches of BCCI, it shall be sufficient for the Abu Dhabi parties to deliver copies.

3. The Abu Dhabi parties further are entering into this Agreement with the intent to and in order to cooperate fully with the ongoing investigations by United States federal and state law enforcement and regulatory agencies of violations of United States laws and regulations relating to the BCCI affair, and shall cooperate in those investigations. In addition, the Government of the United States will assist the law enforcement authorities of the United Arab Emirates with respect to the latter's ongoing investigations in connection with the BCCI affair. "Cooperate" means, in connection with the investigations of DOJ, DANY, and Board into violations of United States federal and state laws and regulations relating to the BCCI affair, (i) to use best and all available legal efforts and means to produce (or cause to be produced) to DOJ, DANY, and Board any investigative information that is within the control of the relevant person, entity or party, or within the custody or control of third persons, entities or parties and (ii) to use best and all available legal efforts and means, in consultation with DOJ, DANY, and Board, and to the maximum extent practicable (taking into account the legal rights and obligations of the persons concerned), to persuade and facilitate the appearance of any person requested by DOJ, DANY or Board to testify in any duly convened grand jury, court, or other criminal, investigative, or administrative proceeding, or to facilitate alternative testimonial arrangements. "Investigative information" means documents, records, tangible evidence or other information in whatever media they might exist, including, but not limited to, paper, microfilm, microfiche, computer disks or other media (but not privileged documents) relevant to the investigations by DOJ, DANY, and Board into violations of United States federal and state laws and regulations. The Abu Dhabi parties shall consider the waiver of attorney-client and work product privileges in respect of documents that might assist in the prosecutions of third parties for violations of United States federal and state laws and regulations relating to the BCCI affair, on a case-by-case basis. For the avoidance of doubt, nothing in this Agreement constitutes any contractual obligation on the part of the Abu Dhabi parties to waive any privileges. "Produce . . . investigative information" means for purposes of DOJ, DANY, or Board investigations into violations of United States federal or state law or regulations, (i) to grant access to investigative information to DOJ, DANY or Board, (ii) to provide copies of investigative information to DOJ, DANY, or Board, and (iii) to make available originals of investigative information, where practicable, to DOJ, DANY, or Board, all at the expense of the party or parties producing the investigative information. DOJ, DANY, and Board have no objection to the retention of copies by the Abu Dhabi parties of any documents delivered or produced under this Agreement. The custodian of any original documents under this Agreement shall provide certified copies when so requested. The cooperation of the Abu Dhabi parties in the investigations of DOJ, DANY, and Board into violations of United States federal or state law or regulations relating to the BCCI affair shall include the following:

(a) The Abu Dhabi parties shall deliver (or cause to be delivered) to Board copies of the Naqvi documents, as described in Exhibit E, at the cost and expense of the Abu Dhabi parties, within 45 days of the effective date of this Agreement; provided that in the event that copies of all Naqvi documents have not been physically able to have been copied within such 45-day period, copies of all Naqvi documents then available shall be timely delivered and copies of other Naqvi documents shall be delivered as promptly as possible thereafter.

(b) The Abu Dhabi parties acknowledge that the judicial authorities of the United Arab Emirates have the legal power, ability, and authority to provide access in Abu Dhabi to the former officials of BCCI that are in the custody of United Arab Emirates authorities, namely the persons set forth in Part 1 of Exhibit B hereto, in order that DOJ, DANY, or Board may speak to them, privately or in the presence of their counsel, in the United Arab Emirates, and to provide copies of all statements made or given by such persons in connection with the BCCI affair. The Abu Dhabi parties covenant and agree that they shall, commencing within fourteen days of the effective date of this Agreement, cause the judicial authorities of the United Arab Emirates to provide to DOJ, DANY and Board such access to those persons listed in Part 1 of Exhibit B and to use best and all available legal efforts to provide such access to the persons listed in Part 2 of Exhibit B.

(c) The Abu Dhabi parties covenant and agree to provide access in Abu Dhabi and shall produce (or cause to be produced) expeditiously, beginning with the effective date of this Agreement to DOJ, DANY, and Board any books and records of BCCI that are within their collective or individual, actual or constructive possession, custody, or control.

(d) In relation to investigative information not constituting the books and records of BCCI that is within the collective or individual, actual or constructive possession, custody, or control of the Abu Dhabi parties and in connection with the investigations of any violation of any United States federal or state law or regulation relating to the BCCI affair that are being pursued by DOJ, DANY, or Board, the Abu Dhabi parties shall (i) provide access expeditiously, beginning with the effective date of this Agreement, to DOJ, DANY and Board in Abu Dhabi and (ii) shall produce (or cause to be produced) expeditiously, beginning with the effective date of this Agreement, to DOJ, DANY and Board investigative information that is material to such investigations. To the extent that the Abu Dhabi parties dispute a DOJ, DANY, or Board request for a copy of or removal of any documents, records, tangible evidence or other information ("disputed information") that are not the books and records of BCCI, said dispute shall be submitted to the Attorney General of the United States of America and the District Attorney of the County of New York, State of New York for determination, and the concurrence of both shall be required for a finding that the disputed information is material to an investigation by DOJ, DANY, or Board of a violation of United States federal or state law or regulation.

(e) Naqvi is presently on trial in the United Arab Emirates for crimes alleged to have been committed by him, and he has also been indicted in the United States. The Abu

Dhabi parties wish to facilitate his speedy trials. Accordingly, the Abu Dhabi parties covenant and agree that, within 120 days of the effective date of this Agreement, the Abu Dhabi parties shall deliver or cause to be delivered Naqvi to the United States to face charges there. The Abu Dhabi parties will make arrangements in accordance with United Arab Emirates law, and in consultation with DOJ, DANY and Board, for Naqvi's physical removal and transfer into the United States. At the conclusion of any United States federal and state criminal or regulatory proceedings, including service of any sentence imposed, and provided that his presence is no longer required by United States federal or state law enforcement or regulatory authorities, Naqvi will be returned by the United States to the United Arab Emirates, subject to applicable United States law and treaties. While he is in the United States, DOJ, DANY, and Board agree to make Naqvi available to the Abu Dhabi parties for interviews or depositions in the United States, subject to any legally applicable privileges under United States law.

In the event that any person should attempt by any legal process, to obtain from DOJ, DANY or Board any investigative information or other documentation provided to DOJ, DANY, or Board under this Agreement by the Abu Dhabi parties, DOJ, DANY or Board shall promptly notify the Abu Dhabi parties of such attempt and, with respect to such investigative information or documentation shall, to the extent permitted by law, refrain from complying with such request or process until the Abu Dhabi parties have had an opportunity to be heard and to take whatever procedural or administrative steps may be open to them to prevent production of such materials.

4. To further assist victims of the BCCI affair, the Abu Dhabi parties agree to do the following by January 22, 1994:

(a) file a notice of withdrawal of the claim submitted on or about September 8, 1992, pursuant to 18 U.S.C. section 1963(l) by DPA in connection with the forfeiture of monies of ICIC Investments Limited in connection with U.S. v. BCCI Holdings (Luxembourg), SA et al.;

(b) release, assign to the debtor, or voluntarily discharge in a manner acceptable to the debtor and the Abu Dhabi parties, all rights, claims and indebtedness of the Abu Dhabi parties arising from the following debt instruments: (1) Credit and Commerce American Holdings, N.V. ("CCAH") convertible debentures; (2) loans to CCAH; (3) loans to FAC; (4) FAB senior notes; and (5) rights in the balance of a loan from Banque Arabe et Internationale d'Investissement to FAC, as further described in Exhibit C;

(c) assign and transfer (except for voting rights, which shall remain with the registered owners but which shall be exercised only in accordance with joint instructions to be provided by DOJ and DANY) all right, title, and interest of the Abu Dhabi parties in the shares of capital stock of CCAH, identified in Exhibit D annexed hereto, to the Federal Reserve Bank of New York ("Reserve Bank"), as agent of Board to be used to establish a restitutionary fund pursuant to 12 U.S.C. Section 1818(b), in accordance with the terms and conditions set forth in paragraphs 5-7, infra, and provide whatever documents are necessary to accomplish such a transfer under the laws of the Netherlands Antilles, so that such CCAH shares are delivered to the Reserve Bank in good deliverable form. The Abu Dhabi parties assert that they have no legal or equitable interest in any CCAH shares of capital stock owned of record by Burford Investments, Ltd. ("Burford"), or in any Burford shares, and that they will make no claim of any interest in such shares. The Abu Dhabi parties agree, however, to assign and transfer unconditionally what interest they have, if any, in any such shares to the Reserve Bank.

5. As soon as practicable, Board shall:

(a) cause Reserve Bank to surrender the CCAH stock transferred pursuant to paragraph (4)(c), supra, in return for a pro rata distribution of cash resulting from the sale or liquidation of CCAH's subsidiaries;

(b) cause Reserve Bank to establish an account to be owned by Board to be titled "Board of Governors Account A," which shall be funded with the cash proceeds derived from the CCAH stock referred to in paragraph (4)(c); and

(c) cause Reserve Bank to invest the balance in Board of Governors Account A in United States Treasury Securities and/or overnight repurchase agreements for so long as there is a balance in the Board of Governors Account A. The earnings from such investments shall be credited to the Board of Governors Account A.

6. The Board shall distribute the balance in Board of Governors Account A to FAC and Liquidating Authorities, with FAC being paid first, when funds become available, in the amount of $50 million less any amount received or to be received by FAC as a result of a distribution from B/G Settlement Account No. 1 created December 24, 1993, and the balance to the Liquidating Authorities when Board receives written notice from DOJ and DANY that the following events have occurred:

(a) a binding comprehensive agreement regarding the BCCI affair has been reached between the Abu Dhabi parties and the Liquidating Authorities; and

(b) the Liquidating Authorities have established, to the satisfaction of DOJ and DANY, reasonable procedures which are consistent with the laws of the countries governing distributions by the Liquidating Authorities and are designed to assure that the recipients of funds paid from Board of Governors Account A shall be limited to innocent depositors, creditors and other persons who suffered loss arising from the activities of BCCI, and who did not themselves participate in criminal, illegal, or wrongful behavior in connection with the affairs of BCCI.

In the event such written notice is not received by Board on or before January 1, 1995, the balance in Board of Governors Account A shall promptly be distributed to or for the benefit of the depositors and creditors of BCCI (other than the Abu Dhabi parties) on the instructions of DOJ, DANY and Board.

7. With respect to the balance in Board of Governors Account A, the Abu Dhabi parties waive their right to receive any pro rata distribution of funds paid out of Board of Governors Account A to which they would be entitled to as a result of the liquidation of BCCI, and agree to execute any document that is reasonably requested as evidence of the waiver, provided that nothing contained in this Agreement is intended by the Abu Dhabi parties as a waiver of any claim that any of the Abu Dhabi parties may otherwise have against any company or entity that is a part of BCCI, except as set forth in paragraph 10.

8. DOJ, DANY and Board agree that none of them will seek or pursue any prosecution of, or initiate any civil or administrative proceeding against, any of the Abu Dhabi parties arising from the facts and circumstances of the BCCI affair, unless this Agreement is breached by the Abu Dhabi parties. For the purposes of this paragraph, a breach giving rise to the loss of the assurances set forth herein shall be limited to the following specific circumstances:

a) failure timely to deliver the Naqvi documents in accordance with the provisions of paragraph 3(a);

b) failure timely to provide access to those individuals in the custody of the United Arab Emirates authorities in accordance with paragraph 3(b);

c) failure timely to deliver Naqvi pursuant to paragraph 3(e);

d) failure to satisfy the provisions of paragraph (2); and

e) failure to satisfy the provisions of paragraph 4(a) through (c).

In order to insure that the Abu Dhabi parties will satisfy the provisions of paragraphs 3(c) and 3(d) of this Agreement, the Abu Dhabi parties covenant and agree that:

a) the Foreign Minister of the Government of the United Arab Emirates will provide formal assurances to the Government of the United States that the Abu Dhabi parties will honor and perform fully and completely their obligations under paragraphs 3(c) and 3(d);

b) if the Abu Dhabi parties, individually or collectively, commit an unintentional violation of any obligation imposed by paragraphs 3(c) or 3(d) requiring the production of documents, DOJ, DANY, or Board, as the case may be, will be entitled to the delivery in the United States, if requested, of any and all investigative information described in paragraphs 3(c) or 3(d), respectively, so long as the request of DOJ, DANY, or

Board is bona fide and is for specific documents and such violation continues for ten days after receipt by the Abu Dhabi parties of written notice from DOJ, DANY or Board;

c) if the Abu Dhabi parties, individually or collectively, commit a willful and intentional violation of any commitment imposed by virtue of paragraphs 3(c) or 3(d), the Abu Dhabi parties will be liable for a payment in the nature of liquidated damages in the sum of $5 million per violation, but in no event in excess of $100 million in the aggregate, and DOJ, DANY, or Board, may enforce this covenant and agreement by an action brought before the Supreme Court of the State of New York, New York County, if the enforcing party is DANY, or by an action in the United States District Court for the District of Columbia, if the enforcing party is DOJ or Board; provided that in such an action DOJ, DANY, or Board, as the case may be, shall be required to prove the violation by clear and convincing evidence and the parties agree that if a willful and intentional violation is proved, the court shall direct the payment to the Board of Governors Account A established under paragraph 5(b) of this Agreement.

9. The parties agree to a tolling of any applicable statute of limitations as of the effective date of this Agreement, to the extent that such is within their power, as to criminal and civil matters or actions that may be brought by any party in accordance with the terms of this Agreement.

10. Based on information currently available, DoJ, DANY, and the Board acknowledge and confirm the bona fides of the indebtedness to the Abu Dhabi parties referenced in paragraph 4(b) of this Agreement, and FAB, FAC, and the FAC Trustee, in furtherance of this Agreement, agree not to dispute same. In exchange for the agreements and commitments made by the Abu Dhabi parties in paragraph 4 hereof, FAC and FAB agree, as provided below, to settle the civil lawsuit filed by FAC and FAB in the United States Court for the District of Columbia with respect to all of the Abu Dhabi parties. FAC, FAB and the Abu Dhabi parties agree to negotiate in good faith and to enter into a separate settlement agreement that will provide for (1) the dismissal with prejudice and without costs of that lawsuit as to the Abu Dhabi parties, and (2) customary mutual general releases as to any and all claims by the parties to this Agreement against each other and corporate affiliates, officers, directors and agents to be defined in the settlement agreement, which settlement agreement will be filed with said Court within fourteen days after the effective date of this Agreement. In addition, FAC and FAB agree to cooperate reasonably in the efforts of the Abu Dhabi parties to relieve the DPA of its obligations pursuant to certain outstanding indemnity agreements (and related escrow agreement). Until such settlement agreement is executed and effective, nothing contained in this paragraph 10 shall be deemed a waiver of any claim or defense that FAC, FAB or any of the Abu Dhabi parties may have against each other.

11. To avoid raising issues regarding the sovereign rights of the Abu Dhabi parties, DOJ, DANY, and Board agree that notwithstanding any other provision of this Agreement no member of the Abu Dhabi Ruling Family (the Al-Nahyan Family) will be required by DOJ, DANY, and Board to appear personally in connection with this Agreement. In addition, with respect to personal appearances by representatives of the Abu Dhabi Ruling Family or officials of the Abu Dhabi Government and the United Arab Emirates Government in connection with this Agreement, DOJ, DANY and Board agree to take into account and give consideration to the responsibilities and official duties of such persons. The Abu Dhabi parties agree to pay the costs incurred with respect to any personal appearances by representatives of the Abu Dhabi Ruling Family or officials of the Abu Dhabi Government and the United Arab Emirates Government in connection with this Agreement.

12. Any of the terms or conditions of this Agreement may be waived only in writing by the party entitled to the benefit thereof, but no such waiver shall affect or impair the right of the waiving party or parties to require observance, compliance, performance or satisfaction of any other term or condition hereof.

13. No amendments to this Agreement shall be effective unless made in writing and signed by all parties. No representations, either orally or in writing, except those contained expressly in this Agreement, were made to induce any of the parties to enter into this Agreement. All prior negotiations, oral and written, are merged in this Agreement. Absent a breach of this Agreement, neither this Agreement nor any provision thereof or any act taken or caused to be taken by any of the parties in performance of its obligations under this Agreement shall be used by or against any of the parties or be admissible as evidence of any wrongdoing or liability by or against any of the parties in any legal or regulatory proceeding.

14. This Agreement is by way of settlement only with no adjudication of or finding on any issue of fact or law, and no party, by executing this Agreement or carrying out its terms, admits any wrongdoing or liability with respect to any allegations or claims.

15. This Agreement shall be governed by and construed in accordance with the laws of the State of New York, United States of America, and any actions under this Agreement shall be brought in the United States.

16. This Agreement may be executed in one or more identical counterparts, whether transmitted by telecopier or otherwise, each of which such counterparts when executed and delivered shall be deemed to be an original for purposes of this Agreement, but all of the counterparts together shall constitute one and the same instrument.

17. The effective date of this Agreement shall be January 8, 1994. This Agreement shall become binding irrespective of whether or not all of the Abu Dhabi parties have executed this Agreement, provided, however, that the benefits conferred and obligations imposed by this Agreement shall not inure in favor of or bind those Abu Dhabi parties who do not execute this Agreement on or before January 15, 1994.

18. All notices, communications and requests under this Agreement shall be made to:

Dear Dr. Beadling,

Enclosed is a "BCCI Squad" patch, which we hope you will accept both as a memento of your recent trip to Abu Dhabi with us and as a small token of our appreciation for the assistance you most ably and professionally rendered in our transporting of [redacted] to the U.S. Due in no small measure to the part you played, the trip came off without a hitch and we now have in custody and are able to prosecute one of the most integral participants in the largest bank fraud in history. b6 b7C

Thank you again for your help. Do not hesitate to call on us if there is some way in which we can reciprocate.

From : SA [redacted] b6 b7C

Subject: [redacted]

OO: WMFO

The following information came to my attention while in Abu Dhabi, U.A.E., between 4/28/94 and 5/7/94, conducting investigation on "HIDDEN INTERESTS; MC #38; FIF; FAG; OO: WMFO," (29B-WF-171994), i.e., the BCCI case.

[redacted] a New York City, NY, detective assigned to the BCCI investigation being conducted by the District Attorney of NY (DANY), telephone [redacted] reported that, while in the process of interviewing [redacted] BCCI, he learned that [redacted] b6 b7C

In furtherance of the ongoing effort to gather and review all BCCI records [redacted] associated disks were under the control of the law firm of SIMMONS & SIMMONS--a British firm representing the majority shareholders of BCCI--and specifically, [redacted] with S&S. When interviewed by [redacted] admitted the following:

1) [redacted] knew that, throughout the time that [redacted] spent in Abu Dhabi, [redacted] SHEIK ZAYED; [redacted] ABEDI would meet with ZAYED, and as ZAYED's personal banker when ZAYED would travel anywhere in the Middle East.

2) [redacted] knew that, after BCCI was closed and [redacted] was arrested, [redacted] had been inventoried as part of the collection of BCCI records and were maintained in the Shareholders' Committee Office flat ("the SCO Flat") in Abu Dhabi.

3) [redacted] wanted to prevent potentially sensitive or embarrassing information about SIMMONS & SIMMONS' clients, i.e., SHEIK ZAYED, other members of the ruling family or members of the Majority Shareholders, including [redacted] ZAYED's Department of Private Affairs and the ABU DHABI INVESTMENT AUTHORITY (ADIA), from coming into the hands of the worldwide liquidators of BCCI. b6 b7C

4) In or about 2/92, [redacted] removed the computer disks from the file and took them (and possibly, the computer itself) to an ADIA chartered [redacted], supposedly to verify the contents of the disks. When they determined that the disks did contain the diaries, [redacted] instructed [redacted] to duplicate the disks and to "erase" the originals. [redacted] then returned the "erased" disks to the file so that the inventory would not be compromised. b6 b7C

When interviewed by [redacted] brought to him, but said he was unable to recall how he had done so, i.e., whether he had formatted the disks 5 times or had used Norton Utilities software. [redacted] further recalled mentioning to [redacted] the same information and there being some discussion about whether they should overwrite the hard disk. b6 b7C

I interviewed [redacted] with the WDC firm of PATTON BOGGS & BLOW (PB&B), representing the U.S. interests of the Majority Shareholders. [redacted] verified [redacted] admissions, both from statements [redacted] or in [redacted] presence. [redacted] and had attempted to access its hard drive; but learned it was password-protected. [redacted] arranged for me to see the computer, then in the custody of S&S. b6 b7C

Both PB&B and S&S refused to allow the computer and disks to be immediately taken by the FBI absent (1) authorization from their clients and (2) a determination that the hard disk does not contain classifiable information. PB&B and S&S were instructed to preserve the items in their present condition and to transport them to the Abu Dhabi Embassy, WDC, where an FBI computer expert would attempt to access the hard drive in their presence.

[redacted] provided the password on a piece of paper during an interview in Abu Dhabi; he also provided it to Det. [redacted] during an earlier interview. [redacted] a string of letters and numerals: [redacted] b6 b7C

72-WF-

DOJ OIA Associate Director [redacted] has indicated she would seek prosecution of [redacted] for Obstruction of Justice. b6 b7C

I recommend this matter be opened and assigned.

Dear Sir:

Re: Swiss Customs Tax on Fuel for Chartered Aircraft Used on Official U.S. Government Flight

On May 5, 1994 and again on May 7, 1994, [redacted] b6 b7C chartered by the U.S. Government for the purpose of transporting an important federal fugitive, transited the Zurich, Switzerland international airport, where, on both occasions, it was refueled. The total fuel bill was USD $11,300.00. Our embassy in Bern, Switzerland, now informs us that Swiss Customs has imposed a total Customs Tax of USD $16,430.00 on the two purchases.

In that the flight was an official activity of the U.S. Government, we respectfully request that our State Department petition the Swiss Government to rescind the imposition of the above-mentioned Customs Tax.

Very truly yours,

Attn: AOSM [redacted] NVMRA

Date 12/12/94

From : SSA [redacted]
SQUAD C-5

Subject: SECURITY VIOLATION
12/10/94

At or about 7:30 p.m. on 12/9/94, SA [redacted] (C-5; ext. 6408) completed drafting a secure teletype (classified ~~"Secret")~~ to FBIHQ and several offices in a case entitled "HIDDEN INTERESTS: MC #38; FIF; FAG; OO: WMFO," (29B-WF-171994). SA [redacted] then left the draft in the custody of the clerk (female; name unknown) at the NVMRA Communications Center with instructions to send it to WMFOHQ, via secure fax, to the night stenographer.

On arriving at his desk for duty on 12/12/94, SA [redacted] found the following in his chair:

1) a 12/10/94 fax of the cover sheet he had written to direct his teletype draft to WMFOHQ, bearing a stamp indicating the fax had been sent at 14:06 on 12/10/94 to "49197", i.e., the non-secure fax on Squad C-5 (324-9197), from an unidentified location;

2) a 12/10/94 fax of the cover sheet and teletype draft, bearing a stamp indicating the fax had been sent at 15:33 on 12/10/94 to "49197" from an unidentified location.

In the open mail in his mail slot SA [redacted] found the original cover sheet and draft of the teletype, with no markings on the cover sheet to indicate that any action had been taken.

On 12/12/94, SA [redacted] telephoned the WMFOHQ Word Processing Center and learned there was no record of his teletype there. He also called the WMFOHQ Communications Center and learned there was no record of the Center receiving or sending a secure fax relating to the above-mentioned file.

For information, on 1/11/95 SA [redacted] spoke with [redacted] b6 b7C Va. regarding his receipt of a fax from the above Nigerian subject. This fax was received by [redacted] on 11/26/94 from fax number [redacted] to a fax number used by him of [redacted]

The attached fax requests [redacted] bank account b6 b7C information so that 25 million dollars in Nigerian funds can be transferred to his account in the U.S. for which he will receive 25% as a fee. This fax is very similar to many letters and faxes turned over to the FBI in the past with the exception of the paragraph on page two concerning BCCI.

[redacted] advised that the fax was received at the office b6 b7C of THE WARRENTON WORD SHOP, (WWS) 54 East Lee Street, Suite 205, Warrenton, Va. 22186, [redacted] explained that it is very strange that a fax for him would go to her number inasmuch as he does not believe that the WWS number and his name are associated anywhere. [redacted] advised that he does receive faxes on the WWS fax machine, but only in his company name. [redacted] has his own fax machine at his office which is located in his home.

[redacted] EQUIDAIE, which is a horse magazine b6 b7C and has done so for the past three years. [redacted] stated that he has not received any other faxes from [redacted] nor has he received any telephone calls or letters from anyone in or from Nigeria.

[redacted] provided DOB of [redacted] and a telephone numbers b6 b7C [redacted]

A copy of this memo and attached fax are being provided to SA [redacted] C-5, for whatever action is deemed appropriate. b6 b7C

Now, we wish to finalize this deal with a foreign partner in whose foreign account this fund would be lodged into for investments. But this bill need some development such as chemical reconversion and purification before being moved out to your Bank abroad.

Presently, This money is in from of bonded retractable negative, 267.03 mint stages and is almost ready for offer as a legal tender, with your assistance we will be able to reconvert them to grade A 135 neon proof mint state.

Consequently, we have agreed to offer you 25% of this money on reconversion, however, as seeing is believing, this cash will be universally tested scientifically and commercially after reconversion to clear doubt of its genuinety and qualities attributable to any legal tender, after which we will travel with you because we wish to acquire properties in your conutry. You be will required to visit Nigeria to enable us conclude the final part of this deal. Your coming to Nigeria will avail us the opportunity of knowing each other better.

Looking forward to your reply, but most importantly, we appeal for security and confidentiality of this matter to ensure success. You can reach me on the fax Number as indicated above. Memorandum

To : ADIC, WMFO (29B-WF-171994)(P)(C-5) Date 5/17/95

From : SA [redacted] b6 b7C

Subject: HIDDEN INTERESTS;
MAJOR CASE #38;
FIF; FAG;
OO: WMFO

On 5/16/95, DOJ Deputy Special Counsel [redacted] b6 b7C provided information as to the status of various aspects of the captioned matter.

1) Asset Forfeiture: To date, DOJ has been allocated approximately $28 million in discretionary funds from the BCCI forfeitures, and has requested another $36 million, the allocation of which is imminent. These funds are, in part, to be used to defray the costs of the BCCI investigation, including such disparate things as travel and rewards.

2) [redacted] b6 b7C FIRST AMERICAN trustee $3.5 million, as well as relinquish custody of his CCAH shares; pay a fine $1.5 million to the U.S. government; and pay $500,000 to the Fed to fund its BCCI computerized record system. As of this date, DOJ, the Fed and DANY had yet to sign off on the proposal, but "probably will" do so.

Negotiations with [redacted] b6 b7C "seem to be at a standstill," with the triumvirate of DOJ, DANY and the Fed looking (due to precedent) for an [redacted] type deal," i.e., get custody of any CCAH shares; get as much money as possible for DOJ, DANY, the Fed, the liquidators and the trustee; and prevent any claims.

DSC [redacted] b6 b7C is awaiting a response from Fed Special Counsel [redacted] on the state of any negotiations with [redacted] (Almost a year ago, SC [redacted] told me he had almost closed a deal with [redacted] in which [redacted] would relinquish all CCAH shares, notwithstanding the fact that [redacted] had disavowed ownership.)

3) GHAITH RACHAD PHARAON: The Resolution Trust Company, which had been trying to "pierce the corporate veil" of PHARAOH HOLDINGS LIMITED (PHL) to establish proof for an $8 million claim against ACCENT FILMS has led to RTC gaining a $2.7 million settlement involving ACCENT FILMS, GHAITH INTERNATIONAL, REDEC and another company, QUANDEEL (phonetic). DSC [redacted] will provide a copy of the complaint and settlement when he obtains them. b6 b7C

DOJ has "basically decided" to not go after a global restraining order on PHL: most of its known assets are overseas, which would present immense difficulties in controlling them. In addition, the U.S. District Court, WDC, has already ordered PHL to repatriate its overseas assets, but PHL has made no known attempt to comply. From another perspective, [redacted] in his testimony in the Cayman courts in regard to the liquidator's suit against PHARAON, did not disclose any assets in the U.S., even though he did admit that PHARAON and PHL were hiding, stripping, dissipating and otherwise manipulating assets to avoid attachment. In that [redacted] is due back in the Cayman court on 6/1/95 to deal with a contempt citation, DSC [redacted] and I agreed it would present an opportunity for the liquidator's counsel to question [redacted] under oath about (e.g.,) the identity of assets in the U.S., given the need for the liquidator (and us) to be able to verify that those assets were not used as part of PHL's manipulations. b6 b7C

Finally, DSC [redacted] said DOJ is considering requesting investigation of PHL bank accounts to allow them to be targeted and frozen on a "good" day, i.e., at a time when they contain large amounts of money. b6 b7C

FEDERAL BUREAU OF INVESTIGATION

Date of transcription 12/13/95

[redacted] was observed deplaning from NORTHWEST flight #1043 at approximately 10:25 p.m., at the Billings Logan International Airport. He met with two younger females and an approximately one-year-old child. He was followed down to the baggage area and confronted by SA [redacted]

[redacted] was advised of the identity of the agent and also advised that he was being contacted concerning the whereabouts of GHAITH RACHAD PHARAON. [redacted] was then advised by SA [redacted] that PHARAON was currently a fugitive from justice and that if he, [redacted] knowingly concealed the whereabouts of PHARAON, he, [redacted] could be charged for harboring a fugitive.

[redacted] advised that he last saw PHARAON on the 19th of November when he departed Damascus. [redacted] explained that he had [redacted] PHARAON [redacted]

When asked where GHAITH RACHAD PHARAON was currently located, [redacted] stated that he can always either be found in Jetta or Syria and because of his current status, he did not believe PHARAON would leave the Arab states.

[redacted] identified the company owning the yacht as the LATH TREATING AND CONTRACTING COMPANY.

[redacted] also advised that [redacted]

[redacted] further stated that [redacted] Montana, [redacted] Montana. His telephone number is [redacted]

Opmerkingen / Remarks:

Dear [redacted] b6 b7C

In my fax dated 26 April 1996 I stated that I would inform you accordingly when new information from our legal department in New York would be received by me.

[redacted] 29B-WF-171994

They informed me one week ago that they received no further information regarding to [redacted] The federal prosecutor who had initially led them to expect additional information ultimately declined to provide that.

Best regards,

Bert

[redacted] remains in custody; British High Court remands proceedings

Today, former BCCI [redacted] petition for habeas corpus was denied, but the British court directed the magistrate to redo the warrant committing [redacted] into custody based upon his waiver of extradition in March 1996.

In a victory for the Home Office, the judicial panel conceded that the Bowe Street Magistrate has authority, where an extraditee has waived, to surrender an extraditee directly to a foreign country without a surrender warrant from the Secretary of State. However, that authority applies only where the extraditee has clearly waived all rights under British law.

[redacted] will now appear before the magistrate to clarify the terms of his waiver of extradition. It is anticipated that he will only waive rights to further challenges in the extradition proceedings. If so, he can seek to discharge the committal warrant unless the Secretary of State executes a warrant surrendering him to the United States in two months. b6 b7C

The High Court also said that comity requires that France consent to re-extradition of [redacted] before he is released to US authorities. In related developments, the Home Office is seeking to meet with French MOJ August 5-6th. b6 b7C

ANTICIPATED OVERSEAS ACTIVITIES AND INTERVIEWS:

GHAITH R. PHARAON: Efforts continue, in coordination with the Office of Naval Intelligence, to maintain a watch on PHARAON's yacht, "Le Pharaon," which remains in a boat yard in Barcelona, Spain, undergoing maintenance. ONI has a corporate source who will report the yacht's exact itinerary, thereby enabling us to track the vessel's movements and, hopefully, to be in a position to locate and apprehend PHARAON. (U)

Recently, DOJ--specifically, Special Counsel [redacted] Deputy SC [redacted] and OIA Assistant Director Linda Candler--has been strongly suggesting that an application be made to the Spanish government [redacted] I learned 11/28/94 that DOJ had unilaterally even begun to draft an affidavit to accompany such an MLAT request. I contacted both AD Candler and SC [redacted] and told them I was opposed to such a plan for several reasons: 1) the existence of the source who can and will provide us with the boat's itinerary; 2) the likelihood that, given the history of our failed attempts to confidentially gain the assistance of foreign governments in apprehending PHARAON, such an approach to the Spanish government would immediately be conveyed to him, thereby negating any assumption by PHARAON that the boat is a safe haven; 3) [redacted] 4) the likelihood that, if we and DOJ designate PHARAON

Dear Sirs:

Re: The BCCI Case: Remaining Investigative Matters (U)

This communication is classified ~~"Secret"~~ except as otherwise designated.

As you may be aware, February 7, 1995, marked the fourth anniversary of the beginning of the investigation of the BCCI case by our office, in concert with members of your staff and others in the DoJ, and the Office of the U. S. Attorney for the District of Columbia. The passing of this milestone alone would seem to be an appropriate moment to list and discuss items which, in our view, constitute the major remaining investigative matters in the BCCI case; matters which we believe to be no less important despite the passage of so much time. However, you should also be aware that some exigency in pursuing these matters now exists due to the fact that our case agent, Special Agent [redacted] will no longer be in this office, and possibly, the FBI, after July 1, 1995. (U)

In order to ensure an orderly, seamless progression of the BCCI investigation, we are ready and able, at your earliest opportunity, to discuss the matters presented below, using as a guide either the agenda we have included in this letter, or one you may have. At a minimum, we are committed to bringing each of the these matters to a successful, acceptable conclusion. (U)

1. The ongoing and anticipated prosecution of the existing RICO indictment in the District of Columbia. (U)

This category includes:

(a) the completion of the collection and review of records from Abu Dhabi (particularly, the so-called [redacted] files"), England, France and Luxembourg, for relevant evidence and leads. b6 b7C

(b) the apprehension of fugitives AGHA HASAN ABEDI, GHAITH RACHAD PHARAON and TARIQ JAMIL.

(c) witness identification and interviews (in some cases, reinterviews). Some witnesses are abroad in (e.g.) England or Pakistan (see below at "Overseas interviews"). (U)

(b) Certain BCCI nominees, each of whom played a role in BCCI's illegal ownership and control of CREDIT AND COMMERCE AMERICAN HOLDINGS (CCAH), the company which owned FIRST AMERICAN CORPORATION. It is our understanding that each was negotiating a plea and/or settlement with the DoJ's Fraud Section, Asset Forfeiture Office (AFO) or the Board of Governors of the Federal Reserve System (BGFRS), and the District Attorney of New York (DANY). Those involved in this category include: [redacted] b6 b7C

In closing, we reiterate our desire to meet with you at your earliest convenience to discuss and evaluate the status of, and plans for, this important, complicated and sensitive investigation. Colorado, apparently as a tax case. The ultimate disposition of that referral remains unclear, but is our understanding that prosecution was declined. (U)

In examining BCCI records relating to CAPCOM, we have seen documents which strongly indicate that one or more of the directors of CAPCOM, ROBERT MAGNESS, LARRY ROMRELL and/or KERRY FOX, all of whom we believe were subjects of the Colorado inquiry, were enriched by the forgiveness of a BCCI loan to one of their corporations, WINTERWOOD ASSOCIATES. Further, we are told that the DANY has corroborative documentary evidence showing that one or more of these subjects asked for the return of, and received, the original loan documents when the loan was forgiven. (U)

[redacted] b6 b7C b7D

Recent stories and editorials in the media in the U.K. and elsewhere have decried the fact that CAPCOM continues to operate in the U.K. when it is supposedly so infamous as a suspected money-laundering enterprise. Even the [redacted] management professes not to understand why CAPCOM has not been "wound up." The same media stories report that U.S. Senator KERRY is sufficiently outraged by the lack of any overt action against CAPCOM, either here or abroad, that he is moving to reopen subcommittee hearings. We would like to take this opportunity to recognize and commend TA [redacted] both for his work on the BCCI case, in general, and in particular, for his work on this complicated and important aspect of the investigation: ascertaining the nature and scope of the relationship between BCCI and the U.S. intelligence community. Were it not for TA [redacted] tenacity, his diplomacy and his investigative skills, much of what has now come to light would have remained hidden--to our eventual detriment. (U) b6 b7C

6. Overseas interviews. (U)

We believe certain interviews of, or proffers from, persons now overseas would advance both the BCCI-[redacted] investigations. Those interviews would include: (U) (S) b1 b3

(In Pakistan): (U)

(a) AGHA HASAN ABEDI, the fugitive founder and chairman of BCCI. In 12/93, we contacted ABEDI through informants. At that time, he indicated his supposed willingness to cooperate with the U.S.' inquiries. It was and is our belief that our earlier efforts should be rekindled, and should include an attempt by TA [redacted] and SA [redacted] to contact him in person. (U) b6 b7C

[redacted] (S) b1 b3

(c) [redacted] a longtime, high-level BCCI b6 b7C

(d) [redacted] a fugitive (Northern District of Georgia) BCCI official, who helped BCCI control the NATIONAL BANK OF GEORGIA, and who could testify against others, e.g., PHARAON, and would very likely know about criminality of U.S. citizens. (U)

(e) [redacted] b6 b7C
both AGHA HASAN ABEDI [redacted] BCCI's U.K. region until 1988 and knew about BCCI's use of nominees, such as the (allegedly) late MOHAMMED M. HAMMOUD, whom BCCI used as a nominee to "buy" CLARK CLIFFORD's [redacted] CCAH shares. (U)

(f) [redacted] a BCCI loan officer who was intimately familiar with the roles which BCCI, [redacted] and GHAITH PHARAON played in the acquisition and operation of INDEPENDENCE BANK in Encino, California. (U) b6 b7C

(In London): (U)

(g) [redacted] BCCI nominee MOHAMMED M. HAMMOUD, [redacted] provided almost $300,000.00 to Senator ORRIN HATCH [redacted] (U) b6 b7C

(h) [redacted] MOHAMMED M. HAMMOUD.(U)

(i) [redacted] b6 b7C b7D
[redacted] GULF INTERNATIONAL HOLDINGS (GIH), a Luxembourg-based shipping company whose non-performing loans from BCCI caused almost a billion dollars in losses (some of which probably was funneled into or through one or more of several companies GIH owned or controlled in the U.S.). [redacted] you will recall, was arrested in 12/94 by German police on a U.K. warrant, while he was en route to the U.S. to be interviewed by SA [redacted] and TA [redacted] and representatives from the DANY. It is our understanding that, since that time, TA [redacted] has been communicating with [redacted] U.K. attorney and the [redacted] to arrange another opportunity to interview [redacted] (U)

(j) [redacted] was identified in a recently-obtained, BCCI liquidators' document as an "important witness." [redacted] ABU DHABI INVESTMENT AUTHORITY, a quasi-governmental organization. Prior to that position, [redacted] LAZARD b6 b7C

FRERES, working with [redacted] U.S. Energy Secretary. In 1990, looking for assistance for BCCI, [redacted] was sent by the government of Abu Dhabi to meet with [redacted] and SA [redacted] also plan to interview [redacted] (U) b6 b7C

(k) [redacted] to advance the discussions of a plea agreement. (U)

7. Screening BCCI account holders and claimants: (U)

At various times through almost the entire investigation, we have been tasked with screening the names of account holders seeking the return of their deposits from BCCI's liquidators. It has become apparent to us that many of these accounts have been used to launder money or to evade U.S. taxation. In Luxembourg, for example, information which TA [redacted] were able to provide enabled the liquidator to freeze over $80 million in laundered drug proceeds; funds which will be used to compensate the legitimate victims of the BCCI debacle. We are currently reviewing our records for similar information on hundreds more names from Luxembourg and from BCCI's branch in the Cayman Islands. While recognizing the inherent difficulties in suspecting criminality by the mere existence of funds in a BCCI account, and the fact we are constrained from providing the liquidator with any information on a subject other than that which is public, it is our belief this effort should continue and that any U.S. subject(s) should be aggressively pursued and prosecuted. (U) b6 b7C

AGENDA: (U)

1. The D.C. RICO case:

   (d) What investigation is needed? (U)

3. Additional targets in the D.C. RICO case:
   (a) Dedication to prosecution:
   [redacted]

[redacted] (a Kuwait citizen, from whom SA [redacted] ALI MOHAMMED AL-SHORAFA (the director of the royal court of SHEIK ZAYED BIN SULTAN AL-NAYHAN, the ruler of Abu Dhabi and president of the United Arab Emirates [U.A.E.]; SA [redacted] HUMAID BIN RASHID AL-NAOMI (the crown prince and deputy ruler of Ajman, one of the U.A.E.; and HAMAD BIN MOHAMMED AL-SHARQI (the ruler of Fujaira, another of the U.A.E.). (U) b6 b7C b7D

3. Additional targets in the District of Columbia RICO case: (U)

We include in this category: (U)

(a) KEMAL SHOAIB, formerly a high-level BCCI official who ostensibly left his BCCI position to become the chairman and CEO of INDEPENDENCE BANK (IB) in Encino, California. Largely due to the work of FBI SAs [redacted] in Los Angeles, who investigated the IB failure matter, we believe we can show that SHOAIB was a co-conspirator in BCCI's scheme to illegally acquire IB. We also have evidence that SHOAIB extorted funds from BCCI in return for his silence. It is our understanding that DoJ Fraud Section TA [redacted] who is presently working with SAs [redacted] on an indictment of SHOAIB in California on Bank Bribery charges stemming from the IB failure, is favorably disposed to proceeding against SHOAIB in the District of Columbia, and that she is joined in that opinion by DoJ Deputy Special Counsel [redacted] (U) b6 b7C

(b) INTERREDEC, INCORPORATED, which is a corporation owned or controlled by GHAITH RACHAD PHARAON in Richmond Hill, Georgia. Again largely due to the work of LA SAs [redacted] added to that done earlier by WMFO SA [redacted] we believe we can prove that INTERREDEC, INC., played a conspiratorial role in BCCI's acquisition, ownership and control of the NATIONAL BANK OF GEORGIA and INDEPENDENCE BANK. As they did in regard to SHOAIB, TA [redacted] have expressed favorable opinions with regard to charging INTERREDEC, INC., in the District of Columbia. (U) b6 b7C

LA SAs [redacted] plan to travel to Washington, D.C., within the next two weeks, in part to discuss the above matters with the DoJ Fraud Section. (U) b6 b7C

4. CAPCOM:

As you will recall, the portion of the BCCI investigation relating to CAPCOM was referred in 1992 to the District of

RE: LEAD # 62 - STATUS REPORT
IDENTIFY ASSETS OF BCCI SHAREHOLDERS & "FRONT-MEN"

To date a Bureau wide airtel has been sent to index and search indices on major BCCI shareholders and "front-men". The FBI, Butte Information Technology Center (BITC) has been requested to search their files for information concerning the major BCCI shareholders and "front-men", along with companies associated with the individuals.

The writer will follow up the results from Butte when received. The writer is also awaiting the KERRY REPORT documents, in order to review any information contained in the report which might assist in locating assets held in the United States.

Lead # 60 - [redacted] : BCCI & [redacted]

Pursuant to referenced conference, the following is submitted regarding the status of lead #60:

Background

Lead requires a determination as to BCCI involvement with [redacted] (CENTRUST) in identifying affiliated entities that may have laundered funds for [redacted] to offshore locations. The Subcommittee found numerous connections amount [redacted] and BCCI related persons/entities. b6 b7C

Status

On 11/4/92, SA [redacted] telephonically contacted SSA [redacted] FBI-Phoenix, regarding the [redacted] investigation. SSA [redacted] advised that a Task Force was established that included approximately 40 investigators including 6 FBI SAs in both Phoenix and Los Angeles, 3 OFFICE OF THRIFT SUPERVISION (OTS) examiners, state banking officials and several FBI Financial Analysts. At the present time, the case is in the second day of trial and includes two defendants. Only 2-3 SAs are currently working on the investigation. Eight plea agreements were made and all defendants were interviewed, which included questions regarding BCCI and the [redacted] -related entities. SSA [redacted] advised that the Task Force was aware of b6 b7C

RE: LEAD # 41 - SCREENING OF CLAIMANT NAMES
MEMO DATED 10/22/92 SETTING UP SUB BB

The purpose of this memo is to spell out the criteria used in identifying claimants to the Bank of Credit and Commerce International (BCCI), which will be globally searched through WMFO indices.

Since the objective of the search is only to determine those individuals or companies which may have derived money form illegal activities, it was decided that after the global searches are completed WMFO would only review searches resulting in positive hits, of either individuals or companies, which are from a main file less than seven years old. Also, WMFO would not review files of individuals or companies which were previously known to WMFO.

Re: People v. Clark M. Clifford
People v. [redacted] b6
N.Y. Co. Ind. No. 6994/92 b7C

Dear [redacted] b6 b7C

This Office has conducted a criminal investigation into the affairs of the Bank of Credit and Commerce International (BCCI) and its relationship with First American Bankshares (FAB), a multi-state bank holding company, and with officers, directors, and shareholders, and other principals of FAB, its parents, and its subsidiaries. That investigation resulted in an indictment against a number of persons, including Clark M. Clifford and [redacted] b6 b7C A trial of the charges contained in that indictment is scheduled to begin on February 15, 1993, in the Supreme Court of the State of New York, New York County.

We understand that your agency may have conducted an inquiry into matters related to the subject matter of the accompanying indictment, or may have otherwise spoken to a number of persons on connected matters. We ask you to search your files and provide us with a copy of anything that constitutes a "statement" of any of the persons in the attached list. We ask that you do so before December 15, 1992.

Under New York State law, a criminal defendant is entitled to matter of the witness's testimony

New York CPL section 240.45 (1)(a). New York courts have taken a broad view of what constitutes such a statement. For example, under New York law, the statement by one person of what a third person said would be a statement of that third person. In addition, New York law considers not only a final summary memorandum of an interview to be a statement of a witness, but any draft notes of an interview to be such a statement. Thus, informal notes can be a statement as well as such obvious things as a deposition, transcript of testimony, or a written, signed, tape recorded, or other recorded statement by the witness himself or herself.

We realize that this request will exact some burdens upon your organization. We appreciate the efforts that you make to provide this Office with possession of the indicated statements, and thank you in advance for your anticipated courtesy and promptness in carrying out our request. If you have any questions, please call me at (212) 335-9892. In any event, we would be grateful for a written response to our request from your agency.

Sincerely,

[redacted]

Attorney

MAJOR CASE #38

Investigation in captioned matter is nearing completion and major case status will be sustained until mid-December, 1992. Special Agent resources are being reallocated and the Financial Analysts who were assigned TDY have been released to their respective divisions. All remaining investigation in support of the Federal RICO indictments and the upcoming trial of [redacted] and CLARK CLIFFORD in New York can be addressed on a squad level at WMFO.

b7C

A brief chronology of the prosecutive stages of this investigation is being provided for background information:

In July, 1991, the District Attorney's Office, New York (DANY), brought indictments against BCCI executives and nominees:

AGHA ABEDI
GAITH PHARAON

These individuals were charged with operating a criminal enterprise (BCCI). DANY also indicated [redacted] charging them with "Scheme to Defraud in the First Degree." b6 b7C

In September, 1991, the United States Attorney (USA), Middle District of Florida, brought RICO charges (operating BCCI as a racketeering enterprise), against the following:

[redacted] b6 b7C

CAPCOM FINANCIAL SERVICES

[redacted]

In November, 1991, the U.S. DEPARTMENT OF JUSTICE (DOJ) brought RICO charges against: ABEDI; [redacted] PHARAON; BCCI holdings; BCCI SA; BCCI Overseas; and ICIC. b6 b7C

In December, 1991, DOJ brought a superseding indictment against: BCCI holdings; BCCI SA; BCCI Overseas; and ICIC, charging them with RICO and aiding and abetting.

In July, 1992, DOJ brought indictments against CLARK CLIFFORD and [redacted] charging them with conspiracy and concealing material facts. b6 b7C

In July, 1992, DANY brought indictments against CLIFFORD and [redacted] charging them with accepting bribes and defrauding United States bank regulators. b6 b7C

In September, 1992, the USA, Northern District of Georgia brought indictments against: PHARAON; [redacted] charging them with conspiracy, bribery, false entry, money laundering and tax violations. b6 b7C

In January, 1992, the liquidators representing BCCI entered a guilty plea to Federal RICO charges and New York Larceny and Fraud charges. BCCI agreed to forfeit $550 million to the Federal Government and pay $10 million in fines to New York State. BCCI also agreed to cooperate with DOJ and DANY in all ongoing investigations of BCCI.

In July, 1992, [redacted] pleaded guilty in New York County to criminal conduct involving BCCI, (misdemeanors), and a agreed to cooperate with DOJ and DANY. They also paid $105 million in fines, reimbursements and compensation. b6 b7C

On July 31, 1992, U.S. District Judge JOYCE HANS GREEN set a Federal trial date of October 26, 1992, for CLIFFORD and [redacted] On August 14, 1992, [redacted] requested that Judge GREEN allow New York's trial of CLIFFORD and [redacted] to proceed on October 22, 1992. b6 b7C

On August 18, 1992, Judge GREEN held a status meeting to address the issue of trial dates and at this time DOJ requested a continuance in order to allow DANY to proceed on October 22, 1992, prior to the Federal case. DOJ expressed the opinion that a Federal trial would jeopardize DANY's case on the grounds of double jeopardy.

On September 10, 1992, Judge GREEN honored the request for a continuance by DOJ and agreed to allow DANY to try CLIFFORD and [redacted] in New York on January 4, 1993. The trial has since been postponed to February, 1993. b6 b7C

In March, 1991, DOJ focused its prosecutive efforts on CLIFFORD and [redacted] and FBI investigative resources were directed to support this strategy. As a result, other aspects of the case were placed in pending inactive status. In July, 1992, additional Special Agents and Financial Analysts were assigned and by late October the investigations pertaining to other subjects were updated to the extent that they could be presented to DOJ for prosecutive opinion. b6 b7C

On October 29, 1992, Deputy Assistant Attorney General (DAAG) [redacted] advised that DOJ would not consider prosecution of the PRICE WATERHOUSE auditors [redacted] b6 b7C b7D

[redacted]

DAAG [redacted] advised that DOJ would seek no additional prosecution in the REDEC, CAPCOM and CENTRUST matters as these cases are being addressed in current and anticipated indictments by DOJ and other Federal Districts. b6 b7C

1325015-000-7759

On November 6, 1992, a meeting was held at the FEDERAL RESERVE in New York in order to discuss the prosecutive and investigative strategy of this case. Present were: DAAG [redacted] DOJ; [redacted] b6 District Attorney, New York and his deputy [redacted] b7C [redacted] FEDERAL RESERVE; Inspector [redacted] [redacted] and SSAs [redacted] and [redacted] FBI.

The prosecutive potential of the following was discussed:

1. The nominees of BCCI as a RICO conspiracy
2. INTERREDEC
3. [redacted] b6
4. [redacted] b7C

It was agreed that precedent had been set by DANY b6 in their acceptance of pleas by [redacted] but that b7C this would not preclude DANY from proceeding against the other nominees. In view of the progress DANY has made and since they have established contact with at least one other nominee, it was agreed that any additional effort by Federal authorities would be duplicative. DOJ and FBI agreed to assist DANY by furnishing results of any related investigation relevant to the nominees.

The criminal aspect of the INTERREDEC investigation focuses on GAITH PHARAON who is under indictment on various charges in three different jurisdictions. It was agreed that additional efforts against PHARAON would be duplicative and the forfeiture proceedings against INTERREDEC can best be addressed by attaching them to the FEDERAL RESERVE civil case. The results of this action, the forfeiture of approximately $20 million to the U.S. Government, would be the same in either case.

The feasibility of a Federal case against [redacted] b6 [redacted] was discussed and it was decided that since DANY b7C has already indicted [redacted] and a Federal investigation has not yet begun, DANY is in the strongest position to proceed and DOJ deferred to them.

[redacted] is the subject of investigations by b6 both DANY and the FBI. DANY is investigating several multi- b7C million dollar fraud violations in New York which were perpetrated by [redacted] through his use of BCCI. DANY expects to have indictments returned by a New York Grand Jury in the very near future. In view of this as well as the fact that the FBI investigation consists of an SBA fraud which is in the initial stage, DOJ agreed to defer prosecution to DANY.

It should be noted that DOJ has assigned a Federal prosecutor to DANY to assist in the joint prosecution of CLIFFORD and [redacted]. It was agreed that FBI agents would be made available to assist DANY in trial preparation. The details of this project are currently being arranged. b6 b7C

Currently there are enough investigative leads pending to fully occupy six agents for a period of 60 days. An additional two agents will be required to assist in trial preparation during the next 60 days.

It should be noted that the bribery allegations against Senator ORRIN HATCH have been thoroughly investigated and no culpability on the part of the Senator was found. Several leads remain which would determine if an acquaintance of Senator HATCH's has violated Federal Election laws.

WMFO intends to reassign agents who are currently assigned to Major Case #38 as soon as their work is completed.

Inspector [redacted] will be available for reassignment, December 14, 1992. b6 b7C

Reference our meeting on 10/23/92.

Per your request, the following information is being provided regarding leads #21 and #67 which involve BCCI's ownership of NBG.

SA [redacted] reviewed all relevant portions of the Kerry report and determined that it contained no information that was not already known to the BCCI Task Force. A review of the related "Kerry report material" will be conducted upon it's receipt by the Task Force.

On 10/4/92, SA [redacted] contacted SA [redacted] Atlanta Division, who is the case agent of the Atlanta corruption investigation. SA [redacted] advised that their investigation regarding the allegations concerning the payment of bribes to Georgia officials failed to uncover any payments to Georgia officials to ensure passage of the Georgia law which enabled FAB to purchase NBG. SA [redacted] further advised that the statute of limitations has expired pertaining to any violation concerning the passing of the law , which occurred in 1987, and therefore it is anticipated that their case will be closed. SA [redacted] provided that any additional investigations into public corruption in Atlanta will not involve the passage of the Georgia law affecting the FAB acquisiton of NBG.

On 11/18/92, SA [redacted] contacted TA [redacted] who is the lead DOJ prosecutor concerning the NBG investigation. TA [redacted] stated that she is in the process of preparing a prosecutive memo re NBG and she is recommending that the information developed be incorporated in the existing RICO indictment.

TA [redacted] stated that she has already been provided all of the pertinent documents and information relating to the NBG investigation and there is no need for a prosecutive report by the FBI. TA [redacted] stated that it is her opinion that the investigation determined that there was no prosecutable criminal activity conducted in regards to Riveredge, but that some of the information developed during the investigation would be used in the RICO case. TA [redacted] advised that she will also address Riveredge in her prosecutive memo, and will provide a copy of the memo to writer when it is complete. TA [redacted] advised that she is currently preparing for the [redacted] trial in Georgia, and will address the NBG matter as time allows.

Per your request, the following information is being provided regarding lead # 1 which involves the nominee investigation.

On 11/19/92, SA [redacted] telephonically contacted DOJ attorney [redacted] regarding captioned lead. [redacted] advised that the DANY prosecution team has already been provided all of the pertinent documentation and information from the BCCI Task Force. [redacted] further advised that there is no need for the Task Force to provide DANY with any additional documentation or information at this time.

On 11/16/92, SSA [redacted] advised writer that [redacted] is currently drafting a memo which in part confirms DAAG [redacted]'s declination regarding the nominee investigaton, and therefore SA [redacted] does not need to confirm DAAG [redacted]'s prosecutive opinion.

Based upon the above information, lead #1 should be considered covered.

RE lead #36.

PURPOSE: To determine if there is any connection between INSLAW and BCCI or between BCCI and the death of DANIEL CASOLARO.

RECOMMENDATION: No further investigation should be conducted on this matter as no evidence was obtained that connected INSLAW with BCCI or CASOLARO's death to BCCI.

DETAILS: DANIEL CASOLARO was a free lance investigative reporter who was investigating the allegations that the Dept. of Justice (DOJ) had forced INSLAW, a computer software company, to go bankrupt so the U.S. government could seize a software program called "PROMIS" from INSLAW.

In August of 1991, DANIEL CASOLARO was found dead in a Martinsburg, West Virginia, hotel. The initial verdict by the Martinsburg, W. Va., Police Dept. (MPD) was that CASOLARO had committed suicide. However, CASOLARO's family and members of the media questioned the findings of the police and went as far as to state that CASOLARO had been murdered because of his current investigations. The MPD reopened the investigation, but again found nothing to support any theory of CASOLARO being murdered.

During the BCCI investigation several newspaper/magazine articles were published that questioned the death of CASOLARO and made inference to a BCCI/INSLAW connection. FBIHQ requested that the BCCI Squad look into CASOLARO's death for any connection to BCCI and for any connection between BCCI and INSLAW.

Prior to conducting any interviews on this matter SA [redacted] met with SA [redacted] at the NVRA. SA [redacted] had information re CASOLARO and his investigations. SA [redacted] did advise that CASOLARO had been investigating the INSLAW affair at the time of his death, but SA [redacted] did not know of any connection between BCCI and INSLAW. SA [redacted] did not believe the MPD findings that CASOLARO committed suicide, but believed CASOLARO was murdered. However, SA [redacted] had no evidence that would support this belief of murder. SA [redacted] did suggest that SA [redacted] interview several other people during this investigation. On Sept. 15, 1992, SAs [redacted] met with the [redacted]s re BCCI/INSLAW and CASOLARO. For two hours the [redacted]s gave a detailed background on their company and their allegations against the DOJ. Not once during this time did the [redacted]s mention a connection between INSLAW and BCCI. When specifically questioned about any connection between INSLAW and BCCI the [redacted]s stated that [redacted] a reporter for CNBC, Washington, D.C. , told them that CASOLARO had advised her that the First American Bank in McLean, Va., may have filtered PROMIS money through it. The [redacted]s also advised that CASOLARO told them that he had uncovered documents which tied BCCI, IRAN-CONTRA, the "October Surprise", and INSLAW together. However, before CASOLARO could explain further he died which made the [redacted]s suspicious of his death. The [redacted]s had no knowledge as to where CASOLARO may have stored his research and/or documents and had no knowledge of where or from whom CASOLARO received his information.

this editorial BINSTEIN wrote of the death of CASOLARO and made mention that CASOLARO had stumbled across evidence that CASOLARO believed linked INSLAW to deeper intrigues, including the Iran-Contra scandal, the BCCI affair, and the pre-Persian Gulf War arming of Iraq.

In this article BINSTEIN also made mention that Special Agent Tom Gates of the FBI LA Division was suspicious of CASOLARO's death as CASOLARO was in contact with an individual SA GATES believes has connections to Organized Crime. SA GATES believes this individual is CASOLARO's primary source on the INSLAW investigation being conducted by CASOLARO. BINSTEIN advised that he had received all the information for the article from the Sept. 12, 1992 Full House Judiciary Subcommittee Investigative Report on "The Inslaw Affair".

On Sept. 14, 1992, SA [redacted] had advised SA [redacted] that he had worked with CASOLARO on an investigation of organized crime activity within the Hollywood, Ca. entertainment industry. SA [redacted] had no evidence but believed CASOLARO's death was a result of his involvement in this investigation. SA [redacted] was not aware of any investigation CASOLARO was conducting on BCCI and/or INSLAW and knew of no connection between the two. b6 b7C

A copy of SA [redacted] testimony to the Subcommittee was obtained in Oct. of 1992 and reviewed. SA [redacted] testified that he had only spoken to CASOLARO two or three times by phone and that during one of these conversations CASOLARO stated that he had been threatened by [redacted] whom SA [redacted] believes is connected to organized crime. CASOLARO told SA [redacted] that [redacted] had contacted him as a result of his investigation into the INSLAW affair. SA [redacted] testified that he knew nothing further of CASOLARO's death or of his investigation into BCCI/INSLAW. b6 b7C

On Sept. 21, 1992, SA [redacted] contacted [redacted] in regards her association with CASOLARO. [redacted] stated she had known CASOLARO professionally and personally since 1980. CASOLARO had advised [redacted] that he believed INSLAW's computer software was being used by BCCI to keep track of secret documents. CASOLARO had also advised [redacted] that he believed BNL and BCCI were connected, however, due to their competitive news relationship he never disclosed how or where he obtained information to substantiate these allegations. [redacted] advised that CASOLARO never used a computer and that he carried his documents with him. Therefore, [redacted] could not provide any b6 b7C additional information as to where proof to these allegations could be stored. [redacted] advised that she believes that CASOLARO probably did commit suicide. b6 b7C

[redacted] did provide a copy of CASOLARO's outline of his book, "The Octopus", which was to be a catch-all book to tie in all the political scandals of the 1980s and some as far back as the 1950s. CASOLARO claims that eight men make up "The Octopus" and have been responsible for the failure of an initiative into Albania in the fifties, the failure of the Bay of Pigs invasion, Watergate, and the present day BCCI scandal. CASOLARO includes a list of people involved in his book. This list has approximately fifty names which include HOWARD HUNT, KIM PHILBY, [redacted] SENATOR ROBERT BYRD, PRESCOTT BUSH, [redacted] ROBERT VESCO, Chinese Triad Leaders, Japanese Yakuza Leaders, and associated OC leaders in the United States.

On Sept. 29, 1992, SAs [redacted] b6 b7C interviewed [redacted] CASOLARO. [redacted] stated that CASOLARO had started an investigation into the INSLAW affair in early 1990. Not until July or August of 1991 did CASOLARO begin looking into the BCCI scandal. At this time [redacted] does not believe CASOLARO had found any connection between INSLAW and BCCI. [redacted] believes CASOLARO started to look into BCCI because [redacted]s ad agency, GOLDBERG, MARCHESANO, and KOLHMAN, was doing ads for FIRST AMERICAN BANK, which is involved in the BCCI scandal. [redacted] was told by CASOLARO that INSLAW and BCCI were connected through the OCTOBER SURPRISE affair, but was never given any details on this connection.

[redacted] states that CASOLARO kept telling her that he b6 b7C was getting closer and closer to unraveling the mystery that included the INSLAW/BCCI connection. CASOLARO had a theory that a group of powerful men in Washington, D.C. were responsible not only for the INSLAW affair and the BCCI scandal, but also for the IRAN-CONTRA affair, the OCTOBER SURPRISE, and the failure of the Savings and Loans. CASOLARO called this group of men and his theory, "OCTOPUS". CASOLARO made claims that he had obtained numerous secret documents that supported his theory, but never revealed where these documents came from. [redacted] stated that she did not believe in this theory and never read the supporting documents. [redacted] does not know where these documents could now be located.

[redacted] does not believe that CASOLARO committed b6 b7C suicide. However, [redacted] does not have any information that would assist in identifying a possible suspect in CASOLARO's death.

[redacted] did give SAs [redacted] several documents still in her possession that had belonged to CASOLARO at the time of his death. A review of these documents resulted in no positive information. b6 b7C

On Sept. 30, 1992, [redacted] was contacted by SA [redacted] was writing an article for Spy Magazine on CASOLARO's death, but had uncovered no information that would lead [redacted] to connect CASOLARO's death to BCCI or INSLAW. [redacted] also advised that he has no information to substantiate CASOLARO's claim that there was a connection between BCCI and INSLAW. b6 b7C

On Oct. 23, 1992, [redacted] provided documents to SAs [redacted] that had previously belonged to DANIEL CASOLARO. These were the same documents that [redacted] had given to ABC's Nightline. A review of these documents disclosed no relation between BCCI and INSLAW. It was noted that the copy of the autopsy report disclosed that the cause of death was suicide. It was also noted that the test results showed trace amounts of tricyclic antidepressants. His blood and urine also showed trace amounts of opiates. b6 b7C

All attempts to interview SA [redacted]'s source have met with negative results. Eventhough the source acts concerned about CASOLARO's death and wants the FBI to investigate, the source refuses to meet with anyone without SA [redacted] being present. As SA [redacted] is involved with an undercover operation and has limited free time from his UC duties, a meeting between SA [redacted] SA [redacted] and his source has never materialized. SA [redacted] has conversed with the source by telephone, but has received no information during these conversations as the source has stated that his telephone is bugged and believes it is in connection with CASOLARO's investigation. The source is extremely paranoid and wishes to proceed cautiously before he reveals any information re CASOLARO's death and/or the connection between BCCI and INSLAW. However, during SA [redacted]'s initial meeting with SA [redacted] it was revealed that the source had not advised SA [redacted] of any connection between BCCI and INSLAW eventhough SA [redacted] had an interest in the matter. It is the opinion of the writer that the source has no positive information that would have a bearing on this matter. SA [redacted] has advised the source that he will be leaving the BCCI Squad in the near future and would not be able to investigate this matter further, but this has had no effect in hastening a meeting with the source. b6 b7C

1325015-000-7824

A teletype was sent to LA Division requesting a copy of SA [redacted]' testimony before the Subcommittee investigating the INSLAW Affair. Upon receipt of this testimony from LA an airtel was sent to Pittsburgh Division (Martinsburg RA, location of CASOLARO's death) re SA [redacted] belief on who may have been responsible for CASOLARO's death. b6 b7C

At this time no further investigation will be conducted re BCCI/INSLAW or CASOLARO's death.

RE: LEAD #79/[redacted] - U.C. OPERATION b6 b7C

The purpose of this memo is to report the results of a global indices search on [redacted] and to explain his involvement with Bank of Credit and Commerce International (BCCI). b6 b7C

A global indices search on [redacted] was conducted by the writer on 11/9/92, with negative results. b6 b7C

As a result of a review of a memorandum dated 8/8/91 from [redacted] AUSA Criminal Division, Northern District of Dallas to [redacted] Deputy Chief, Fraud Section, Criminal Division; a United States (U.S.) District Court Northern District of Texas Dallas Division indictment filed 10/8/89; and a U.S. District Court Northern District of Texas Judgement filed 7/31/90 the writer determined the following: b6 b7C

In the summer of 1987, the Customs's Service and the IRS began an undercover sting operation in the Northern District of Texas concerning a money laundering operations. The U.S. Attorney's Office for the Northern District of Texas, and the Fraud Section, Criminal Division , Department of Justice assisted in the investigation. [redacted] was one of the individuals implemented in money laundering proceeds of illegal drug sales. During this investigation [redacted] bragged that he knew the heads of BCCI's Canadian operations, but there was no evidence that any of the money that [redacted] laundered through Canada had any connection with BCCI. b6 b7C

During the investigation [redacted] was observed transporting drug proceeds from the U.S. to Nassau, Bahamas. Undercover bank accounts revealed that currency had been deposited into BCCI, Nassau by [redacted] and wire transferred back to the U.S. b6 b7C

Later in the investigation [redacted] bragged that he could arrange bogus offshore loan through his contacts at BCCI, Miami. [redacted] gave the name [redacted] as his contact at BCCI, Miami. Attempts were made during this investigation to setup a meeting with [redacted], but the meeting never materialized. The investigation produced no evidence that [redacted] or BCCI, Miami was ever involved in the transfer of money for [redacted] other than acting as the corresponding bank in the U.S. for the wire transfer. b6 b7C

On 6/16/89, [redacted] and two co-defendants were indicted for money laundering. In March of 1990, [redacted]s case was tried by a jury and was convicted on 17 counts. [redacted] was sentenced to 142 months at Johnson County Jail, Osbourne, Texas. Before the trial, the government contacted the BCCI investigation in Tampa to obtain copies of records of the deposits and wire transfers believed to be seized from BCCI. [redacted] attorney for BCCI, Miami and Bahamas provided documents that indicated that currency was being deposited into BCCI, Bahamas and wire transferred to undercover accounts. In conclusion of the investigation, the investigating party determined that the acceptance of currency by BCCI, Nassau and wire transferring the funds to U.S. accounts is not a violation of U.S. or Bahamian Law. b6 b7C

In conclusion, the writer considers this lead covered, since there are no additional investigative avenues.

Notice: This contract offers, for an additional charge, a collision damage waiver to cover your responsibility for damage to the rental vehicle. Before deciding whether to purchase the collision damage waiver, you may wish to determine whether your own automobile insurance affords you coverage for damage to the rental vehicle and the amount of the deductible under your own insurance coverage, which may still be your personal responsibility. The purchase of this collision damage waiver is not mandatory and may be declined.

RENTAL AGREEMENT: TERMS AND CONDITIONS

[redacted]ES BY HIS/HER SIGNATURE ON THE F[redacted]EREOF THAT HE/SHE HAS READ AND [redacted]OF THE FOLLOWING TERMS AND CONDITI[redacted]CONCERNING THE USE OF THE [redacted]E AND ACCEPTS FULL RESPONSIBILITY HEREIN. This contract is the entire agreement [redacted]een Renter and Owner. The terms and conditions of this contact supercede all terms and conditions contained in prior contractual agreements, letters, oral agreements, promotional or advertising materials. It is agreed that these terms are contractual and cannot be altered by another document, unless specified herein. Owner makes no warranties, express or implied. Renters authorizes Owner to verify through credit agencies or other sources, personal and credit information provided by Renter. As used herein "vehicle" means automobile, van or truck, "Owner" means Owner or Owner's representative.

1. OWNERSHIP, CONDITION OF VEHICLE, TERMS OF CONTRACT, USE OF OR OPERATION OF VEHICLE: Renter acknowledges vehicle is the property of Owner, although registered title may be in a third party, and acknowledges he received vehicle in good physical and mechanical condition. Renter further acknowledges that Renter is not an agent, employee or otherwise acting on Owners behalf, in any manner whatsoever.

2. Renter agrees to return vehicle to Owner in same condition as received, on return date stated on front of contract or immediately upon demand of Owner, written or oral, ordinary wear and tear accepted.

3. Renter agrees not to use vehicle for transportation of persons or property for hire or carry passengers nor use vehicle in violation of any law ordinance or regulation governing the use or return thereof, nor remove it from the state of rental without written consent of Owner.

4. RENTER EXPRESSLY AGREES TO PAY TO OWNER ON DEMAND:

(a) The mileage charge computed at rate specified on the front of contract for miles traveled by vehicle during the period of rental if applicable.

(b) Service and time charges at rate specified on front of contract plus other charges if applicable, even if a billing or statement is sent to any other individual, or insurance organization. All charges incurred during the period of rental, and while the vehicle is in possession of Renter, are the sole responsibility of Renter. Billing to parties other than Renter is done as a courtesy for the renter only. Service charges may include a surcharge, which represents a portion of expenses Owner incurs in the rental of each car, and will be paid upon demand.

(c) The value of tires, tools, parts or accessories lost or stolen from vehicle.

(d) One Hundred Dollars ($100.00) or One Dollar ($1.00) per each hour, whichever is greater, in addition to all other charges, the vehicle is in possession of Renter if the odometer is disconnected or tampered with.

(e) Any fine or legal violation against the vehicle, driver or Owner during this contract, except for Owner's fault. Renter gives owner express authority to process a credit card voucher to pay for parking tickets and violations and for all damages incurred while vehicle is in possession of Renter.

(f) A One and One-Half Percent (1 1/2%) per month carrying charge on all charges not paid within thirty (30) days after the end of the rental.

(g) One Hundred Dollars ($100.00) or Fifty Cents ($.50) per mile, whichever is greater, if the vehicle is not returned to the original rental office without the written consent of Owner.

(h) All expenses incurred by Owner in the collection of monies due Owner per this agreement, or in regaining possession of vehicle enforcing any term or condition of the agreement, including attorney's fees and cost.

(i) Damage to rented vehicle if SafeRent™ is not purchased or does not apply or if Renters insurance company does not pay for damages to vehicle for any reason.

5. DAMAGE TO RENTED CARS: Renter is responsible for and agrees to pay to Owner the retail value of replacing and/or repairing all losses and damages to the rented car including "loss of use" and administrative charges during the period it is unavailable for rental use as measured by reasonable rental value of renting a replacement vehicle, regardless of fault or negligence of the Renter or any person. If Owner offers and Renter agrees to pay an additional fee for SafeRent and driver is between 25 and 70 years old, Renter is relieved of responsibility for physical damage. If Owner offers and Renter agrees to pay additional fee for SafeRent and driver is between 21 and 25 years old or over 70 years old, Renter is relieved of any deductible on Renters policy, plus an additional amount the total of Renters deductible and the additional amount will not exceed $1,000.00. Renter remains responsible and is obligated to Owner for all damage and costs in excess of $1,000.00 Renter agrees to present a claim to his/her insurance company for all losses, damage and cost not covered by SafeRent and understands that if for any reason Renter's insurance company does not pay for damages to the vehicle, Renter is solely responsible. A violation of any provision or condition of the agreement invalidates SafeRent.

6. BODILY INJURY/PROPERTY DAMAGE RESPONSIBILITY TO THIRD PARTIES: RENTER'S INSURANCE IS PRIMARY AND Renter represent and warrants that he/she has and will maintain, during the entire length of this rental, liability and property damage liability insurance or coverage for the Renter, other operators, users, passengers, and third parties, equal to or greater than the financial responsibility limits required by the applicable Financial Responsibility Laws in the applicable jurisdiction. In addition, Renter agrees to indemnify Owner and hold Owner harmless from any Renters use, operation or possession of the vehicle. Owner relying on Renters maintenance of said liability and property damage insurance does not provide any coverage whatsoever unless required to do so by the Financial Responsibility Laws in the applicable jurisdiction, or by specific waiver signed by Owner. If Primary Liability Coverage is provided because of applicable jurisdiction statute or specific waiver, coverage is limited to the minimum financial responsibility liability limits as required by the applicable jurisdiction.

7. PERSONAL INJURY PROTECTION (PIP) NO FAULT COVERAGE: PIP/no fault coverage are neither provided nor considered and Renter expressly agrees to waive any right to claim PIP/no fault protection from Owner, and relies on the coverage provided in his/her own personal insurance policy. If Owner is required to provide said coverage by Financial Responsibility Law of the applicable jurisdiction, coverage is limited to the minimum financial responsibility requirements of said applicable jurisdiction.

8. UNINSURED AND [redacted]RINSURED MOTORIST PROTECTION: Uninsured and underinsured Motorist Protection is neither contemplated, nor provided as part of this agreement. Renter expressly agrees to waive any right to claim uninsured and/or underinsured motorist protection from Owner unless said coverage is required to be provided by the Financial Responsibility Laws in the applicable jurisdiction.

9. PERSONAL ACCIDENT INSURANCE (PAI): PAI does not cover third parties for damage or injury. Coverage is limited to reimbursing Renter, driver, or passenger for expenses incurred because of hospitalization and/or for loss of life because of accident; is applicable only if Renter requests coverage by initialing applicable block on face of this agreement; Renter pays for such coverage, and is subject to terms and conditions in the actual P.A.I. policy and rental agreement.

10. OWNER'S FINANCIAL RESPONSIBILITY. UNLESS LAW REQUIRES, DOES NOT EXTEND TO:

(a) Injuries to the Renter, driver, or passengers while riding in, alighting from, entering into or on the vehicle.

(b) Liability imposed upon or assumed by anyone under any worker's compensation act, plan, or contract.

(c) Bodily injury or property damage occurring while the vehicle is used as a commercial vehicle or for a commercial purpose.

(d) Any injuries or losses arising from the operation of vehicle in violation of any provision or condition of this agreement.

11. Accidents must be immediately reported in writing to the office where the vehicle was rented and in any event within 24 hours after an accident. The Renter, driver or any passenger shall cooperate fully with Owner in all manners connected with any claim or suit. Any suit papers, process or pleading must be delivered to the office from which the vehicle was rented. NONCOMPLIANCE CONSTITUTES A VIOLATION OF THE CONTRACT AND VOIDS ALL COVERAGES PROVIDED HEREIN.

12. If there is evidence of violation of any provision of this agreement, Renter agrees to indemnify Owner for all losses, damage, costs, expenses paid or incurred by the Owner resulting from the use or operation of the vehicle and renter will present a claim to his/her insurance carrier for such losses, damages, costs, and expense. If Renter has no insurance to cover said loss, Renter agrees to pay Owner for all such losses. Any and all disputes arising from the rental of this vehicle must be resolved by a court of competent jurisdiction.

13. Any coverage or protection referred to in this agreement are null and void in Mexico or Canada. The vehicle cannot be taken or driven out of the Continental United States for any reason.

14. VIOLATIONS OF THE CONTRACT: A violation of the contract shall exist if the vehicle is used or driven

(a) In violation of any term or condition of this agreement.

(b) By any person under the age of 21 without Owner's written permission, or by anyone who has given a fictitious name or false age, address, or any information whatsoever.

(c) For any illegal purpose, in a race, speed contest, to tow a vehicle or trailer.

(d) By any person if there is reasonable evidence they were under the influence of narcotics, intoxicants, or drugs.

(e) By any person other than Renter without written consent of Owner.

(f) Outside the state of rental without written consent of Owner.

(g) By anyone presenting or using a license which has been revoked or suspended or using a license which is not his/her own or is not fully valid.

(h) If Renter or driver leaves the vehicle unlocked or fails to secure the keys.

(i) On other than a public highway, private road or driveway.

(j) In a reckless or imprudent manner or if the vehicle is deliberately damaged.

(k) Or if Renter misrepresents facts to Owner pertaining to rental, use, or operation of the vehicle.

15. Upon termination of Renter's right to operate said vehicle by reason of violation of any condition herein stated, or by Owners demand, Renter agrees to cease using said vehicle, to notify Owner, and pay all expenses incurred by Owner in returning vehicle to place of rental. Renter agrees that any continued operation of vehicle after a violation, is an operation without the knowledge, consent or permission of Owner and Owner may notify police that said car has been stolen and Renter releases and discharges Owner from any liability and all claims of any nature arising therefrom. Owner has right to seize, without legal process or notice to Renter, said vehicle at any time or place and Renter waives all claims for damages connected with such seizure.

16. RENTER'S INDEMNITY PROVISION: Renter shall defend, indemnify, and hold Owner harmless from all losses, liabilities, damages, injuries, claims, demands, costs and expense connected with the possession or use of the rental vehicle including claims of or liabilities to third parties due to abandonment, conversion, concealment, or unauthorized sale of the vehicle or confiscation of the vehicle by governmental authority, for any unlawful or improper use.

17. ALL CHARGES ARE SUBJECT TO FINAL AUDIT.

18. RENTER AUTHORIZES OWNER TO SUBMIT FOR PAYMENT CREDIT CARD VOUCHERS CREDIT CARD HAS BEEN PRESENTED AS A MEANS OF DEPOSIT OR SECURITY AT THE T[redacted] CAR WAS RENTED, INCLUDING, IF ANY THIRD PARTY, TO WHOM A BILLING WAS DIRECTE[redacted] REFUSES TO MAKE PAYMENT. Credit card vouchers may also be used to pay any unpaid traffic parking violations or damages incurred to the vehicle during Renter's possession of the vehicle.

19. POWER OF ATTORNEY: Renter hereby grants and appoints to Owner a Limited Power of A[redacted] to present Insurance claims, either third party liability or physical damage, to Renter's Insurance c[redacted] and to endorse Renter's name on insurance payments for charges or damages resulting from the possession of Owner's vehicle.

20. If any provision of this rental agreement is unlawful, contrary to public policy, void or unenforceable, remaining provisions shall continue in full force and effect.

This provision is made part of the Rental Agreement and supersedes paragraph 6 of the Rental Agreement only when signed by the Renter and owner's authorized representative. This provision, properly executed, provides primary liability coverage equal to but not exceeding the minimum state liability coverages as dictated by the financial responsibility requirements of the applicable jurisdiction. Any violation of the Rental Agreement of which this provision is a part voids any coverages provided herein.

RE: Status Reports for Outstanding Leads.

Lead #27 - InterRedec as a RICO conspirator.

On 11/6/92, writer and SSA [redacted] and DOJ Trial Attorney (TA) [redacted] met with Federal Reserve representatives [redacted] in New York, to discuss the possibility of the Federal Reserve increasing their outstanding civil lien against GHAITH PHARAON, based on evidence supporting PHARAON's illegal activity in the purchase of CenTrust subordinated debentures and stock and in the acquisition and sale of the National Bank of Georgia. The increase in fines and penalties would be satisfied through additional liens against InterRedec, Inc. [redacted] agreed that this would be acceptable and that they would review the necessary procedures with their people and contact the FBI in the near future. b6 b7C Lead #27 is pending, awaiting direction from the Federal Reserve.

Lead #38 - Classified Documents

Lead was reassigned to the writer on 11/17/92. Writer has met with TA [redacted] and upon [redacted] receiving the appropriate clearances, the specific classified documents will be reviewed. Writer also requested [redacted] to query appropriate DOJ personnel concerning the results of a letter sent to [redacted] dated 2/25/92. b6 b7C

Lead #38 is pending, awaiting [redacted] clearances and subsequent review of documents. b6 b7C

RE: LEAD # 84 Modern Healthcare Services, Inc.

Referenced lead set forth information that DOJ Fraud Section Principal Deputy Chief [redacted] reported being called by [redacted] Atlanta. [redacted] said he was told by [redacted] that they were about to serve summonses on several BCCI-related entities, including Modern Healthcare Services, Inc., and wanted to know if such service would disrupt the BCCI investigation. b6 b7C b7E

After repeated exchanges of telephone messages, writer spoke with [redacted] on 11/25/92. [redacted] explained that he was [redacted] b6 b7C b7E

[redacted] said he had previously phoned [redacted] with his questions, but [redacted] had no information for him. [redacted] explained that he wanted to insure that the FBI had no ongoing investigation of the hospital entities. b6 b7C

Writer informed [redacted] that there was no such ongoing investigation by the Agents assigned to the BCCI matter. [redacted] was asked to refer to the appropriate agencies, anything his investigation uncovers of a criminal nature. [redacted] said he was aware of the jurisdiction and interest investigative agencies would have in such evidence, and said he has made such referrals in the past. Writer provided [redacted] with the main phone number to the BCCI squad and the name of SSA [redacted] should he have additional questions or need to make a referral. b6 b7C

RE: Lead #2: Illegal Guns and Arms Dealings

This lead deals with the identification of Arms Dealers and determining if they had accounts with BCCI.

The writer spent a total of four weeks in London at the BCCI overseas headquarters from July until October, 1992. During this time an extensive records review operation was set up under the writer's supervision. During this operation several million pages of records were reviewed and numerous meetings were held with the liquidators of BCCI and the British authorities investigating this matter.

A few important facts are set out here regarding BCCI record keeping practices with regard to account holders:

1) An account holder did not have a unique account number. The number may have been previously used by another unrelated person or entity.

2) Account numbers were maintained separately in each to branch. There was no central record of account numbers. The same account number will exist in two or three branches belonging to two or three different account holders.

3) Very little and many times no identification or personal data was needed to open an account. The writer observed on a number of accounts that simply a letter or memo stating a name and post office box in some country was all of the identifying data in that account.

4) Records archival procedures were non-existent at BCCI. Old records were simply carried to a warehouse and deposited without any particular order. In attempting to locate account folders on occasions the writer could give the full name, alleged account number and SSAN yet the liquidators would be unable to find the account information. The same situation existed with closed accounts.

The above information is set forth to point out the impossibility of determining account information with having specific information. Even with specific information, the search will often prove to be fruitless.

On 12/9/92, writer met with TA [redacted] and SSA [redacted] to review the specific classified documents in the possession of SSA [redacted] It was determined that the only viable lead was to try to further identify the "possible U.S. person" referred to in the documents. Dear Special Agent [redacted]

As you know, I have been retained to represent the interests of [redacted] in connection with an investigation being conducted by the F.B.I. You have asked that [redacted] voluntarily produce certain documents which are currently in his possession. As I am sure you realize, [redacted] was not an officer, or director of Investrade Development of Virginia, Inc. b6 b7C

As his counsel, I am concerned about his ability to produce certain documents and we have sought permission from the appropriate individuals. Unfortunately, to date, we have not received a response.

Moreover, I am concerned that certain information contained in the files may be protected by the attorney-client privilege and possibly other privileges.

In light of the foregoing, we would respectfully request that the Government subpoena the requested documents from [redacted] A court order would serve to protect [redacted] and certainly serve the interests of justice. I want you to know that [redacted] desires to cooperate in this investigation and wants to demonstrate his good faith to the United States Government. Moreoever he does not believe he has done anything wrong. b6 b7C

For your information, meetings were scheduled with [redacted] b6 b7C in London, England during the weekend of December 5, 1992. [redacted] failed to appear at these meetings. As such, the FBI will not attempt to contact her any further.

Again, it is the FBI's position that [redacted] b3 b6 be served a FGJ subpoena to testify, if the motive of the case is truly to determine bribes made to politicians. Should [redacted] b7C assert his 5th Amendment rights, [redacted] Either [redacted] will tell the truth and a successful investigation can be conducted, or he could lie, which would lead to his prosecution at a later date. Either way, the government would take an aggressive position in this investigation.

The letters rogatory to Luxembourg is ready for signature. We forwarded an advance copy to [redacted], he was in Luxembourg this week and discussed this with [redacted] the Luxembourg liquidator. [redacted] recommend we include additional details about the persons for whom we are requesting records. They want us to link each individual to a particular case and specify whether an individual is a defendant, target or witness. I will discuss this with [redacted] on Monday. The prosecutors had concerns about identifying witnesses and targets. b6 b7C

RE: LEAD # 62 - ASSETS OF BCCI SHAREHOLDERS AND "FRONT-MEN" STATUS REPORT

The writer sent a Bureau wide airtel (11/3/92) requesting that the field offices search indices for the major BCCI shareholders and "front-men". As of this date over half of the offices have responded, none have indicated that assets of the shareholders/"front-men" exists.

There are assets in the U.S. which belong to GHAITH PHARAON and [redacted] These assets are being looked at by both the DOJ-AFO and the Federal Reserve. DOJ-AFO has and will consider going [redacted] after some of the assets of CLARK CLIFFORD and but only after the trial has taken place. b6 b7C

To date the writer has not reviewed any 'Kerry Report' documents, which may lead to additional assets held by other shareholders/front-men.

The writer requested that the FBI, Butte Information Technology Center (BITC) conduct searches on the shareholders/front-men and related companies to the shareholders/front-men. BITC responded and as of this date there is no indication that other assets exists.

RECOMMENDATION

The writer recommends that LEAD 62 be placed under LEAD 30 (asset forfeiture).

In the KERRY REPORT, the authors reported that they had received information that BCCI participated in the manipulation of security markets (specifically penney-stock) in Canada and the Netherlands. In conjunction with other requests for documents from U.S. SENATE SUBCOMMITTEE (SENATOR JOHN KERRY) regarding BCCI, SA [redacted] requested documentation from [redacted] to corroborate the allegations and request for further investigation. b6 b7C

On 1/5/93, [redacted] was interviewed pursuant to the written request for documents by DOJ ATTORNEY [redacted] regarding 20 items that were being addressed by the FBI. In regard to captioned lead, [redacted] advised that the information contained in the KERRY REPORT was derived from similar sources that were used by authors LARRY GURWIN and JOHN TRUELL, who recently published a book about BCCI entitled "False Profits." The write-up from the book was, in [redacted]s opinion, the best documentary explanation for the basis of including the allegation in the Subcommittee report. Therefore, [redacted] furnished photocopies of selected pages from "False Profits" and recommended that the FBI interview GURWIN. A review of those pages disclosed that the allegation was based on other subjects who ran "boilerroom operations" with fictitious penney-stock investments and those operations used BCCI as its bank. There was no information indicating that anyone at BCCI was involved in the schemes. b6 b7C

By prior agreement with the Department of Justice (DOJ) in the person of [redacted] Principal Deputy Chief, Fraud Section and the liquidators for the Bank of Credit and Commerce International (BCCI), Touche Ross, Incorporated in the person of [redacted] it was decided that the liquidators would furnish available information on those persons making claims against BCCI to the DOJ. DOJ would in turn determine to the extent feasible if the money claimed was derived from illegal activities. b6 b7C

The FBI conducted Global searches on the names which were provided. However, DOJ should be advised that the FBI can not disclose to third parties the contents of its files or, in some cases, even the existence of such files; further, that any investigation by the FBI to determine whether certain funds are ill-gotten gains may only be initiated when facts or circumstances reasonably indicate that, in relation to such funds, a federal crime has been, is being or will be committed. In the matter of determining the validity of claims filed by individuals and companies against funds held by BCCI's liquidators, it is incumbent on the liquidators to provide sufficient cause for the FBI to initiate an inquiry.

Since the objective of the search was only to determine those individuals or companies which may have derived money form illegal activities, it was decided that after the Global searches were completed WMFO would only review searches resulting in positive hits, of either individuals or companies, which were from a main file less than seven years old. Also, WMFO would not review files of individuals or companies which were previously known to WMFO.

CLERK, U.S. DISTRICT COURT
DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA

THE GRAND JURY CHARGES:

COUNT ONE

Introduction

AT ALL TIMES MATERIAL TO THIS INDICTMENT:

1. The Federal Reserve System ("FRS") was an agency of the United States. The Board of Governors of the FRS ("the Board") had primary responsibility for supervising and regulating activities of bank holding companies and had residual responsibility for United States offices of foreign banks.

2. The Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation ("FDIC") was an agency of the United States. The FDIC supervised FDIC-insured, state-chartered savings banks which were not members of the FRS. The FDIC examined and supervised those banks under its purview, approved or denied applications for structural or corporate changes, and ruled on applications for insurance. The

FDIC insured deposits in amounts up to $100,000 per account in banks which it insured.

3. The Federal Home Loan Bank Board ("FHLBB") was an agency of the United States established to regulate and supervise savings and loan associations and savings banks insured by the Federal Savings and Loan Insurance Corporation ("FSLIC"). As part of its duties, the FHLBB governed the FSLIC. The FHLBB examined insured institutions to ensure they were operated in a safe and sound manner and in conformity with applicable laws and regulations.

4. The FSLIC was an agency of the United States established to protect depositors by insuring deposits in savings and loan associations and in certain savings banks in amounts up to $100,000 per account.

5. The Office of the Comptroller of the Currency ("OCC") was an agency of the United States. The OCC regulated, examined and supervised nationally-chartered banks to ensure they were operated in a safe and sound manner and in conformity with applicable laws and regulations.

6. Independence Bank ("Independence"), Encino, California, was chartered, regulated and supervised by the State of California and had deposits insured by the FDIC.

7. The National Bank of Georgia (sometimes referred to as "NBG"), Atlanta, Georgia, was regulated and supervised by the OCC and had deposits insured by the FDIC.

8. GRP, Inc. was a corporation organized and existing under the laws of the State of Georgia, and was owed by GHAITH R. PHARAON. GRP, Inc., at times, was the holding company for NBG.

9. NBG Financial Corporation was a corporation organized and existing under the laws of the State of Georgia. NBG Financial Corporation, from 1983 onward, was the holding company of NBG.

10. Interedec (Georgia), Ltd. was a foreign company organized under the laws of the Bahamas, and was the sole owner of NBG Financial Corporation.

11. Interedec (Georgia), N.V. was a foreign corporation organized under the laws of the Netherlands Antilles, and was owned by GHAITH R. PHARAON. Interedec (Georgia) N.V. was the sole owner of Interedec (Georgia) Ltd.

12. Financial General Bankshares was a bank holding company authorized under the Bank Holding Company Act. Financial General Bankshares had numerous subsidiary banks with state and federal charters. The subsidiary banks were insured by the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation (FDIC).

13. Credit and Commerce American Holdings (CCAH), and its wholly owned subsidiary, Credit and Commerce American Investment (CCAI), were corporations formed in 1978 to acquire control and ownership of Financial General Bankshares. CCAH and CCAI were bank holding companies under the Bank Holding Company Act. CCAH and CCAI owned several subsidiary banks doing business under the name "First American Bank." The various First American Banks had national bank charters and were insured by the FDIC.

14. As of August 9, 1989, the Office of Thrift Supervision ("OTS") succeeded to the interests of the FHLBB and the FSLIC with respect to the regulation and supervision of savings and loan associations and certain savings banks, and the FDIC succeeded the FSLIC as the insurer.

15. CenTrust Savings Bank, a State Savings Bank ("CenTrust"), was located in Miami, Florida, and was chartered by the State of Florida. CenTrust was regulated and supervised by the FHLBB and had deposits insured by the FSLIC until August 9, 1989. CenTrust was also subject to regulation and supervision by the Florida Department of Banking and Finance.

16. As of August 9, 1989, the insurance of the deposits of CenTrust was transferred to the FDIC and the OTS began its role as regulator and supervisor of CenTrust.

17. CenTrust Trust, formerly the Westport Company, was a wholly-owned subsidiary of CenTrust.

18. BCCI Holdings (Luxembourg), S.A. ("BCCI Holdings") was a foreign bank holding company established under the laws of Luxembourg.

19. BCCI Holdings owned and controlled Bank of Credit and Commerce International S.A. ("BCCI S.A."), a foreign bank established under the laws of Luxembourg. BCCI S.A. operated agencies in Los Angeles, California and New York, New York.

20. BCCI Holdings also owned and controlled Bank of Credit and Commerce International (Overseas) Limited ("BCCI Overseas"), a foreign bank established under the laws of the Cayman Islands.

BCCI Overseas operated agencies in Miami, Tampa and Boca Raton, Florida.

21. The term "BCCI Group," as used in this Superseding Indictment, means the combination of BCCI Holdings, BCCI S.A. and BCCI Overseas.

22. International Credit and Investment Company (Overseas) Limited ("ICIC Overseas") was a foreign bank established under the laws of the Cayman Islands.

23. Defendant AGHA HASAN ABEDI was a principal of BCCI Holdings, BCCI (Overseas), BCCI S.A. and ICIC Overseas.

24. Defendant SWALEH NAQVI was a principal of BCCI Holdings, BCCI (Overseas), BCCI S.A. and ICIC Overseas.

25. Defendant GHAITH R. PHARAON was a Saudi Arabian businessman and a shareholder in the BCCI Group.

The Conspiracy

26. Beginning in or about January 1978, the exact date being unknown to the Grand Jury, and continuing until in or about July 1991, in the District of Columbia and elsewhere, the Defendants

AGHA HASAN ABEDI,

SWALEH NAQVI, and

knowingly and willfully combined, conspired, confederated, and agreed together and with each other, and with others, both known and unknown to the Grand Jury,

(a) to defraud the United States, in particular the Board,

1325015-000-7941

the OCC, FDIC, FHLBB, and FSLIC, of and concerning their right to have their business and affairs conducted free from deceit, dishonesty, impairment and obstruction, by impeding, hindering, obstructing and defeating by deceitful and dishonest means the lawful functions and operations of said agencies of the United States in regulating and supervising activities of the BCCI Group and their United States branches or agencies, ICIC Overseas, National Bank of Georgia, CCAH, Independence, and CenTrust, and

(b) to commit offenses against the United States, that is:

(1) to devise and intend to devise a scheme and artifice to defraud and to obtain money and property, namely, insurance protection and continued insurance protection by the FDIC, backed by funds and security of the United States, of deposits of Independence, by means of fraudulent and false pretenses, representations and promises, and to transmit and cause to be transmitted by means of wire communications in interstate and foreign commerce, certain writings, signs, signals, pictures, and sounds, for the purpose of executing such scheme and artifice, in violation of Title 18, United States Code, Section 1343;

(2) to devise and intend to devise a scheme and artifice to defraud and to obtain money and property, namely, insurance protection and continued insurance protection by the FDIC, backed by funds and security of the United States, of deposits of Independence, by means of fraudulent and false pretenses, representations and promises, and for the purpose of executing and attempting to execute the scheme and artifice, knowingly to cause to be delivered by the United States Postal Service various mail matter, in violation of Title 18, United States Code, Section 1341;

(3) to knowingly execute and attempt to execute a scheme and artifice to defraud a federally insured financial institution, and by means of fraudulent and false pretenses, representations and promises to obtain moneys, funds and other property owned by or under the control of such a financial institution, in violation of Title 18, United States Code, Section 1344;

(4) to knowingly and willfully make false, fictitious and fraudulent statements to the FHLBB, and to knowingly and willfully make and cause to be made false entries in the books, reports and statements of CenTrust, in violation of Title 18, United States Code, Sections 1001 and 1006;

(5) to knowingly and willfully cause to be made false entries, including material omissions, in the books and records of Independence with the intent to deceive the Board and FDIC, in violation of Title 18, United States Code, Sections 1001 and 1005;

(6) to devise and intend to devise a scheme and artifice to defraud persons and entities throughout the United States of money and property, namely, funds from purchasers of subordinated debentures issued by CenTrust, by means of false and fraudulent pretenses, representations and promises, and for purposes of executing said scheme, to transmit and cause to be transmitted by means of wire communications in interstate and foreign commerce, certain writings, signs, signals, pictures, and sounds, in violation of Title 18, United States Code, Section 1343;

(7) to devise and intend to devise a scheme and artifice to defraud persons and entities throughout the United States of money and property, namely, funds from purchasers of subordinated debentures issued by CenTrust, by means of false and fraudulent pretenses, representations and promises, and for the purpose of executing said scheme, to cause to be placed in an authorized depository for mail matter things and matters to be delivered by the United States Postal Service, in violation of Title 18, United States Code, Section 1341.

The Manners and Means of the Conspiracy

It was a part of the conspiracy that:

27. Defendants would enrich Defendants AGHA HASAN ABEDI, SWALEH NAQVI, GHAITH R. PHARAON, their associates, and the BCCI Group by taking advantage of opportunities to deceive and exploit United States financial institutions, deceive United States Federal regulatory agencies, and deceive persons and entities throughout the United States.

It was further part of the Conspiracy that:

28. Defendants AGHA HASAN ABEDI, SWALEH NAQVI, their co-conspirators and the BCCI Group would acquire and maintain control and influence over National Bank of Georgia and Independence with the aid of GHAITH R. PHARAON, through deceptive stock purchases by way of hidden stock pledges, nominee agreements, nonrecourse loans, loan releases, beneficial interest agreements and outright falsehoods, fabrications and omissions in applications and reports filed with state and federal regulatory agencies.

29. Defendants AGHA HASAN ABEDI, SWALEH NAQVI their co-conspirators and the BCCI Group would acquire and maintain control and influence over CCAH, through deceptive stock purchases by way of hidden stock pledges, nominee agreements, nonrecourse loans, loan releases, beneficial interest agreements and outright falsehoods, fabrications and omissions in applications and reports filed with state and federal regulatory agencies.

30. Defendants AGHA HASAN ABEDI, SWALEH NAQVI their co-conspirators and the BCCI Group would use ICIC Overseas to facilitate deception of the Board, OCC, FDIC, FSLIC and FHLBB concerning the involvement of the BCCI Group, AGHA HASAN ABEDI, SWALEH NAQVI and GHAITH R. PHARAON in matters involving NBG, Independence and CCAH.

31. Defendant SWALEH NAQVI and his co-conspirators would deceive and cause the deception of regulators as to the amount of regulatory capital on the books of the National Bank of Georgia by engaging in a sham transaction which created the appearance of a $10 million capital infusion, when in truth and in fact, as the Defendants well knew, no capital infusion was made, said sham transactions occurring so that the National Bank of Georgia would obtain regulatory approval to purchase other banks.

32. When Defendant GHAITH R. PHARAON was in financial difficulty, in order to keep NBG assets under the control and influence of the BCCI Group, Defendants AGHA HASAN ABEDI and SWALEH NAQVI caused NBG to be sold to CCAH:

a) by participating in negotiations in which the sale price was negotiated;

b) by setting up real and sham "loans" to CCAH shareholders, amounting to approximately $220 million, for the purchase of additional CCAH stock, thus providing CCAH capital to purchase NBG.

33. Defendants AGHA HASAN ABEDI and SWALEH NAQVI would cause loans to be made from BCCI (Overseas) to the two highest ranking officers of CCAH for their purchase of CCAH shares, under the terms of these agreements:

a. The borrowers would not be held personally liable for the loans, rather the shares would be pledged to the BCCI Group and the BCCI Group would be limited to collecting against the CCAH shares pledged as collateral; and

b. The BCCI Group would agree to find a buyer for the CCAH shares at a "mutually agreeable price";

c. The loan and share agreements were structured such that the BCCI Group's promises to hold the borrowers harmless on the loans and to find a buyer for the CCAH stock at a "mutually agreeable price" were in separate documents -- "side agreements"

-- from the loan agreements and the pledge agreements.

34. Less than 18 months after the aforementioned loans from BCCI (Overseas) to the two CCAH officers, Defendant SWALEH NAQVI would cause the sale and transfer of the borrowers' CCAH shares at a price resulting in a profit of millions of dollars to the borrowers.

35. Defendant GHAITH R. PHARAON, the owner of approximately 25 percent of the stock of CenTrust, would use his relationship with the BCCI Group and Defendant SWALEH NAQVI to arrange for a branch of the BCCI Group to purchase approximately $25,000,000 of the total $150,000,000 CenTrust subordinated debentures in order to mislead and deceive regulators and investors as to the true market for the CenTrust subordinated debentures.

36. Defendant GHAITH R. PHARAON would agree with the BCCI Group and Defendant SWALEH NAQVI that the BCCI Group would purchase the CenTrust subordinated debentures and that Defendant GHAITH R. PHARAON would guarantee the repurchase of the subordinated debentures at BCCI's acquisition cost, thereby eliminating market risk to BCCI and knowingly facilitating the deception of other investors as to the true market for the CenTrust subordinated debentures.

Overt Acts in Furtherance of the Conspiracy

In furtherance of the conspiracy, and in order to effect the objects thereof, the defendants and their co-conspirators committed and caused to be committed, in the District of Columbia and elsewhere, the following overt acts, among others:

Overt Acts Relating to NBG

Initial Acquisition

1. On or about October or November 1977, in New York, New York, AGHA HASAN ABEDI met with a shareholder of the National Bank of Georgia concerning possible United States investments in financial institutions.

2. On or about November 1977, in Washington, D.C., AGHA HASAN ABEDI, SWALEH NAQVI, and a representative of GHAITH R. PHARAON met concerning potential bank purchases, including National Bank of Georgia.

3. On or about December 27, 1977, at an unknown location, GHAITH R. PHARAON signed an agreement with a shareholder of the National Bank of Georgia to purchase the shareholder's shares ("Agreement No. 1").

4. On or about December 27, 1977, at an unknown location, GHAITH R. PHARAON signed an agreement with certain shareholders of the National Bank of Georgia to purchase certain shares of NBG stock (the "SPS Agreement").

5. On or about January 5, 1978, in Hong Kong, an affiliate of the BCCI Group provided GHAITH R. PHARAON with approximately $2,438,120 for the purchase of certain NBG shares under Agreement No. 1.

6. On or about May 18, 1978, in Saudi Arabia, GHAITH R. PHARAON sent a telex to London, England, which requested his brother to contact AGHA HASAN ABEDI or SWALEH NAQVI to send $10.25 million to an account under the control of GHAITH R.

PHARAON in Houston, Texas, of which $6 million was to be used to purchase NBG shares.

7. On or about May 18, 1978, in London, England, an employee of the BCCI Group prepared an internal memorandum instructing $10.25 million be transferred from BCCI (Overseas) Grand Cayman branch, to an account in the name of Arabian Service Corporation, Redec Escrow Account No. 10060635 at First City National Bank in Houston, Texas.

8. On or about May 22, 1978, the BCCI Group transferred by wire $10.25 million from BCCI (Overseas), Grand Cayman branch, to an account under the control of GHAITH R. PHARAON at First City National Bank in Houston, Texas.

9. On or about May 30, 1978, at an unknown location, the attorney-in-fact for GHAITH R. PHARAON signed a Form F-11 filed with the OCC, which stated in part the source of the funds to be used to purchase certain shares under the SPS Agreement was to be "Pharaon's own personal funds unless Pharaon arranges financing for a portion of the purchase price" and that "[n]o such financing arrangements have yet been made."

10. On or about June 7, 1978, at an unknown location, the attorney-in-fact for GHAITH R. PHARAON signed a Form F-11 filed with the OCC, which stated in part that the source of the funds to be used by GHAITH R. PHARAON to purchase certain shares, both under Agreement No. 1 and the SPS Agreement, was "Pharaon's own personal funds unless Pharaon arranges financing for a portion of the purchase price" and "[n]o such financing arrangements have yet been made."

11. On or about June 30, 1983, the BCCI Group caused a $5,000,000 capital contribution to NBG Financial Corporation.

12. On or about July 7, 1983, an employee of the BCCI Group confirmed to a representative of GHAITH R. PHARAON that GHAITH R. PHARAON was liable for only 50% of the June 30, 1983 capital contribution described in Overt Act No. 11.

Sham $10 Million Transaction

13. Beginning on or about September 1980 and continuing through on or about December 1983, GHAITH R. PHARAON, through entities under his control, sought to and did acquire Georgia banks, including First Bank & Trust Company, Clayton County Bank and First Commercial Bank of Buford.

14. On or before September 23, 1980, GHAITH R. PHARAON contacted SWALEH NAQVI to discuss the acquisition of the banks.

15. On or before February 15, 1982, in response to the Federal Reserve Bank of Atlanta's requirement of an additional capital contribution to GRP, Inc. prior to approval of the acquisition of the smaller banks, an attorney for GRP, Inc. and NBG represented that an additional $10,000,000 capital contribution would be made by GHAITH R. PHARAON.

16. On or about March 9, 1982, an employee of the National Bank of Georgia requested another employee of the National Bank of Georgia to have $10,000,000 wire transferred from the BCCI Group to GRP, Inc.'s account at the First National Bank of Boston, said transaction to occur on April 26, 1982.

17. On or about April 23, 1982, in Atlanta, Georgia, the second of the employees mentioned in Overt Act No. 16, with the help and assistance of two other National Bank of Georgia employees, sent a telex to SWALEH NAQVI in Karachi, Pakistan, which set forth certain financial data concerning bank acquisitions and requested funds be sent to an account under the control of GHAITH R. PHARAON so that said funds could be used to bolster NBG's assets, with a promise to return the funds five (5) days after the transaction.

18. On or about April 29, 1982, the BCCI Group caused $10,000,000 to wired into GRP Inc.'s account at First National Bank of Boston, and subsequently wired to GRP, Inc.'s account at the National Bank of Georgia.

19. On or about May 6, 1982, an employee of the National Bank of Georgia caused $10,000,000 to be wired from NBG in Atlanta, Georgia, through Bank of America International in New York City, to the BCCI Group in London, England.

Stock Pledges by Pharaon to the BCCI Group

20. In or before May 1980, GHAITH R. PHARAON directed an employee in Houston, Texas to forward NBG shares to an affiliate of the BCCI Group in Geneva, Switzerland.

21. Beginning on or before May 23, 1980, the shares were forwarded to an affiliate of the BCCI Group on the instructions of GHAITH R. PHARAON, with the receipt of such shares being reported to SWALEH NAQVI.

22. On or about January 1, 1985, GHAITH R. PHARAON executed a Memorandum of Deposit of Stocks and Shares and other Marketable Securities under which GHAITH R. PHARAON pledged all outstanding shares of NBG Financial Corporation to the BCCI Group, which document, among its terms, granted the BCCI Group the right to:

> "exercise at its discretion (in the name of the Depositor or otherwise at any time whether before or after any demand for payment hereunder and without any further consent or authority on the part of the Depositor) in respect of the Securities or any of them any voting rights as if BCC or its nominees were a sole beneficial owner thereof."

23. On or about January 1, 1985, GHAITH R. PHARAON executed certain documents relating to the transfer of stock of the holding company for NBG.

Personnel Matters

24. In or about 1979, AGHA HASAN ABEDI met with GHAITH R. PHARAON and others in London, England to introduce and recommend a new Chief Executive Officer for NBG, said person having been previously associated with BCCI.

25. On or about January 1980, the person recommended by AGHA HASAN ABEDI was hired as Chief Executive Officer of NBG (Employee No. 1).

26. On or about October 15, 1982, Employee No. 1 authorized a $1,500 housing differential for another former employee of the BCCI Group, then employed by NBG (Employee No. 2) to "offset the expenses incurred for housing because of [his] being required by the Bank of Credit and Commerce International S.A. to relocate to Atlanta."

27. On or about October 15, 1982, Employee No. 1 authorized a $500 housing differential for another former employee of the BCCI Group, then employed by NBG (Employee No. 3) to "offset the expenses incurred for housing because of [his] being required by the Bank of Credit and Commerce International S.A. to relocate to Atlanta."

28. On or about October 15, 1982, Employee No. 1 authorized a $500 housing differential for another former employee of the BCCI Group, then employed by NBG (Employee No. 4) to "offset the expenses incurred for housing because of [his] being required by the Bank of Credit and Commerce International S.A. to relocate to Atlanta."

29. On or about September 20, 1985, Employee No. 2 authorized a $1,000 increase, retroactive to January 1985, for Employee No. 4 to bring his salary in line with BCCI compensation policy.

Americas Coordinating Committee

30. On or about April, 1985, the BCCI Group formed a group to monitor the BCCI Group's United States and Latin American operations, denominated the "Americas Coordinating Committee."

31. On or about April 24, 1985, in New York, New York, officers of the BCCI Group held a meeting of the Americas Coordinating Committee, which included among its attendees Employee No. 2 from the National Bank of Georgia.

32. On or about June 2, 1985, at the BCCI Regional Caribbean offices in Miami, Florida, officers of the BCCI Group held a meeting of the Americas Coordinating Committee, which included among its attendees Employee No. 2 from the National Bank of Georgia.

33. On or about July 22, 1985, in New York City, New York, employees of the BCCI Group held a meeting of the Americas Coordinating Committee, which included among its attendees Employee No. 2 from the National Bank of Georgia.

Overt Acts In Connection of Sale of NBG to CCAH

34. On or about September 19, 1986, Defendant SWALEH NAQVI met with a National Bank of Georgia employee in London concerning the sale of NBG to CCAH.

35. On or about December 18, 1986, in Washington, D.C., documents in the nature of an "Option Agreement" were signed under which CCAH was to pay Defendant GHAITH R. PHARAON approximately $80 million for an option to purchase NBG.

36. On or about August 19, 1987, in New York, New York, documents were signed completing the transfer of NBG to CCAH for the balance of approximately $140 million plus interest.

Overt Acts Relating to CCAH

37. Between on or about 1982 through 1988, Defendants AGHA HASAN ABEDI and SWALEH NAQVI did cause to be created and signed documents in the nature of loan and pledge agreements related to the purchase of CCAH stock.

38. On or about a date after July 25, 1986, an employee of the BCCI Group signed documents relating to: (1) loans from BCCI (Overseas) to two members of CCAH management for the borrowers' purchase of CCAH shares at approximately $2,200 per share; (2) the borrowers' pledging the CCAH shares to BCCI (Overseas) as security for the loan; and (3) side agreements, which, among other terms, stated that the borrowers would not be held personally liable on their loans and that BCCI would agree to find a buyer for the shares at a "mutually agreeable price".

39. On or about August 14, 1987, an employee of the BCCI Group signed a set of documents, similar to those described in Overt Act No. 38 above, relating to additional loans by BCCI (Overseas) for the purchase by the borrowers of shares of CCAH and the sale of said CCAH shares;

40. On or about March 31, 1988, one of the borrowers sold 3,200 shares of CCAH stock and the other sold 1600 shares of CCAH stock for $6,800 per share in a transaction arranged by defendant SWALEH NAQVI resulting in a profit of several million dollars to the two borrowers.

Overt Acts Relating to Independence Bank

41. On or about January 27, 1984, in Los Angeles, California, Defendant AGHA HASAN ABEDI had a conversation with an employee of the BCCI Group working in California, concerning the purchase by the BCCI Group of a bank on the west coast of the United States.

42. On or about August 28, 1984, in California, the employee referred to in Overt Act No. 41 had a conversation with the then-Chairman of Independence, Encino, California concerning the fact that Independence was for sale.

43. On or about November 13, 1984, the employee referred to in Overt Act No. 41 wrote letters to Defendants AGHA HASAN ABEDI and SWALEH NAQVI, in each of which he discussed the acquisition by BCCI of Independence.

44. In or about November 1984, Defendant AGHA HASAN ABEDI had a telephone conversation with the employee referred to in Overt Act No. 41 in California, in which it was discussed that Defendant GHAITH R. PHARAON was interested in purchasing Independence himself.

45. On or about November 30, 1984, the employee of the BCCI Group referred to in Overt Act No. 41 signed a "letter of intent," confirming the willingness of a then-unnamed principal to purchase all of the capital stock of Independence.

46. Between in or about December 1984 and January 1985, Defendant GHAITH R. PHARAON in his personal capacity and Defendant SWALEH NAQVI on behalf of the BCCI Group signed an Investment Advisory Agreement.

47. Between in or about November of 1984 and April of 1985, representatives, agents and/or employees of the BCCI Group had conversations with the then owners of Independence concerning the purchase of Independence.

48. In or about April 1985, an employee of the BCCI Group had conversations with employees of the First National Bank of Boston ("Bank of Boston") concerning obtaining financing for Defendant GHAITH R. PHARAON to be used for a portion of the purchase price for Independence Bank.

49. On or about April 30, 1985, Defendant GHAITH R. PHARAON signed a stock purchase agreement with the then owners of Independence, pursuant to which Defendant GHAITH R. PHARAON agreed to purchase all of the capital stock of Independence Bank for $23,000,000.00.

50. On or about May 17, 1985, Defendant GHAITH R. PHARAON signed a memorandum agreement with Defendant ICIC Overseas, which agreement provided, among other things, that:

a. Pharaon and ICIC have agreed to acquire 100% of Independence from the present shareholders;

b. all shares would be held in the name of Pharaon but only 15% were to be held by Pharaon as the beneficial owner; and

c. Pharaon was to hold the remaining 85% of the shares in a fiduciary capacity for ICIC.

51. On or about May 17, 1985, Defendant SWALEH NAQVI signed the memorandum agreement referred to in Overt Act No. 50 on behalf of Defendant ICIC Overseas.

52. On or about June 10, 1985, Defendant GHAITH R. PHARAON signed a document entitled "Notice of Acquisition of Control" which was filed with the FDIC and the California State Department of Banking, which called for the following information in question number 3:

"Indicate the full name of each acquiring party or transferee, the total number of shares presently held by each, the total number of shares to be purchased or transferred to each and the total number of shares to be held by each following completion of the proposed transaction. Indicate names of beneficial owners if shares are to be registered in another name."

the response to which disclosed the only purchaser to be Defendant GHAITH R. PHARAON.

53. On or about June 11, 1985, in Los Angeles, California, Defendant GHAITH R. PHARAON met with members of the California State Banking Department, in the course of which meeting Defendant GHAITH R. PHARAON failed to disclose the existence of the agreement between Defendant ICIC Overseas and Defendant GHAITH R. PHARAON which was executed on or about May 17, 1985 and which is referred to in Overt Act No. 50.

54. On or about August 30, 1985, an employee of the BCCI Group had a conversation with another employee of the BCCI Group in which the first of these employees requested a loan be made by the BCCI Group to Defendant GHAITH R. PHARAON for purposes of acquiring Independence.

55. On or about August 30, 1985, an employee of the BCCI Group sent a telex which confirmed that the deposit of $8.5 million of Defendant GHAITH R. PHARAON will be held in an account at Banque Arabe et Internationale D'Investissement (BAII), Paris, France.

56. On or about August 29, 1985, an employee of the BCCI Group sent a telex to BAII which instructed BAII to confirm to the FDIC and the California State Banking Department, care of Defendant GHAITH R. PHARAON's attorney, that Defendant GHAITH R. PHARAON had in excess of $8.4 million on deposit with BAII, which funds were to be used by Defendant GHAITH R. PHARAON towards the purchase of Independence.

57. On or about September 4, 1985, BAII confirmed by telex to the California State Banking Department, care of Defendant GHAITH R. PHARAON's attorney, that it held in excess of $8.4 million on deposit for Defendant GHAITH R. PHARAON, which funds were to be used by Defendant GHAITH R. PHARAON towards the purchase of Independence.

58. On or about September 5, 1985, Defendant GHAITH R. PHARAON caused to be delivered to the California State Banking Department a letter. This letter stated that enclosed was a: "Telex dated September 4, 1985 also from BAII confirming that Pharaon has available in excess of $8.4 million on deposit for the portion of the purchase price not being financed."

59. In or about August 1985, employees of the BCCI Group had conversations with representatives of BAII concerning the issuance by BAII of a letter of credit to the Bank of Boston in the amount of $5 million.

60. On or about August 29, 1985, an employee of the BCCI Group sent a telex to BAII instructing BAII to confirm by telex to the FDIC and the California State Banking Department, care of Defendant GHAITH R. PHARAON's attorney, that BAII had agreed to issue a stand-by letter of credit in the amount of $5 million in favor of the Bank of Boston as security for the Bank of Boston's loan to Defendant GHAITH R. PHARAON to purchase Independence.

61. On or about August 30, 1985, BAII sent a telex to the California State Banking Department and the FDIC, in care of Defendant GHAITH R. PHARAON's attorney, concerning the issuance by BAII of a stand-by letter of credit in the amount of $5 million in favor of the Bank of Boston as security for the Bank of Boston loan to Defendant GHAITH R. PHARAON to purchase Independence.

62. On or about September 5, 1985, Defendant GHAITH R. PHARAON caused his attorney to deliver a letter to the California State Banking Department confirming the availability of the $5 million letter of credit to be issued by BAII.

63. On or about September 30, 1985, Defendant GHAITH R. PHARAON signed an "Acquisition Promissory Note" for $12.6 million with the Bank of Boston.

64. On or about October 1, 1985, BAII issued a stand-by letter of credit in the amount of $5 million in favor of the Bank of Boston, which letter of credit secured the Bank of Boston loan to Defendant GHAITH R. PHARAON.

65. On or about October 1, 1985, the BCCI Group issued a $5 million counter-guarantee to BAII.

66. On or about October 1, 1985, agents of the BCCI Group, and Defendant GHAITH R. PHARAON caused the Bank of Boston to take acts affecting the distribution of funds completing the sale of all the capital stock of Independence Bank to Defendant GHAITH R. PHARAON.

67. On or about October 1, 1985, Defendant GHAITH R. PHARAON appointed the first of the employees of the BCCI Group referred to in Overt Act No. 54 as a Director of Independence.

68. From in or about March 1986 to in or about January 1989, Defendants AGHA HASAN ABEDI and SWALEH NAQVI met with and corresponded with the Chief Executive Officer of Independence on numerous occasions regarding personnel and operational matters involving Independence.

69. On or about June 25, 1986, in Paris, France, Defendant GHAITH R. PHARAON wrote a letter to Defendant SWALEH NAQVI which stated in pertinent part:

"According to [the Chief Executive Officer of Independence], and even if I established a holding co. for the purpose of sheltering some of the bank's income it is unlikely that under the present capital structure the bank would greatly grow without any additional capital. In the present circumstances, and until I have worked out some kind of re-scheduling with the Redec banks, I may face some difficulties in arranging independent facilities for Independence Bk for additional capital.

"Therefore I would suggest that for the time being the 15/85 arrangement be maintained until we can determine the course we want Independence to take, and the degree of capital that needs to be made available, if we want the bank to grow, as well as the return on this capital, when compared to other investment opportunities.

"If after meeting with [the Chief Executive Officer of Independence] you are convinced that additional capital is required and the returns on such capital are attractive, I would be prepared to meet with you and modify the 15/85 arrangement in accordance with my earlier discussion with you and Mr. Abedi. Should this be the course to be followed it may also be necessary to have more support from BCCI in terms of management support, and international contacts."

70. On or about July 3, 1986, Defendant SWALEH NAQVI directed agents of the BCCI Group to cause BCCI Overseas (Panama) to make a loan in the amount of $12,631,000 to Defendant GHAITH R. PHARAON, which proceeds were used to repay the Bank of Boston loan to Defendant GHAITH R. PHARAON referred to in Overt Act No. 66.

71. In or about July of 1987, in London, England, Defendants AGHA HASAN ABEDI and SWALEH NAQVI met with an individual concerning prospective employment with Independence.

72. On or about December 29, 1987, Defendant SWALEH NAQVI directed an employee of the BCCI Group to cause BCCI Overseas (Grand Cayman) to advance $3,500,000 to Independence.

73. On or about May 17, 1988, an employee of the BCCI Group caused a branch of the BCCI Group in Bahrain to advance $4,000,000 to Defendant GHAITH R. PHARAON, which proceeds were added to the capital account of Independence.

74. On or about August 7, 1989, an employee of the BCCI Group caused a branch of the BCCI Group in Bahrain to advance $10,000,000 to Defendant GHAITH R. PHARAON, which proceeds were used to repay a BAII loan dated on or about July 5, 1989, in the amount of $10,000,000 to Defendant GHAITH R. PHARAON.

Overt Acts Relating to CenTrust Savings Bank

Application to FHLBB for Sale of Subordinated Debentures

75. On or about April 12, 1988, Defendant GHAITH R. PHARAON and another person caused to be filed a document titled "Amendment No. 1 To FORM OC" with the FHLBB.

76. Between on or about April 1, 1988, and on or about May 19, 1988, throughout the United States, Defendant GHAITH R. PHARAON and another person and various other employees and agents of CenTrust, together with underwriters, Merrill Lynch Capital Markets and Drexel Burnham Lambert, distributed a preliminary prospectus and conducted marketing seminars relating to the sale of CenTrust's subordinated debentures.

77. On or about May 16, 1988, Defendant GHAITH R. PHARAON and another person caused to be filed a document bearing the title "Amendment 3 to FORM OC" with the FHLBB.

78. On or about May 19, 1988, Defendant GHAITH R. PHARAON and another person caused to be filed with the FHLBB a document bearing the title "Amendment 4 to FORM OC."

79. On or about May 19, 1988, in Washington D.C., Defendant GHAITH R. PHARAON and another person caused to be filed with the FHLBB a document bearing the title "OFFERING CIRCULAR" relating to subordinated debentures to be issued by CenTrust.

Contacts with United States Regulators

80. On or about May 3, 1988, Defendant GHAITH R. PHARAON caused a letter to be delivered to the FHLBB in Washington D.C., which stated in pertinent part that the "subordinated debt issue would add $200 million of additional regulatory capital and thus, additional protection for the FSLIC insurance fund."

81. On or about May 3, 1988, Defendant GHAITH R. PHARAON communicated by telephone from in or near Savannah, Georgia, with a FHLBB employee in Washington, D.C., concerning the CenTrust subordinated debt issue.

82. In or about May of 1988, in Washington D.C., Defendant GHAITH R. PHARAON and another person met with employees of the FHLBB concerning the issuance by CenTrust of subordinated debentures.

Sale of Subordinated Debentures to Institutional Investors

83. On or about May 24, 1988, Defendant GHAITH R. PHARAON and others caused to be transmitted by wire approximately $2,500,000 from Safeco Insurance Co., Seattle, Washington, to a firm in New York, New York, for the purchase of CenTrust subordinated debentures.

84. On or about May 25, 1988, Defendant GHAITH R. PHARAON and others caused to be transmitted by wire approximately $3,000,000 from Washington Mutual Savings and Loan Association, Seattle, Washington to a firm in New York, New York, for the purchase of CenTrust subordinated debentures.

Sale to BCCI and Repurchase of CenTrust Subordinated Debentures

85. On or about May 23, 1988, in Savannah, Georgia, Defendant GHAITH R. PHARAON caused a telex to be sent from Interedec, a company controlled by Defendant GHAITH R. PHARAON, to London, England, related to the purchase of the CenTrust subordinated debentures in which it was indicated that the beneficiary of the $25 million of the CenTrust subordinated debentures "will be BCC in Paris."

86. On or about May 24, 1988, in New York, New York and Paris, France, Defendants SWALEH NAQVI and GHAITH R. PHARAON and the BCCI Defendants caused BCCI Overseas (Paris), a branch of the BCCI Group, to purchase approximately $25,000,000 of CenTrust subordinated debentures.

87. On or about June 24, 1988, Defendants GHAITH R. PHARAON and SWALEH NAQVI caused to be mailed from New York, New York, to London, England, three CenTrust subordinated debenture registered certificates, labelled RU 10, RU 11 and RU 12, in the name of BCCI Paris, totalling $25,000,000.

88. On or about July 15, 1988, Defendant GHAITH R. PHARAON caused to be mailed a letter from an employee of Interedec, located in Georgia, to an employee of CenTrust in Florida, concerning the purchase by CenTrust of the subordinated debentures previously purchased by BCCI Overseas (Paris), a branch of the BCCI Group, in which it was stated:

"[The Chairman of the Board of CenTrust] had asked me to provide relevant details to you in order for Centrust to repurchase the USD 25 million Debentures from BCCI Paris on 27th July 1988 together with interest accrued up to 27th July 1988."

89. On or about July 25, 1988, defendant GHAITH R. PHARAON caused to be delivered a letter from London, England, to Richmond Hill, Georgia, which transferred the CenTrust debentures referred to in Overt Act No. 87.

90. On or about July 27, 1988, the Defendant GHAITH R. PHARAON and another caused CenTrust to transmit by wire approximately $25,000,000 to Security Pacific International Bank in New York, New York, related to the purchase by CenTrust of the subordinated debentures previously purchased by BCCI Paris.

91. Between on or about July 1, 1988, and March 1, 1989, on several occasions, in Atlanta, Georgia, Defendant GHAITH R. PHARAON and another caused false and fraudulent statements to be made to federal banking regulators concerning the actual level of regulatory capital of CenTrust.

(Title 18, United States Code, Section 371)

COUNT TWO

1. The allegations contained in paragraphs 3, 4, 14, and 15 through 25, inclusive, of COUNT ONE of this Indictment are realleged and incorporated by reference as if fully set forth herein.

2. From in or about January 1988 to in or about July 1988, Defendants

AGHA HASAN ABEDI,

SWALEH NAQVI, and

GHAITH R. PHARAON

and others, devised and intended to devise a scheme and artifice to defraud and to obtain money and property by means of false and fraudulent pretenses, representations, and promises;

3. It was part of said scheme that:

a) Defendant GHAITH R. PHARAON and another would seek to sell CenTrust subordinated debentures to investors;

b) Defendant GHAITH R. PHARAON, who owned approximately 25 percent of the stock of CenTrust, would use his relationship with the BCCI Group and Defendant SWALEH NAQVI to arrange for a branch of the BCCI Group to purchase $25,000,000 of the CenTrust subordinated debentures in order to deceive other investors as to the true market for the CenTrust subordinated debentures;

c) Defendant GHAITH R. PHARAON and another would agree with the BCCI Group and Defendant SWALEH NAQVI that CenTrust would repurchase any CenTrust subordinated debentures purchased by the BCCI Group;

d) Defendant SWALEH NAQVI would direct and approve the purchase by BCCI (Overseas) Paris, of approximately $25,000,000 of CenTrust subordinated debentures;

e) Defendant GHAITH R. PHARAON and another would cause CenTrust Trust to repurchase said subordinated debentures from BCCI (Overseas) Paris, after approximately eight weeks, thus making the BCCI Group whole and completing the deception of other investors as to the true market for the CenTrust subordinated debentures;

f) Defendant GHAITH R. PHARAON and another would cause material misrepresentations and omissions to be made to investors.

4. On or about May 3, 1988, in the District of the Columbia and elsewhere, Defendants GHAITH R. PHARAON, SWALEH NAQVI, and AGHA HASAN ABEDI, aided and abetted by one another and the BCCI Group, for the purpose of executing the aforesaid scheme and artifice and attempting to do so, knowingly and willfully transmitted and caused to be transmitted in interstate commerce by means of wire communications certain writings, signs, signals, pictures and sounds to wit: a communication by telephone between the Defendant GHAITH R. PHARAON in Savannah, Georgia and an employee of the FHLBB in Washington, D.C.

(Title 18, United States Code, Sections 1343 and 2)

COUNT THREE

Introduction

1. The allegations in Paragraphs 1 through 25 of COUNT ONE of this Indictment are hereby re-alleged and incorporated by reference as if fully set forth herein.

The Enterprise

2. At all times material to this Indictment, the BCCI Group, International Credit and Investment Company (Overseas), Limited ("ICIC Overseas"), AGHA HASAN ABEDI, SWALEH NAQVI, GHAITH R. PHARAON, and others known and unknown to the Grand Jury, constituted an "enterprise" as defined in Title 18, United States Code, Section 1961(4), that is, a group of organizations and individuals associated in fact.

3. At all times material to this Indictment, this enterprise was engaged in, and its activities affected, interstate and foreign commerce.

The Racketeering Conspiracy

4. From in or about January of 1978, to in or about July of 1991, in the District of Columbia and elsewhere, Defendants

AGHA HASAN ABEDI,

SWALEH NAQVI, and

along with others known and unknown to the Grand Jury, being persons employed by and associated with the enterprise described in paragraph two of this Count, which enterprise was engaged in and the activities of which affected interstate and foreign commerce, unlawfully, willfully, and knowingly combined, conspired, confederated, and agreed together and with each other, and with persons known and unknown to the Grand Jury, to commit an offense against the United States, to wit: to violate Title 18, United States Code, Section 1962(c), that is, to conduct and participate, directly and indirectly, in the conduct of the affairs of the enterprise through a pattern of racketeering activity.

5. It was part of the conspiracy that the Defendants and their co-conspirators would and did commit acts of racketeering activity as set forth below in paragraph 16 of this Count.

It was further part of the conspiracy that:

6. Defendants would enrich Defendants AGHA HASAN ABEDI, SWALEH NAQVI, GHAITH R. PHARAON, their associates, and the BCCI Group by taking advantage of opportunities to deceive and exploit United States financial institutions, deceive United States Federal regulatory agencies, and deceive persons and entities throughout the United States.

7. Defendants AGHA HASAN ABEDI, SWALEH NAQVI, their co-conspirators and the BCCI Group would acquire and maintain control and influence over National Bank of Georgia and Independence with the aid of GHAITH R. PHARAON, through deceptive stock purchases by way of hidden stock pledges, nominee agreements, nonrecourse loans, loan releases, beneficial interest agreements and outright falsehoods, fabrications and omissions in applications and reports filed with state and federal regulatory agencies.

8. Defendants AGHA HASAN ABEDI, SWALEH NAQVI their co-conspirators and the BCCI Group would acquire and maintain control and influence over CCAH, through deceptive stock purchases by way of hidden stock pledges, nominee agreements, nonrecourse loans, loan releases, beneficial interest agreements and outright falsehoods, fabrications and omissions in applications and reports filed with state and federal regulatory agencies.

9. Defendants AGHA HASAN ABEDI, SWALEH NAQVI their co-conspirators and the BCCI Group would use ICIC Overseas to facilitate deception of the Board, OCC, FDIC, FSLIC and FHLBB concerning the involvement of the BCCI Group, AGHA HASAN ABEDI, SWALEH NAQVI and GHAITH R. PHARAON in matters involving NBG, Independence and CCAH.

10. Defendant SWALEH NAQVI and his co-conspirators would deceive and cause the deception of regulators as to the amount of regulatory capital on the books of the National Bank of Georgia by engaging in a sham transaction which created the appearance of a $10 million capital infusion, when in truth and in fact, as the Defendants well knew, no capital infusion was made, said sham transactions occurring so that the National Bank of Georgia would obtain regulatory approval to purchase other banks.

11. When Defendant GHAITH R. PHARAON was in financial difficulty, in order to keep NBG assets under the control and influence of the BCCI Group, Defendants AGHA HASAN ABEDI and SWALEH NAQVI caused NBG to be sold to CCAH:

a) by participating in negotiations in which the sale price was negotiated;

b) by setting up real and sham "loans" to CCAH shareholders, amounting to approximately $220 million, for the purchase of additional CCAH stock, thus providing CCAH capital to purchase NBG.

12. Defendants AGHA HASAN ABEDI and SWALEH NAQVI would cause loans to be made from BCCI (Overseas) to the two highest ranking officers of CCAH for their purchase of CCAH shares, under the terms of these agreements:

1) The borrowers would not be held personally liable for the loans, rather the shares would be pledged to the BCCI Group and the BCCI Group would be limited to collecting against the CCAH shares pledged as collateral; and

2) The BCCI Group would agree to find a buyer for the CCAH shares at a "mutually agreeable price";

3) The loan and share agreements were structured such that the BCCI Group's promises to hold the borrowers harmless on the loans and to find a buyer for the CCAH stock at a "mutually agreeable price" were in separate documents -- "side agreements" -- from the loan agreements and the pledge agreements.

13. Less than 18 months after the aforementioned loans from BCCI (Overseas) to the two CCAH officers, Defendant SWALEH NAQVI would cause the sale and transfer of the borrowers' CCAH shares at a price resulting in a profit of millions of dollars to the borrowers.

14. Defendant GHAITH R. PHARAON, the owner of approximately 25 percent of the stock of CenTrust, would use his relationship with the BCCI Group and Defendant SWALEH NAQVI to arrange for a branch of the BCCI Group to purchase approximately $25,000,000 of the total $150,000,000 CenTrust subordinated debentures in order to mislead and deceive regulators and investors as to the true market for the CenTrust subordinated debentures.

15. Defendant GHAITH R. PHARAON would agree with the BCCI Group and Defendant SWALEH NAQVI that the BCCI Group would purchase the CenTrust subordinated debentures and that Defendant GHAITH R. PHARAON would guarantee the repurchase of the subordinated debentures at BCCI's acquisition cost, thereby eliminating market risk to BCCI and knowingly facilitating the deception of other investors as to the true market for the CenTrust subordinated debentures.

The Pattern of Racketeering Activity

16. It was a further part of the conspiracy that each defendant agreed that they and their co-conspirators would commit two or more of the acts of racketeering set forth below in the conduct of the affairs of the enterprise involving the unlawful control, operation, and manipulation of United States financial institutions and fraud against United States Federal bank regulatory agencies, and fraud against the investing public, constituting violations of Title 18, United States Code, Sections 1341, 1343 and 1344.

RACKETEERING ACT ONE

Wire Fraud Related to Independence Bank

17. Between on or about January 1, 1984, and December of 1989, Defendants AGHA HASAN ABEDI, SWALEH NAQVI, and GHAITH R. PHARAON, along with the BCCI Group and ICIC Overseas, devised and intended to devise a scheme and artifice to defraud and to obtain money and property, namely, insurance protection and continued insurance protection by the FDIC, backed by funds and security of the United States, for deposits of Independence, by means of fraudulent and false pretenses, representations and promises;

18. It was part of said scheme and artifice that on or about May 17, 1985, Defendant GHAITH R. PHARAON and Defendant SWALEH NAQVI, acting in the name of ICIC Overseas, did enter into a secret agreement whereby 85% of the shares of the stock of Independence, with the attendant voting rights, purportedly to be purchased in their entirety by Defendant GHAITH R. PHARAON, were instead pledged to ICIC Overseas; it was further part of said scheme that Defendant GHAITH R. PHARAON did conceal and cause to be concealed this material fact from the FDIC and other regulators through fraudulent conduct and deceit; it was further part of the scheme that the BCCI Group exercised influence and control over the affairs of Independence Bank;

19. On or about the dates set forth below, the above Defendants transmitted and caused to be transmitted in interstate and foreign commerce, certain writings, signs, signals, pictures, and sounds, for the purpose of executing such scheme and artifice, in violation of Title 18, United States Code, Section 1343:

RACKETEERING ACT TWO

Mail Fraud in Connection with the National Bank of Georgia

20. Between on or about January 1, 1978, and December of 1987, Defendants AGHA HASAN ABEDI, SWALEH NAQVI, and GHAITH R. PHARAON, and others including the BCCI Group, devised and intended to devise a scheme and artifice to defraud and to obtain money and property, namely, insurance protection and continued insurance protection by the FDIC, backed by funds and security of the United States, for deposits of the National Bank of Georgia, by means of fraudulent and false pretenses, representations and promises;

21. It was part of said scheme and artifice that on or before January 1, 1985, GHAITH R. PHARAON and the BCCI Group entered into an arrangement kept secret from the regulators whereby the BCCI Group obtained 50% ownership of the National Bank of Georgia; it was further part of said scheme that GHAITH R. PHARAON did conceal and cause to be concealed this material fact from the OCC, the FDIC and other regulators through fraudulent conduct and deceit; it was further part of the scheme that the BCCI Group exercised influence and control over the affairs of the National Bank of Georgia.

22. On or about the dates set forth below, the above Defendants, and for the purpose of executing and attempting to execute the scheme and artifice, knowingly did cause to be delivered by the United States Postal Service various mail matter:

Act	Date of Mailing	From	To	Description
a)	5/30/78	[unknown]	NBG Shareholders in Alabama and elsewhere throughout the United States	Offer to Purchase NBG Stock
b)	6/7/78	Houston, TX	Office of the Comptroller of the Currency, Washington, D.C.	Form F-11

g)	5/20/82	Atlanta, GA	NBG Shareholders located in Georgia and through the United States	Notice of Approval of Plan of Acquisition and Agreement of Merger

(Title 18, United States Code, Sections 1341 and 2)

RACKETEERING ACT THREE

Wire Fraud in Connection with Purchases of CCAH Stock

23. On or about between January of 1983 and December of 1989, the Defendants AGHA HASAN ABEDI and SWALEH NAQVI and others known and unknown including the BCCI Group and ICIC Overseas, devised and intended to devise a scheme and artifice to defraud and to obtain money and property, namely, insurance protection and continued insurance protection by the FDIC, backed by funds and security of the United States, for deposits of the First American Banks, by means of fraudulent and false pretenses, representations and promises.

24. It was part of said scheme that between on or about 1983 and on or about 1989, on several occasions, the BCCI Group secretly acquired ownership of CCAH stock through various means, including, among other things, financing and directing the purchase of the stock by others, pursuant to various agreements or arrangements, such as pledge agreements, memoranda of deposits and powers of attorneys, whereby actual control of the stock would be transferred to the BCCI Group and ICIC Overseas, and the BCCI Group and ICIC Overseas would have no recourse against the personal assets of the purported buyer, and causing said secret ownership to be concealed from the FRS.

25. For the purpose of executing said scheme, the Defendants, their coconspirators and their agents, did on several occasions, the precise dates not presently known, transmit and cause to be transmitted in interstate and foreign commerce, certain writings, signs, signals, pictures, and sounds, to wit, wire transfers from the BCCI Group and its affiliates to financial institutions in the United States for purposes of purchasing CCAH stock.

26. For the purpose of executing said scheme, the Defendants, their co-conspirators and their agents, did on the following specific dates, transmit and cause to be transmitted in interstate and foreign commerce, certain writings, signs, signals, pictures, and sounds, for purposes of facilitating the purchase by CCAH of NBG:

Date	Wire	From	To
September 2, 1986	Telefax	NBG Atlanta, GA	Swaleh Naqvi BCCI London, UK

Explanation of accomplishment claimed:

On 1/15/93, a superceding indictment was returned by the Federal Grand Jury, Washington, D.C. This superceding indictment adds additional information and details of additional criminal acts by ABEDI, [redacted], and PHARAON, in relation to The National Bank of Georgia and Credit and Commerce American Holdings as previously charged in a four (4) count indictment returned on 11/15/91. It is noted that, although no additional charges were added in the superceding indictment, the information added supports and enhances the existing four (4) counts. The indictment charges ABEDI, [redacted] & PHARAON with violations of Title 18 USC 371 (Conspiracy); Title 18 USC 1343 (Wire Fraud); Title 18 USC 1962(d) (Racketeering Conspiracy), and Title 18 USC 2 (Aiding and Abetting).

FEDERAL BUREAU OF INVESTIGATION

Date of transcription 1/5/93

[redacted] Legislative Assistant/Counsel for U.S. SENATOR JOHN KERRY, was contacted at his office located in the Russell Building, Room 421, Washington, D.C. Also present during the interview was ATTORNEY-ADVISOR [redacted] U.S. DEPARTMENT OF JUSTICE (DOJ), Washington, D.C. b6 b7C

After being advised of the identities of the agents and the purpose of the interview, [redacted] provided the following information: b6 b7C

Based on advice from the OFFICE OF SENATE LEGAL COUNSEL, [redacted] can only provide public information documents and information received from the press/media to the interviewers. Additional documents, such as those provided to the SENATE ETHICS COMMITTEE, may be obtained by submitting a written request to the Chairman of the Senate Subcommittee, who would then present the request to a vote in the form of a Senate Resolution. [redacted] also stated that he did not want to become a witness in any public proceeding that may result from his consent to be interviewed. b6 b7C

Pursuant to a letter written by [redacted] dated November 20, 1992 requesting information relating to the investigation conducted by the U.S. SENATE SUBCOMMITTEE ON TERRORISM, NARCOTICS, AND INTERNATIONAL OPERATIONS (of the COMMITTEE ON FOREIGN RELATIONS) regarding the BANK OF CREDIT AND COMMERCE INTERNATIONAL (BCCI), [redacted] provided photocopies of certain documents in response to the request and specifically addressed the inquiries as follows: b6 b7C

1. Regarding the alleged penny-stock market manipulation involving BCCI; [redacted] stated that the best explanation of this allegation is included in a recently published book entitled "False Profits" by PETER TRUELL and LARRY GURWIN. [redacted] provided photocopies of pages 172 through 176 of the book. [redacted] has also contacted [redacted] and urged [redacted] to assist federal investigators. [redacted] is b6 b7C

2. Regarding [redacted] referred to one document that was reproduced in Volume 3, page 650, of the Subcommittees report entitled "THE BCCI AFFAIR." [redacted] will attempt to locate additional records that can be turned over to the interviewers at a later time. b6 b7C

3. Regarding the involvement of BCCI-related people and [redacted] provided photocopies of various news articles. b6 b7C

4. Regarding [redacted] stated that those documents are not accessible. Senate Investigators obtained their documentation primarily from two sources: (1) the BCCI document repository in New York, which is currently under the control of the NEW YORK STATE DEPARTMENT OF BANKING (NYSDB) and (2) the RESOLUTION TRUST CORPORATION (RTC). Senate investigators did spend time reviewing the [redacted] transactions and concluded that they were simply a "straight-forward fraud" against BCCI. [redacted] believes that it would be easier for the FBI to obtain the [redacted] records directly from the NYSDB rather than from the U.S. Senate Subcommittee. b6 b7C

5. Regarding documents from the OVERSEAS PRIVATE INVESTMENT COMPANY (OPIC) referred to in footnotes 161-162 of the Subcommittee report; [redacted] stated that OPIC can provide a copy of the letter of recommendation from BCCI concerning [redacted] and ANTIGUA MELON FARM (Royden). The document is also on file in the U.S. District Court in Washington, D.C. b6 b7C

6. Regarding an affidavit referred to in footnote 837 of the Subcommittee report; [redacted] advised that [redacted] is a former DOJ attorney and can be contacted at telephone number [redacted] has produced several versions of the affidavit and has additional documentation relating to the Iran Arms Deals and BCCI. b6 b7C

7. Regarding the HONG KONG DEPOSIT AND GUARANTY COMPANY and TETRA FINANCE references in footnotes 842 and 852-854 of the Subcommittee report and the identification of individuals involved; [redacted] provided photocopies of the documents requested as well as information obtained from press reports and legal decisions involving [redacted] that came about as a result of the financial collapse of the aforementioned companies. b6 b7C

8. Regarding documents referred to in footnote 849 of the Subcommittee report; [redacted] provided the requested documents. b6 b7C

9. Regarding the identification of the law enforcement document referenced in the last paragraph of page 601 of the Subcommittee report; [redacted] would not discuss this matter whatsoever. [redacted] explained that he utilizes confidential sources in the same manner as law enforcement and by disclosing the identity of a source, he would impair his ability to perform his job. [redacted] guaranteed confidentiality to the person that provided the document and advised that he could not provide the document or describe it inasmuch as it would reveal the identity of the person that provided it to him. [redacted] admitted that he is in possession of the document. b6 b7C

10. Regarding assistance in contacting a particular source; [redacted] said that he would again ask his former colleague to provide [redacted] with a telephone number for the source. b6 b7C

11. Regarding the Minutes of Evidence taken before the HOUSE OF COMMONS; [redacted] advised that his copy has been filed in storage and recommended that a copy be obtained from the HOUSE OF COMMONS or DISTRICT ATTORNEY FOR NEW YORK(DANY) MORGENTHAU's office. b6 b7C

12. As requested, [redacted] provided two (2) computer data diskettes containing the "KERRY REPORT" in electronic format. b6 b7C

13. Regarding the report references to the activities of MOHAMMED HAMMOUD:

a) Records showing that HAMMOUD borrowed over $110 million from BCCI (one loan guaranteed by FIRST AMERICAN BANK); [redacted] referred to the PRICE-WATERHOUSE reports that were reprinted in volume 1 of the hearings, pages 356-358. b6 b7C

b) Records showing that HAMMOUD's real estate investments were managed by the current U.S. AMBASSADOR TO BAHRAIN CHARLES W. HOSTLER and his contacts with the U.S. STATE DEPARTMENT regarding the release of U.S. hostages from Beirut; [redacted] referred to the documents reprinted in volume 4 of the hearings, pages 741-778. [redacted] explained that a request for documents was made to the STATE DEPARTMENT for records and the records were provided. However, some of the documents were classified as "eyes only," and therefore, photocopies could not be obtained. [redacted] recommended that a request be made directly to the STATE DEPARTMENT regarding HAMMOUD. b6 b7C

c) Records showing that HAMMOUD met with high officials from the U.S. TREASURY DEPARTMENT and DOJ regarding BCCI are from attorney notes which have been turned over to the Senate Ethics Committee.

d) Documents regarding allegations that HAMMOUD's companies were front companies for BCCI; [redacted] referred to the PRICE-WATERHOUSE reports reprinted in volume 1 of the hearings, pages 356-358. b6 b7C

b6 b7C

e) Documents showing FIRST AMERICAN BANK issued a $4 million letter of credit to HAMMOUD; [redacted] explained that the only published reference is contained in volume 3 of the hearings, page 429. Further, [redacted] knew about this transaction and detailed records were reviewed by the FBI at BCCI-New York.

b6 b7C

f) The Power of Attorney held by [redacted] for HAMMOUD is reprinted in volume 3 of the hearings, page 427.

b6 b7C

g-k) All records regarding [redacted] were personally turned over to the SENATE ETHICS COMMITTEE by [redacted] in early October 1992.

b6 b7C

l) Regarding the videotape recording of the HAMMOUD funeral, [redacted] stated that he has not seen the tape and has only heard that it exists. [redacted] believes that [redacted] (supra) may have viewed the film.

b6 b7C

[redacted] admitted that Senate investigators are not held to the same high degree of standards as the FBI when conducting its investigation and subsequent reporting of results. [redacted] also admitted that much of the information contained in the Subcommittee report was obtained from media sources and other journalists and contains speculation and conclusions drawn by the investigators as well as their sources. [redacted] made frequent references to author LARRY GURWIN's work ("False Profits") during the interview.

b6 b7C

[redacted] has no knowledge regarding any new developments involving BCCI and is no longer involved in any matters relating to the investigation of BCCI.

REQUEST OF THE BUREAU

FBIHQ-PCU is requested to present the facts contained in this communication to the Department of Justice (DOJ)-Office of Public Integrity (OPI) for a prosecutive opinion. [redacted] a Legislative Assistant/Counsel for United States Senator John Kerry, was primarily responsible for the publication of the Senate hearings before the Subcommittee on Terrorism, Narcotics, and International Operations regarding "The BCCI Affair." Senator Kerry was Chairman of this subcommittee. The publication reported many allegations of federal criminal violations, as well as, alledging the existence of key documentary evidence to support these allegations. As a result, [redacted] was interviewed; whereby, he was requested to explain the basis for the allegations and to provide the documentary evidence. [redacted] while appearing to be cooperative, was unable to substantiate many of the allegations and admitted that much of information was supplied to him by investigative reporters. [redacted] specifically stated that the Senate investigators were not held to the same high standards as the FBI when investigating and reporting the investigative results, therefore relying on hearsay is not only permissible but a common practice. b6 b7C b6 b7C

The report referred to a law enforcement document that is believed to be a FD-302 reporting an interview of Senator Orrin G. Hatch, R-Utah. [redacted] refused to provide a copy of this document to the FBI, stating that he received the document from a source and that by providing the document, that he might disclose the identity of his source. Although what was quoted from the law enforcement document in the report was not relevant, the content of the FD-302 could be very damaging to Senator Hatch. Regardless, if this is in fact the interview of Senator Hatch, it is possible that there is a "leak" in the DOJ. It is believed that this "leak" could be politically motivated to provide information to outside sources. WMFO feels strongly that there is an existence of such a "leak", and therefore, that this "leak" should be referred to the DOJ-OPI to determine whether a full investigation should be conducted. b6 b7C

WMFO has conducted only a preliminary investigation into this matter to determine who, within the DOJ, received this FD-302. WMFO will conduct no further investigation into this matter pending a prosecutive opinion from DOJ-OPI and/or the acqusition of the law enforcement document from the U. S. Senate.

Reference WMFO airtel dated 1/7/93 and WMFO teletype dated 1/13/93.

The purpose of this memo is to outline the investigative matters that are ongoing at this time, due to my transfer to FBIHQ.

Referenced airtel (attached) contained a request of the Bureau to acquire a prosecutive opinion from the Department of Justice (DOJ)-Office of Public Integrity as to the possible "leak" by someone in DOJ to U.S. Senator John Kerry's Senate Committee. The document alleged to be "leaked" is an FBI FD-302 recording an interview of U.S. Senator Orrin Hatch.

Preliminary investigation has revealed that SSA [redacted] provide the Hatch FD-302 to [redacted] Principal Deputy Chief, Fraud Section, DOJ, within a week subsequent to the interview. SSA [redacted] did not provide the FD-302 to anyone else outside of the Bureau. WMFO records (FD-320 attached) show that the Hatch FD-302 was provided to Assistant United States Attorney (AUSA) on 7/14/92. This record is reportedly misleading, in that all of the FD-302's went directly to [redacted] through his [redacted] LNU. In September, 1992 [redacted] was again given a copy of the Hatch FD-302 by myself. The only other person outside the Bureau given a copy of the Hatch FD-302 was [redacted] DOJ-OPI. The FBI agents who had copies of the Hatch FD-302 were limited to myself, SSA [redacted] SA [redacted] SA [redacted] and SA [redacted]

Referenced teletype (attached) requested FBIHQ to contact the U.S. Senate Ethics Committee to determine the disposition of their investigation of [redacted] and to acquire copies of documents Senator Kerry provided to the Committee.

Throughout the investigation of the above captioned matter, there have been allegations of money laundering through the transactions of the Bank of Credit and Commerce International (BCCI). Money laundering activity appears to have been conducted by, but not limited to, U.S. citizens who utilized BCCI. The specified unlawful activities (SUA) are not known.

FBIHQ SSA [redacted] has advised that he has several leads concerning U.S. citizens and their possible involvement in laundering illicit profits of SUA through BCCI. Theses leads were developed during the investigation of captioned matter, yet lay unresolved as they are outside the scope of the current investigation. It is recommended that an investigation be opened under the subclassification of 272B - Money Laundering-White Collar Crime Program, to address the charges known to SSA [redacted] b6 b7C

Ross Cosmetics Shares Off $9.50 As SEC Probes

By Martha Brannigan
Staff Reporter of The Wall Street Journal

Ross Cosmetics Distribution Centers Inc. disclosed that the Securities and Exchange Commission is investigating the company's activities and ownership, prompting a 65.5% decline in its stock price Friday.

The perfume and cosmetics concern's shares closed at $5 a share, off $9.50, on heavy volume of 2.8 million shares in over-the-counter trading.

Ross Cosmetics, based in Duncan, S.C., said it "has learned" that parties related to its principal supplier, R.J.R. Perfume Co., in London, may directly or indirectly own up to 60% of its shares. A relationship, according to the company, that had been hidden from the SEC and the public.

In recent months, Ross Cosmetics has been the focus of short selling and speculation about possible irregularities in its operations.

Michael E. Emery, chief operating officer, reading a statement on the telephone Friday, said apart from the relationship between Ross Cosmetics and its main supplier, the company has "no basis to believe that the rumors circulating in the marketplace are true." He added: "We know of no reason to be concerned about the company, its prospects, or its future and we believe the company's underlying business is sound and will continue." He declined to answer questions.

Ross Cosmetics retained Harvey Pitt and his law firm, Fried, Frank, Harris, Shriver & Jacobson, in New York, last week as special counsel to investigate the matter. The company plans to name two additional outside directors, whom the firm will represent, to investigate the ownership issue "along with other rumors of which it has been apprised," Ross Cosmetics said in a prepared statement Friday.

The company said the SEC's "informal investigation" includes "certain of its accounting practices and the activities of certain of its present and former officers and directors." The SEC wouldn't confirm or deny the probe.

The company, which distributes so-called "knockoffs," or inexpensive alternatives to designer-label fragrances, said in its statement that it doesn't yet know whether any board members or senior managers knew about the secret ownership. The company added that it is cooperating fully with the SEC, "but doesn't have any knowledge that any improprieties actually have occurred."

Mr. Pitt, who is a former general counsel to the SEC, said the internal investigation will focus, among other things, on possible ties between S&J Perfume and certain foreign shareholders, including Starion International Ltd. According to Ross Cosmetics' proxy statement, Starion, based in the British Virgin Islands, owns a 38.6% stake in Ross Cosmetics. A Starion director, Shashikant S. Sheth, who lives in Dubai, United Arab Emirates, sits on Ross Cosmetics' board.

The company will also investigate whether its chairman and president, Eugene Derry, who lives in Geneva, Switzerland, has ties to S&J, Mr. Pitt said. Mr. Derry, who the proxy said owns no shares, couldn't be reached for comment. Mr. Sheth didn't return calls to his home and office in Dubai over the weekend.

Mr. Pitt said the previously undisclosed majority ownership by parties related to the company's main supplier "raises questions that must be investigated."

Indeed, shortsellers have been raising questions about the company's operations for several months. Bob Doviak, a principal at Doviak Partners in Dallas, who has a short position in the stock, wonders how the company could have achieved such rapid growth in sales. "What caught our eyes is the stock came from nowhere. Sales have gone through the roof in a stable, mature industry," Mr. Doviak said.

On Friday, Ross Cosmetics reported net income for its third quarter ended May 31 of $902,893, or 13 cents a share, compared with year-earlier earnings of $371,085, or six cents a share. Third-quarter sales rose 38%, to $10.5 million from $7.6 million a year earlier, the company said. For the nine months, it reported net income of $3.2 million, or 47 cents a share, compared with year-earlier net income of $1.5 million, or 22 cents.

Ross Cosmetics' Derry Placed on Leave During Investigation

By a WALL STREET JOURNAL Staff Reporter

DUNCAN, S.C. — Ross Cosmetics Distribution Centers Inc. said Lurene D. Derry was placed on administrative leave from his posts as chairman and president of the troubled fragrance distributor, pending the completion of an investigation by a special committee of the board.

The special committee is examining the circumstances surrounding the closure in late last month that as much as 10% of the company's shares and control by its major supplier, S&J Parfums Inc. The committee is also examining the possible ties to S&J, which is based in London.

Mr. Derry requested that he be placed on leave, the company said. The executive, who resides in Geneva and will continue as a board member during the investigation, couldn't be reached for comment on the company's move.

Ross Cosmetics also said that because of the flurry of rumors surrounding the company and the need to restore public confidence, the committee has set an August 31 deadline for completing its probe and to facilitate the company's audit for the fiscal year ending Aug. 31."

In addition, Ross Cosmetics said that its board has decided the company will not pay a $1.8 million accounts payable due to S&J until it interviews certain S&J officials and determines whether payment is appropriate. Ross Cosmetics said its concern relates to the fact it has a high level of inventory, despite continued strong growth in its sales and order backlog.

Shares of Ross Cosmetics, which plummeted from $14.50 when the secret ties to its major supplier were disclosed in late, closed yesterday at $6, unchanged, in additional over-the-counter trading.

Ross Cosmetics Defends Dealings With Big Supplier

By Martha Brannigan
Staff Reporter of The Wall Street Journal

Despite the disclosure that as much as 60% of Ross Cosmetics Distribution Centers Inc. is controlled by its main supplier, the company's president insisted the relationship hasn't influenced their business dealings.

Eugene D. Derry, the chairman and president of Ross Cosmetics, asserted that the company's accounting practices are "sound" and that its "commercial dealings" with its principal supplier, S&J Perfume Co., "have been completely at arm's length."

Mr. Derry's made his comments following the disclosure Friday that Ross Cosmetics is under investigation by the Securities and Exchange Commission. Mr. Derry couldn't be reached for additional comment, and the company didn't return calls.

The company's stock, after plunging Friday to $5, down $9.50, regained some ground yesterday, closing at $7.25 in over-the-counter trading, up $2.25.

Ross Cosmetics, based in Duncan, S.C., said Friday that it had learned that parties related to S&J Perfume, based in London, may directly or indirectly own as much as 60% of the company's shares. The relationship was previously hidden from the SEC and from the public.

Ross Cosmetics, which sells inexpensive alternatives to designer label fragrances, said the SEC is informally investigating the company, some of its accounting practices, and certain present and former officers and directors.

The SEC and an internal investigation launched by the company last week are examining, among other things, possible ties between S&J Perfume and at least two Ross Cosmetics officials -- Mr. Derry and another director, Shashikant S. Sheth, who lives in Dubai, United Arab Emirates, Mr. Derry, according to the company's proxy statement, owns no shares. Mr. Sheth is a director of Starion International Ltd., a British Virgin Islands company which lists a 38.6% stake in Ross Cosmetics.

THE CIA AND THE SHEIKH

BY ROBERT I. FRIEDMAN

"They were talking all the time about targeting American symbols," says the FBI undercover informant, "the Empire State Building, the Statue of Liberty. A few of the guys came to the mosque to pray and go home. But others gathered to conspire in small groups, talking in deep, low voices. They see the U.S. as an imperialist power, the Big Satan, the root of all the evil in the world."

The FBI operative, Mamdouh Zaki Zakhary, monitored the radical activities at the El Salaam Mosque in Jersey City, which was the headquarters of the terrorist cell that allegedly planned and carried out the bombing of the World Trade Center on February 26. Zakhary, a heavily bearded Coptic Christian from Egypt who owned an import-export firm in Jersey City, spent a year and a half spying on the local Arab American community and the mosque, beginning January 10, 1990. During this time, he watched the first two men arrested in connection with the bombing, Mohammad Salameh and Ibraham Elgabrowny, as well as the spiritual leader who may have inspired them, the fiery blind fundamentalist cleric Sheikh Omar Abdel Rahman, who is infamous throughout the Arab world for his alleged role in the assassination of Egyptian president Anwar el-Sadat.

"The only thing they want is to establish an Islamic world," Zakhary told The Village Voice during an interview from his home in Alexandria, Egypt. "They will do anything to achieve it. You have to understand their desire to strike out, to avenge anything that hurts Islam. I asked Elgabrowny, 'Why do you stay here [in Brooklyn]?' And he told me, 'I want to earn their dollars so that I can stab them in the back.' "

Zakhary reported the group's subversive activities in regular meetings with his FBI handler, Special Agent Kenneth Strange. But Zakhary, who was not able to penetrate the cell's inner circle, had no advance warning that there was a plan to commit one of the most sensational acts of foreign terrorism on American soil before the bombing of the World Trade Center: the assassination of the controversial right-wing Zionist leader Rabbi Meir Kahane.

On November 5, 1990, El Sayyid Nosair, a pudgy, bearded 34-year-old Egyptian American and a core member of the El Salaam Mosque, calmly walked up to the podium of a conference room in the Halloran House, a midtown Manhattan hotel, after Kahane had finished a one-hour speech. Moments later, Kahane was shot once in the throat at point-blank range with a .357 magnum, and Nosair bolted outside. During a running gun battle down Lexington Avenue, Nosair was wounded by an off-duty postal inspector and finally captured by New York City police.

"At first, no one knew who Nosair was," recalls Zakhary, "so when I heard about it I called the FBI and identified him. I told them he was a member of the mosque and that he was very close with the sheikh [Abdel Rahman]. I told them that, four days before, I saw with my own eyes the sheikh meeting with Nosair at a Lebanese restaurant on Atlantic Avenue in Brooklyn. It was 7 p.m. There was Nosair, the sheikh, a person escorting the sheikh, and another person I don't know. They were deep in conversation."

Shortly after police arrested Nosair they found startling evidence that the Kahane killing was just the first in a planned spree. Scrawled on a bank calendar in Nosair's home was a "hit list" that included the names of a U.S. representative, two federal judges, and a former assistant U.S. Attorney. Local police searching Nosair's Cliffside Park, New Jersey, home discovered a trove of terrorist paraphernalia: bomb-making manuals, AK-47 cartridges, a stolen New York State license plate, and a bullet-riddled target board. There were also a number of passports and driver's licenses under various names, as well as articles about the assassination of Anwar Sadat.

But despite Zakhary's reports, Nosair's hit list, and the suspicious cache at his home, the authorities seemed to be downplaying all signs of a terrorist conspiracy. Within 12 hours of the shooting, New York City chief of detectives Joseph Borrelli declared the Kahane assassination was the work of a "lone gunman." Borrelli added, "There was nothing found [at Nosair's house] that would stir your imagination."

One New York City detective close to the investigation told me that the case was handled like a routine homicide. "They [the NYPD] wanted to make it as simple as possible," said the detective. "It was treated as a homicide at the precinct level. The higher-ups didn't want to take it further.

The police department stated that they got the gunman and that was it. We're not equipped to investigate international terrorism."

But the FBI is. On the eve of Nosair's trial, a frustrated federal investigator told me that he didn't believe Nosair had acted alone. "There's nothing to prove that Nosair took it upon himself to [kill Kahane]. There are many conspiracy theories. We hit a lot of dry wells." Yet the federal agent said that the NYPD had jurisdiction in the case and that the FBI's investigation was "superficial."

"IT WAS NO ACCIDENT THAT RAHMAN GOT A VISA AND HE'S STILL IN THE COUNTRY," SAYS ONE AGENT. "HE'S HERE UNDER THE BANNER OF NATIONAL SECURITY."

What investigators would have found if they had done their job thoroughly is that Sheikh Abdel Rahman and El Sayyid Nosair were at the heart of a far-flung terrorist conspiracy. A magnet for the angry and dispossessed of the Muslim world, Abdel Rahman, through his violent preaching, has been linked to dozens of terrorist incidents in Egypt and now to the attack on the World Trade Center, an act he says he deplores.

In the aftermath of the bombing, many are wondering why there wasn't a comprehensive, wide-ranging investigation of Meir Kahane's murder. One possible explanation is offered by a counterterrorism expert for the FBI. At a meeting in a Denny's coffee shop in Los Angeles a week after the Kahane assassination, the 20-year veteran field agent met with one of his top undercover operatives, a burly 33-year-old FBI contract employee who had been a premier bomber for a domestic terrorist group before being "turned" and becoming a government informant.

"Why aren't we going after the sheikh [Abdel Rahman]?" demanded the undercover man.

"It's hands-off," answered the agent.

"Why?" asked the operative.

"It was no accident that the sheikh got a visa and that he's still in the country," replied the agent, visibly upset. "He's here under the banner of national security, the State Department, the NSA [National Security Agency], and the CIA." The agent pointed out that the sheikh had been granted a tourist visa, and later a green card, despite the fact that he was on a State Department terrorist watch-list that should have barred him from the country. He's an untouchable, concluded the agent. "I haven't seen the lone-gunman theory advocated [so forcefully] since John F. Kennedy."

Why might the U.S. government protect a militant sheikh linked to numerous acts of terrorism?

Sheikh Abdel Rahman left Egypt in 1990, in the wake of a series of bloody clashes between his militant fundamentalist group, Al Gamaat al Islamia, and the secular Egyptian government. The sheikh traveled to Pakistan, where he met with representatives of the Afghan mujahedeen, who were providing training for his underground terrorist group in Egypt, the very same mujahedeen who were receiving financial aid and training from the CIA in the war to rid Afghanistan of the Soviet Army. Even after the Soviets pulled out of Afghanistan in February 1989, the U.S. and the Saudis continued to aid the mujahedeen through Pakistan until December 1990, in an attempt to topple the Afghan government.

1325015-000-8050

According to a very high-ranking Egyptian official, when the sheikh moved to Brooklyn in May 1990, he worked closely with the CIA, helping to channel a steady flow of money, men, and guns to mujahedeen bases in Afghanistan and Pakistan. The camps became a mecca for disaffected youth from across the Muslim world.

Of course, the mujahedeen's agenda was not exactly the same as the CIA's. While Abdel Rahman was perfectly happy to accept CIA help to chase the godless Russians out of Afghanistan, it didn't stop him from teaching his recruits his revolutionary agenda. The camps, says the high-ranking Egyptian official, were "schools for jihad," or holy war. The sacred mission was to be waged on two fronts. In the Middle East, his holy warriors were to overthrow secular, pro-Western Arab regimes and replace them with austere Islamic theocracies. The main target was Egypt, the largest and most powerful nation in the Arab world. The sheikh believes, the high-ranking Egyptian official says, "that if you take Egypt, you take all the Middle East." Mamdouh Zaki Zakhary concurs: "Abdel Rahman repeatedly preached that Egypt is the hand of Satan, and that you have to cut off the hand of Satan immediately."

The Great Satan itself, of course, is America, a state that, in the eyes of the sheikh and his supporters, has routinely committed atrocities against the Muslim world. "Americans," said the sheikh on a recent Arabic-language radio broadcast, "are descendants of apes and pigs who have been feeding from the dining tables of the Zionists, Communism, and colonialism." He advocates the destabilization of the U.S. by violent attacks on its symbols of prestige and power, while proselytizing among African Americans and other disenfranchised minorities. Abdel Rahman's "long-term goal is to weaken U.S. society and to show Arab rulers that the U.S. is not an invulnerable superpower," says Matti Steinberg, an expert on Islamic fundamentalism at the Hebrew University in Jerusalem.

According to Western intelligence sources, Abdel Rahman has 10,000 fanatic disciples in Egypt and several hundred in America. But, as far as anyone knows, he never issues them direct orders. "He talks about the importance of jihad in the U.S. without being concrete," says Matti Steinberg. "It's a form of spiritual brainwashing called Dawa. All it takes is a few angry people to understand his message." A high-ranking Egyptian official agrees: "This man is instigating violence in a very clever way. You can't really hope to establish a direct link" between the sheikh and the World Trade Center bombing.

Just four months before the bombing, Egyptian intelligence officials warned the U.S. that the sheikh's principal mosques in America, the El Salaam Mosque and the El Farouq Masjid Mosque in Brooklyn, were "hotbeds of terrorist activity," and that the fiery blind Muslim preacher was plotting a new round of terrorist attacks in Egypt. "There were many, many contacts between Cairo and Washington," says the official.

The FBI received a violent reminder of the sheikh's agenda on November 12, 1992, when a terrorist hit squad linked to Abdel Rahman machine-gunned a busload of Western tourists in Egypt, injuring five Germans. In the last year, three Western tourists have been killed in Egypt and at least two dozen have been wounded, crippling the country's $2.5 billion tourist industry. When asked on an Arabic-language radio show in Washington, D.C., about terrorist attacks on foreign tourists, the sheikh replied, "Force is used with tourists. But tourists should use good manners. Tourism is not nightclubs, alcohol, gambling, fornicating. They should stay away from this behavior, the spread of AIDS and corruption with which they have filled Egypt."

Some three months after the attack on the tourist bus, a rental van packed with a witches' brew of sulfuric acid, nitric acid, and urea exploded in the sub-basement of the World Trade Center, killing six people and injuring more than 1000. "If they had found the exact architectural Achilles' heel [of the World Trade Center]," says an explosives expert who works for the FBI, "or if the bomb had been a little bit bigger, not much more, 500 pounds more, I think it would have brought her down. It's really scary."

As Americans reeled from the worst terrorist attack in U.S. history, the first rumors that swept the country centered on an unidentified Serbian terrorist group. The theory was abandoned only after a sharp-eyed investigator from the Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms and a New York City cop who were combing through the rubble found a tiny metal fragment with the identification number of the van rented by Mohammed Salameh. "It was a miracle that it wasn't destroyed," says the explosives expert. If it had been, the FBI might have been tracking Serbians for weeks instead of Sheikh Abdel Rahman and his labyrinthine web of local Arab terrorists.

Lost in the press avalanche about the World Trade Center bombing was the news that on the same day terrorists linked to Abdel Rahman had detonated a bomb packed with rusty nails in the Wadi el-Nil café, a fashionable restaurant in Cairo, killing two tourists and two Egyptians, and wounding 16. "They wanted to show the Egyptian authorities that they could operate in the heart of the nation's capital," says the high-ranking Egyptian-government official, who adds bitterly, "We begged America not to coddle the sheikh."

Jack Blum, a widely respected former special investigator for the Senate Foreign Relations subcommittee, puts it bluntly: The CIA trained the mujahedeen in terrorism, then dumped them in 1990 as part of an agreement with Moscow, leaving behind a ragtag army of anti-Western Muslim extremists burning to vent their rage on their former patrons, America. "One of the big problems here is that many suspects in the World Trade Center bombing were associated with the mujahedeen," says Blum. "And there are components of our government that are absolutely disinterested in following that path because it leads back to people we supported in the Afghan war."

The first suspect arrested in the World Trade Center bombing was Mohammed Salameh, a 25-year-old Palestinian with a thick black beard and a degree from a Jordanian university in the shariah, Islamic religious law. On February 23, he rented the Ryder van that was packed with explosives and detonated underneath the World Trade Center. When it was revealed that he had returned four times to claim a $400 refund for the vehicle, which he claims was stolen the night before the bombing, many assumed he was either a patsy or the stupidest terrorist in history. What was forgotten, of course, was that the odds against identifying the van were astronomical.

"He's not a clever man, but he's not a stupid man," says Zakhary, the FBI undercover operative who met Salameh at the El Salaam Mosque. "He's an ordinary man, a working man. I think that, for him, the bombing was coming from his heart, not his brain."

The seeds of Salameh's discontent were sown in Bidya, a dusty, nondescript farming village of 6000 Palestinian Arabs near the Nablus–Tel Aviv Highway, on the Israeli-occupied West Bank. The squat, ramshackle, cinder-block homes line unpaved streets that are strewn with garbage. Indoor plumbing is rare, and the town doesn't have a single telephone. The gray concrete walls of Bidya's four schools are covered with pro-PLO graffiti and fierce tirades against Israel.

Bidya is a glaring contrast to nearby Ariel, the gleaming suburban settlement of 15,000 secular Jews that was built on land expropriated from Bidya and other nearby Palestinian villages in the mid 1970s. Ariel has the look and feel of an American Sunbelt suburb in the midst of a boom. At the mall in the heart of town, shops sell everything from falafel for $1.50 to expensive clothes. A large outdoor swimming pool attracts suntanned Jewish settlers, who moved to this West Bank outpost for its front yards and scenic vistas.

Bidya has a long history of violence and rebellion. In 1936, when Palestinian Arabs began a three-year revolt against the British Mandatory authorities then ruling Palestine and the Jewish minority who were struggling for statehood, Bidya became a staging base for fedayeen, or Palestinian guerrillas. The British Army was far more brutal putting down the revolt than the Israeli Army has been during the intifada. British planes strafed Arab villages, thousands of Palestinians were herded into concentration camps, and authorities passed emergency laws that made the possession of a gun or even a bullet a crime punishable by death. More than 10,000 Palestinians were killed in the fighting; Bidya suffered hundreds of casualties.

After Israel's 1948 War of Independence, the Jordanian Arab Legion occupied the West Bank, and Bidya spearheaded Palestinian opposition to Jordan's King Hussein, a Hashemite originally from Saudi Arabia who treated West Bank Palestinians with high-handed contempt. In 1959, 15 high-ranking officials of the Jordanian military, including a leading notable from Bidya, plotted King Hussein's assassination. But the Jordanian mukhabarut (secret police) discovered the scheme, and the plotters were sentenced to death.

Mohammed Salameh was born in Bidya in September 1967, just three months after it was occupied by Israeli troops in the June 1967 Six Day War. "When the Israelis came to our village," says Osama Odeh, a distant cousin of Salameh, "they made a gentlemen's agreement with my father and uncle, who is a lawyer. 'We know your family is very nationalistic and won't accept occupation,' they said, 'so if the fedayeen come to Bidya, you can feed them so long as you then tell them to go. We will give you money for your new school and build roads and sewers.'"

But from the onset of Israeli rule, Bidya's residents waged a fierce guerrilla war against the Israeli occupation, and Mohammed Salameh's family was in the forefront of that opposition. Salameh's maternal grandfather, one of Bidya's largest landowners, was active in the 1936 Arab Rebellion and later joined the PLO. He was arrested in the early 1980s for membership in the PLO, and, in spite of his advanced age, was imprisoned by the Israelis and allegedly tortured. He died soon after his release. Salameh's uncle spent 18 years in prison for a PLO attack on Israeli civilians. Odeh told me that Salameh's "hate" comes from the "injustice" of the Israeli occupation, his uncle's and grandfather's imprisonment, and Ariel's rapid expansion. "Ariel," says Odeh, "is growing, and sucking the red blood of our land."

When I last journeyed to Bidya, in the fall of 1990, the main entrance was blocked by a knot of heavily armed Israeli soldiers in riot gear. "A shooting took place," explained a soldier, who looked no more than 18. "The road is closed. If you go in, we will shoot you."

SHORTLY AFTER POLICE ARRESTED NOSAIR THEY FOUND STARTLING EVIDENCE THAT THE KAHANE KILLING WAS JUST THE FIRST IN A PLANNED SPREE.

Earlier in the day, students had gathered in the center of Bidya, shouting anti-Israeli slogans under a huge banner that read FATAH AND HAMAS TOGETHER. (Hamas is the large Palestinian Islamic fundamentalist group dedicated to Israel's destruction.) Then hundreds of Palestinian youth marched to the Nablus–Tel Aviv Highway, where young boys and girls began to throw stones at Israeli cars. Soldiers raced to the scene and fired into the air, trying to disperse the demonstrators. Several armed Jewish settlers got out of their cars and fanned out among the almond trees that line the side of the road and started shooting. Akhlam Abed, a 13-year-old girl, was killed. She was Bidya's first casualty of the intifada.

In the wake of Israel's lightning victory in the June 1967 Six Day War, Salameh's parents left Bidya for a squalid shantytown on the outskirts of Amman, Jordan, forfeiting their home and possessions, as did tens of thousands of Palestinians. Like all Palestinian youth, Salameh passionately followed the course of the intifada, the Palestinian uprising that began in the Gaza Strip in December 1987 and quickly spread to every Arab town, village, and refugee camp in the Occupied Territories. Every day Jordanian television broadcast images of Palestinian boys, their faces swathed in black-and-white-checkered kaffiyehs, their eyes unafraid, hurling pomegranate-sized stones at Israeli troops brandishing automatic weapons. The children of the "stone revolution," as they are called, gave Palestinians around the world a collective sense of pride and determination.

Salameh, one of 11 brothers and sisters, was an indifferent student with a poor self-image. According to Odeh, he became a devout Muslim in his teens. Salameh's parents have expressed surprise about his alleged role in the World Trade Center bombing. "The Jews, this is from the Jews, who have done this and blamed my son," Salameh's mother, Aysha, told The New York Times.

Aysha might well blame Sheikh Abdel Rahman for leading her wayward son down the combustible path of Islamic fundamentalism. Salameh, who received a tourist visa from the American consulate in Amman in December 1987, moved to New Jersey, where he worked at menial jobs, constantly changing addresses. He met Abdel Rahman not long after the sheikh arrived in Brooklyn; he was captivated by the sheikh's call for jihad and the downfall of America, becoming his sometime gofer, according to one U.S. law-enforcement source. Salameh quickly fell into a circle of like-minded Muslims, including Nidal Ayyad, a chemical engineer of Palestinian descent who allegedly concocted the World Trade Center bomb.

In Egypt, Abdel Rahman's name lives in infamy for his role in the October 6, 1981, assassination of Anwar Sadat, who was cut down in a hail of grenade and automatic-weapons fire while he reviewed a military parade. In 1980, Abdel Rahman had issued a fatwa, or religious decree, that called Sadat an infidel for turning his back on Islam and for making peace with Israel. This made Sadat a prime target for assassination, an act eventually executed by the operational arm of Abdel Rahman's organization, Al Gamaat al Islamia, which had penetrated the Egyptian army and security services.

"IF THE BOMB HAD BEEN A LITTLE BIT BIGGER, NOT MUCH MORE, I THINK IT WOULD HAVE BROUGHT THE TOWERS DOWN. IT'S REALLY SCARY."

During a tumultuous trial in which the defendants publicly charged they had been tortured by police interrogators, the sheikh was acquitted. The sheikh, who continued to agitate against the Egyptian government while his followers carried on a campaign of lethal bombings, was imprisoned for three months in 1985, for one month in 1986, and for four months in 1989. He finally left his homeland in 1990, saying, "It was too much for me."

After brief stays in Saudi Arabia and Iraq, the sheikh slipped into Pakistan, where he forged operational links with mujahedeen strongman Gulbuddin Hekmatyar, the head of a radical Afghan Islamic fundamentalist army that was being covertly backed by the CIA. According to Stephen Van Evera, an affiliate of Harvard's Center for Science and International Affairs, Hekmatyar "strongly chastised the United States and its 'immoral' society, even while Washington lavished him with aid." In Hekmatyar's guerrilla training camps, American advisers taught everything from using explosives to shooting down enemy planes with shoulder-held Stinger missiles.

The mujahedeen base camps in Peshawar were also places where militant Muslims were caught up in the spirit of the two supreme moments in recent Islamic history: the revolution in Iran, which transformed the country into a self-righteous bastion of zealous fundamentalism, and the Afghan war. "Iran symbolizes the rise of the Islamic state," says the Egyptian official, "and the Afghan war was a real battlefield for these people to acquire the stamina and capabilities to wage war." And since these two events were successful, the militants "decided to pursue this march and spread their revolutionary message to other countries."

In America, Abdel Rahman raised funds

and recruits for the mujahedeen, many of them first-generation Muslim immigrants. His mosques in Jersey City and Brooklyn also attracted fundamentalists expelled from the Gulf Emirates after the Gulf War. But many Muslims repudiate his radical preachings. Mosques across the country closed their doors to the rabble-rousing blind man. Local Muslims grew even more wary in March 1991 when Mustafa Shalabi, a 39-year-old Egyptian electrical contractor living in Brooklyn, was found lying face down on his kitchen floor in his pajamas. He had been shot once at close range near the left ear and stabbed in the back and stomach.

Police sources say Shalabi had been running guns to the Afghan rebels, as well as raising money for the legal defense of El Sayyid Nosair before his trial on charges of assassinating Rabbi Meir Kahane. Earlier, Shalabi had helped Abdel Rahman find an apartment in Brooklyn. Police speculate that Abdel Rahman had Shalabi murdered for pocketing some of the money. Shalabi "had a lot of enemies," says a police source. "There was also a lot of intrigue and infighting at his mosque in Brooklyn."

Shalabi worshipped at the El Farouq Masjid Mosque, located in a bleak storefront building at 554 Atlantic Avenue in Brooklyn. The Friday sermons were delivered by Abdel Rahman, until the directors of the mosque expelled him soon after Kahane's assassination.

The sheikh then moved entirely to the El Salaam Mosque in Jersey City. The founder of the mosque is Sultan Ibraham El Gawli, a wealthy 55-year-old Egyptian businessman who was convicted by a federal jury in July 1986 for conspiring to export 150 pounds of C-4 plastic explosives to Israel for use by the PLO in a Christmas bombing. El Gawli, who sports a full, white Santa Claus beard, served 18 months in prison before returning to Jersey City. He often marched in front of the courthouse during Nosair's trial, carrying banners with fierce anti-Israel slogans. "It's no crime praying together, is it?" El Gawli asked me when I questioned him about his friendship with Nosair.

It was the infiltrator Mamdouh Zaki Zakhary who helped U.S. Customs set up the sting operation that netted El Gawli. Zakhary, a frail man afflicted with blindness in one eye and a large goiter on his neck, wore a wire into El Galwi's office at a travel agency he owned, Sultan Travel, recording five incriminating conversations. "There were some references on the tapes about doing it [transporting the explosives] for God," recalls Kevin McCarthy, the assistant U.S. attorney who prosecuted El Gawli.

"Sultan El Gawli was the brains behind the terror cell at the mosque," says Zakhary. "There were lots of meetings in his office. He also got foreign money from the PLO and Iran. Many times he entertained and was visited by officials from Saudi Arabia, the PLO, and Iran."

"I always thought the El Gawli case was just scratching the surface of what was really going on [in the El Salaam Mosque]," admits a federal official who worked on the case. "First, El Gawli himself was this businessman who seemed to be trying to do things for the money, not for any grander scheme. And secondly, since Mamdouh was a [Coptic Christian], I thought he wouldn't have access to the real inner world of whatever was going on in the mosque. At the same time, I didn't have any indications that there was more stuff going on in the mosque."

After testifying as the key witness in a Camden, New Jersey, courthouse, Zakhary entered a federal witness-protection program. At first, he and his new bride lived in New Orleans, before he became convinced the PLO was stalking him. He moved throughout the Southwest, driving the federal marshals responsible for him crazy with complaints about the program.

Homesick and desperate for cash, Zakhary offered to return to Jersey City to spy on the Arab American community and the El Salaam Mosque, this time for the FBI, under the code name Mubarak. He stayed away from the mosque itself except for three visits, gathering what information he could through friends and acquaintances.

"I didn't know Salameh very well," says Zakhary, who was better acquainted with Ibraham Elgabrowny, a cousin of both El Gawli and El Sayyid Nosair. "Elgabrowny was a very extreme fundamentalist. He belonged to the Muslim Brotherhood in Egypt. In 1985, when the TWA plane was hijacked to Beirut, Elgabrowny said he was very happy. He said, 'If I was the kidnapper, I would start executing passengers right now.'"

In 1991, a year and a half after he began to work for the FBI, Zakhary reported to his handler that he had overheard a plot to assassinate the two U.S. senators from New York, Daniel Patrick Moynihan and Alfonse D'Amato. When incredulous FBI agents hooked him up to a lie detector, Zakhary failed the test. He blames the result on prescription medication he was taking at the time because of an automobile accident. The FBI did not believe him and terminated his employment.

"Mamdouh [Zakhary] is an honest man with very good intentions," Richard Kennan, a U.S. Customs agent, told the Israeli newspaper Ma'ariv. "[He] prevented a mass terror attack on Christmas 1985. Unfortunately, he didn't understand the American system. He was confused. I'm very sorry about what happened to him. We tried to get him asylum in the U.S., but his behavior didn't help."

The U.S. has had a long and tortured history with the Islamic world. While most Americans see Muslims as the aggressors, Muslims view the West the same way. In fact, the U.S. and the Islamic world have been trading acts of terrorism for years. In 1986, Libyan-backed terrorists bombed the La Belle discotheque in Berlin, killing two American servicemen. In response, the U.S. bombed Libya, killing 36 civilians and wounding 92. On July 3, 1988, during the Iran-Iraq war, the U.S.S. Vincennes accidentally shot down an Iranian passenger plane over the Gulf, killing 290 people. Six months afterward, Pan Am 103 disintegrated in a shower of fire and debris over Lockerbie, Scotland. No one claimed credit, but it is widely believed in intelligence circles that the Pan Am bombing was Iran's revenge.

The U.S.-funded attack that killed the greatest number of innocent civilians took place on March 8, 1985, when the U.S. tried to liquidate what it believed was the very symbol of international terrorism: fundamentalist Muslim leader Sheikh Mohammed Fadlallah, the head of Hizbollah, the Party of God. On October 23, 1983, Fadlallah had sent a suicide bomber barreling into the Marine compound in Beirut, killing 241 Marines. CIA director William Casey contracted out the job of retaliation to Saudi intelligence, which sent a car packed with explosives into a Beirut slum near Fadlallah's headquarters. A city block was devastated and more than 90 people were buried under the rubble.

Because of the persistent fear of Arab terror during the Gulf War, Arab Americans say they have been unfairly targeted for special surveillance by federal agencies. Actually, there has been little evidence of Arab terrorism on American soil. The PLO raises money and spreads propaganda in the U.S., but has refrained from attacking targets here—although it has staged murderous assaults against Americans abroad. Ironically, the week the World Trade Center was bombed, a PLO official was being tried in a Brooklyn federal court for planting powerful time bombs in rented cars parked outside two Israeli banks in Manhattan and the El Al terminal at Kennedy Airport in 1973.

Most Americans would be surprised to learn, however, that the terrorist group that led the hit parade through much of the 1980s was the Jewish Defense League, Rabbi Meir Kahane's fanatical right-wing Zionist organization. By 1985, the JDL was ranked by the FBI as the most lethal domestic terrorist group in America, overtaking the Aryan Nation, the American Nazi Party, and the Puerto Rican Revolution. The JDL has been linked to dozens of bombings and at least two assassinations, including the widely admired regional director of the Arab-American Anti-Discrimination Committee, Alex Odeh.

For years the Brooklyn-born Kahane had been calling for the expulsion of all Arabs from Israel. After moving to Jerusalem, he established the Kach Party and was elected to Israel's parliament in 1984. He drafted a slew of bills that were never passed, including one that would have made it a crime punishable by two years in prison for a Jew to have sex with an Arab. Israel's High Court banned Kahane from running for reelection in 1988 on the grounds that his party was racist and antidemocratic.

It seems certain now that Kahane's fanatical ideas made him the target of terrorism himself. On November 5, 1990, he gave the last speech of his life. "My whole life has been ideas which eventually were taken up by other people and succeeded," said Kahane in his characteristic stutter, an impediment since childhood. "Today Jewish defense is an accepted thing. A patrol in a neighborhood is an accepted thing." But patrols were no longer adequate to defend Jews in a country that was becoming increasingly anti-Semitic, Kahane warned. He urged his Jewish audience to move to Israel before a new Holocaust engulfed them in America. "They hate us with a passion out there," thundered Kahane, "with a virulence that's frightening to see."

TERRORISTS LINKED TO ABDEL RAHMAN DETONATED A BOMB IN A FASHIONABLE CAIRO RESTAURANT ON THE SAME DAY AS THE WORLD TRADE CENTER BOMBING.

Following Kahane's speech, El Sayyid Nosair approached the podium wearing a black yarmulke, as if to ask a question. Moments later, Kahane was dead. In the irony of ironies, the FBI put the New York branch of the Kach Party under surveillance to prevent it from avenging their slain leader. The FBI failed, however, to monitor activities at the radical mosques.

I interviewed Nosair for The Village Voice in a tiny detention cell on Rikers Island on the eve of his trial. Nosair, who was wearing a white tunic and a white skullcap with the words ALLAH WILL BE VICTORIOUS knitted in bold blue Arabic calligraphy across the front, began our 90-minute talk by handing me a number of pamphlets showing why Islam was the true path. "I started to practice my religion as much as I can since I came to the United States," said Nosair. "Of course, I read a lot. I read about different religions—Christianity, Judaism—I studied all these religions that led me to believe that Islam is the true way of life.

"You face many different doors" in America, continued Nosair, who had immigrated to Pittsburgh from Egypt on July 14, 1981. The true path is behind one door, he explained, while evil lurks behind the others. "Because I believe that Islam is the true way of life, I began to preach Islam, to prove to people from their own [religious] books that Islam is the correct way of life." Islam, he told me, is encoded in each of us at birth. Each person is created in submission to Allah. We pervert nature, he said, when we embrace Judaism or Christianity. "Judaism has a lot of materialistic rituals with a minimum of spiritual rituals, and that's why Allah sent Islam to mankind," Nosair said. Judaism is an abomination, he explained, not because of race or blood (the Arabs ,too ,are ,Semites), but ,because ,the Jews refuse to accept Mohammed as the Prophet.

I asked Nosair if the Koran says there is such a thing as a just killing. "Of course, there has to be," he replied. "We have to have an Islamic state—that's why we try to preach Islam to everybody."

Nosair admitted he is a big "celebrity" in the Muslim world, where he is credited with killing Kahane. When Nosair's wife, Caren, a blue-eyed Irish Catholic convert to Islam, and three children traveled to Egypt a year after Kahane's murder, they were met at the airport by government officials and driven through Cairo in a motorcade. Caren's chaperone was none other than Nosair's cousin, Ibraham Elgabrowny.

Elgabrowny had helped raise more than $250,000 for Nosair's legal defense. The trial turned out to be one of the most shocking in New York history. The Manhattan D.A.'s case against Nosair was as narrowly focused as the investigation had been. The prosecution didn't present any of the evidence police found in Nosair's apartment ,suggesting his terrorist connections and never offered the jury an explanation of Nosair's motive, despite the fact that Manhattan Assistant District Attorney William Greenbaum knew that Nosair was bragging to fellow inmates at Rikers Island that "Allah chose me to kill the big Jew." At least one inmate reported Nosair's confession to the D.A.'s office, according to sources close to the investigation. After close questioning that included a lie-detector test, the inmate was deemed highly credible by the D.A. But in a catastrophic miscalculation, Greenbaum decided not to put the inmate on the stand.

The D.A. believed there was ample evidence to convict Nosair without delving into his motive, which would have led the trial into the swamp of Kahane's radical ideas, 50 years of Arab-Israeli enmity, and the internal politics of Israel and Egypt. What looked to every observer like an open-and-shut case ended with Nosair's stunning acquittal: he was, however, sentenced to 22 years for related charges.

"In this case the result is so jarring that it has tempted people to talk about taking the law into their own hands," former U.S. attorney Rudolph Giuliani wrote to Manhattan U.S. Attorney Otto Obermaier after the verdict. Giuliani recommended that the FBI reopen the Nosair investigation. The Justice Department refused, and the case dimmed from public memory until the World Trade Center was bombed.

The authorities are just now reopening the Kahane investigation. It is possible that Nosair will be tried in federal court for violating Kahane's civil rights, much as the police in the Rodney King case are now being tried. A new investigation may find that the bombers of the World Trade Center were also Kahane's killers. The connections seem strong. Both Elgabrowny and Salameh visited Nosair in Attica. And federal agents found forged Nicaraguan passports made out to Nosair and his family in Elgabrowny's Brooklyn brownstone. Attica officials are currently investigating whether an escape was being planned.

Another suspect in the case, Mahmud Abouhalima, a New York City taxi driver and an associate of both Nosair and Salameh, fled the U.S., reportedly for Egypt. Investigators believe he may now be in Pakistan, where he had trained with the mujahedeen and later fought in the Afghan war. Investigators are also looking for links between the bombing suspects and Mir Aimal Kansi, who is being sought for the slaying of two CIA employees in front of the agency's Virginia headquarters. According to a federal prosecutor, Kansi had told his roommate that he was going to commit a violent act to protest what he perceived as Western mistreatment of Muslims.

This much is certain: Just 12 hours afer Kahane's killing, the government was espousing the lone-gunman theory and Nosair's terrorist connections were ignored. Had the investigation into the assassination of Rabbi Meir Kahane been vigorously pursued, the World Trade Center bombing may never have happened. ■

To : SAC, WMFO [redacted] Date 4/9/93 b7D

From : SSA [redacted] (C-5 BCCI) b6 b7C

Subject: [redacted] b6 b7C b7D

PURPOSE

The purpose of this memorandum is to [redacted] b7D b7E anticipated expeditures relating to, "HIDDEN INTERESTS; MC #38; FIF; FAG; OO: WMFO" (i.e., the BCCI investigation).

DETAILS

The captioned source has been providing consistently-reliable information to the FBI [redacted] On numerous occasions [redacted] has furnished relevant, timely, valuable information relating to [redacted] (X) b6 b7C b7D

Currently, MC #38 is at a point where singular, inside information is required to identify, investigate and prosecute any U.S. citizens, who were/are culpable in any illegal, BCCI-related activities. Also at this time, MC #38 has several fugitives, all foreign nationals, who could provide such inside information and whose capture and presentation for U.S. trial is, at best, problematic. These fugitives include: AGHA HASAN ABEDI, the founder and chairman of BCCI, who reportedly is in extremely poor health in his native Pakistan; [redacted] who presently is being [redacted] GHAITH RACHAD PHARAON, a Saudi Arabian, who was a major BCCI nominee and whose exact whereabouts are unknown; and b6 b7C

There are also two witnesses--both [redacted] and, b6 b7C therefore, for all intents and purposes, unavailable--who are either known or believed to possess very valuable information, some of which is immediately needed in the New York trial of [redacted] The witnesses are [redacted]

In recent days, [redacted] has reported that [redacted] b6 b7C b7D

Another of [redacted]'s contacts is reputed to have b6 b7C b7D

Deputy Assistant Attorney General [redacted] b6 b7C
DOJ, very recently stated that, in his opinion, the U.S. should expend its resources in discovering and prosecuting culpable U.S. citizens; that, given the distinct possibility that none of the foreign fugitives will ever appear here, it may be preferable to negotiate deals with them in return for cooperation. In that context, DAAG [redacted] said he would certainly value the cooperation of ABEDI and/or [redacted], if it were offered.

3. Meeting with representatives of [redacted] DOJ. [redacted] Attending for DOJ were [redacted] and myself. As yet, the French had not extradited [redacted] to England, but they have reportedly agreed to do so. I asked [redacted] to ask [redacted] has discovered any criminal activity within our jurisdiction as a result of their PW investigation. This meeting was to resume the next day, when [redacted] and DANY would be in attendance. One item for discussion would be whether and how to [redacted]

FBI MANAGEMENT OF DOCUMENTS ASSOCIATED WITH THE BCCI INVESTIGATION

As of 3/18/92, the following conditions exist:

FBI Files:

Records created by the FBI during this (and any) investigation, e.g., reports of interviews (FD-302s) and administrative documents, are stored in hard-copy form in the case file and are locatable through a Bureau-wide, computerized indices.

Documentary Evidence:

With the notable exception of original records acquired by means of a search warrant, the documentary evidence in this case is almost exclusively photocopies. The original records derived from the search are under the care and custody of the FBI/WMFO, stored in an evidence room at its Tysons Corner offices. The other, photocopied documents are not managed by the FBI; rather, they are in the possession of the Department of Justice (DOJ), stored in Washington, D.C., either at the U.S. Attorney's Office, or DOJ's Bond Building, or, temporarily, in the "Aspen" imaging facility (for processing) in the National Press Building.

Retrieval of only those search-derived records under FBI/WMFO's control is accomplished by means of selection from a hard-copy, box-file-level index, which is a serial in one of the volumes of the FBI/WMFO's file on the BCCI case.

Honorable William S. Sessions
Director
Federal Bureau of Investigations
U.S. Department of Justice
J. Edgar Hoover Building, Rm. 7176
Washington, D. C. 20530

Dear Director Sessions:

This morning, Judge Joyce Hens Green accepted the guilty plea of the BCCI liquidators to the federal racketeering information we filed in District Court here in Washington. She also entered the forfeiture order we proposed as the sentence in the case. In accepting the plea, the plea agreement and the proposed sentence, she complimented the "extraordinary effort and cooperation" which brought us to this day. That praise is due all of you whose help, support and work made this milestone attainable.

Thank you for your past assistance and continuing efforts to make this work for the best interests of the public.

Dear Mr. Terwilliger:

Thank you for your January 25th letter acknowledging the efforts of FBI personnel in connection with the investigation of Bank of Credit and Commerce International (BCCI). It is always a pleasure to receive favorable comments about our personnel, and I will share your praise with those who worked so diligently on this case.

The international aspects of this investigation made it particularly challenging, and my colleagues and I are delighted by the Government's success in obtaining the guilty plea. We hope the Government's dogged pursuit of justice in this case will curtail any similar activity contemplated by others.

Sincerely yours,

William S. Sessions

Re writer's memo dated 3/16/92.

In referenced memo, writer outlined the contents of various House papers regarding BCCI and third-world nuclear capabilities. It was noted in the memo that follow-up would be made with SSA [redacted] Congressional Affairs Office. b6 b7C

On 3/20/92, writer and SA [redacted] met with SSA [redacted] at his office and discussed issues relating to this topic. SSA [redacted] had discovered that the author of these papers may have had ulterior objectives in preparing these works. SSA [redacted] agreed to make contacts with appropriate FCI personnel to determine if contact with anyone at Congress would be appropriate. Writer and SA [redacted] agreed to await word from [redacted] before contacting anyone on the Hill. b6 b7C

Writer was recently provided with materials forwarded to the squad from the White Collar Section, Financial Institution Fraud Unit. These materials are four papers prepared by the House Republican Research Committee, Task Force on Terrorism and Unconventional Warfare. The papers were apparently sent to the Financial Institution Fraud Unit by the Counter-Terrorism Section, and are titled: BCCI and the Nuclear Question; Iran's Strategy and Nuclear Capabilities; BCCI - An Introduction; and BCCI - Between Peru and Washington, D.C.

Writer has conducted a review of these papers to determine what statements and allegations are contained therein that should be of interest to Federal Law Enforcement. Each of these papers is replete with allegations and summary statements of wrong-doing on the part of BCCI. Most of these allegations have surfaced previously, and when mentioned in the papers are not accompanied by evidence of factual support. The writers of the papers offer no basis of knowledge for the statements made.

A summary of each paper is provided below. Writer has reviewed these materials with SA [redacted] and it was agreed that follow-up would be made through SA [redacted] Congressional Liaison. b6 b7C

On 4/7/92, the writer attended a conference at the Department of Justice (DOJ). Attendees included Assistant Attorney General (AAG) ROBERT MUELLER, Deputy Assistant Attorney General LAWRENCE URGENSON, Chief of the Fraud Section [redacted] b6
[redacted] Deputy Chief of the Fraud Section [redacted] b7C
Trial Attorney (TA) [redacted] AUSA [redacted] and AUSA [redacted]

The purpose of the meeting was to discuss/review the status of the FBI/DOJ BCCI Task Force Investigation. AAG MUELLER received a thorough briefing of the investigative status and developments based on the recent trip to London by Task Force members.

The following points were discussed and should be of interest to us:

1. DOJ has made an official request for documents from the British Liquidators of BCCI.

2. It is anticipated that First American Bank (FAB) will fail in the near future. DOJ believes that the Federal Reserve will take steps to have a Court appointed Trustee named to run FAB.

3. AAG MUELLER stated that [redacted] b7D b7E

4. DOJ plans to vigorously pursue the extradition of [redacted] b6 b7C b7D

5. AAG MUELLER advised that DOJ has requested that the [redacted] b7D b7E

The following investigative steps are anticipated, contingent upon evidence reviews and the development of additional evidence:

A. First American Bank

1. Consider indictments against nominee shareholders of CCAH stock. TA [redacted] opined that such action could be accomplished in the near future. b6 b7C

2. Attempt to obtain the cooperation of one or more nominees.

3. Consider an indictment against [redacted]

4. Consider an indictment against CLARK CLIFFORD.

In order to accomplish the above steps the review of records from sources including the Cayman Islands, Miami and London need to continue.

With respect to [redacted] and CLIFFORD, it is believed that stronger evidence exists against [redacted] at this juncture. However, at this time, prosecutive evidence is lacking. It is believed that the following BCCI insiders could provide direct evidence against [redacted] and CLIFFORD: b6 b7C

[redacted] b6 b7C

Other BCCI insiders who are believed to be knowledgeable of [redacted] and CLIFFORD are: b6 b7C

Re: News Items on Kissinger's Consultant Sergio Correa da Costa and other Kissinger-related Material

Dear Sir:

I have enclosed the news items on Sergio Correa da Costa, who was Kissinger's personal consultant while serving as a BCCI executive in Brazil, as well as other matters of interest.

Although you may have these, I am including documents that I received from Sen. John F. Kerry's (D-Mass.) Senate Foreign Relations Subcommittee probe of BCCI. These are copies of BCCI documents on Sergio Correa da Costa.

Finally, I have included the Journal Graphics transcript of the March 29, 1992 CBS 60 Minutes broadcast dealing with Kissinger's conflicts-of-interest over China and Iraq. If you are interested, I have a great deal of information on both. And, I can tell you that Kissinger's conflicts include Golden Triangle (opium/heroin) proceeds to a significant degree, according to sources of mine associated with the CIA and business analysis.

Thank you for your cooperation.

CBS News--60 Minutes
On Kissinger's Conflicts-of-interest

CBS NEWS — 60 MINUTES
Volume XXIV, Number 28

March 29, 1992

HENRY KISSINGER: [PBS, "MacNeil/Lehrer NewsHour"] I think it's outrageous to imply that my views would be influenced by economic considerations, and I want to make— as the man who took the trip to China, I don't need economic motives to have a position on China.

JIM LEHRER: Well, I was going to ask you about that later—

Dr. KISSINGER: It is a disgraceful story.

[Graphic: "Wall Street Journal" headline: "Mr. Kissinger Has Opinions on China— And Business Ties."]

LEHRER: —yeah—

Dr. KISSINGER: It's a shameful story.

LEHRER: —yeah, but—

Dr. KISSINGER: I mean, we ought to be able to have our debates on the merit of the issues, as you pose them, without always attacking the motives of the people who have positions.

ED BRADLEY: [voice-over] You would think that the man who made E.T., the number-one box-office success of all time, wouldn't have any doubts about himself or his movies.

STEPHEN SPIELBERG: I have doubts about myself in both worlds.

Every movie I make, and every movie I start, I don't think I can pull it off. The same feeling I get going to work every morning is the feeling I got going to school every day, being a bit of an outsider, and not being normal and not quite getting the grades, and not being able to compete, and I— my tummy is shpilkas [sp?], my mom would call it.

H. ROSS PEROT: The total national debt was only $1 trillion in 1980, when President Reagan took office. It is now $4 trillion. Maybe it was voodoo economics.

MORLEY SAFER: [voice-over] Who is this lonesome rider? Well, he's a man who says he'll spend $100 million of his own money to make himself president and get us out of— well, let him tell you.

Mr. PEROT: We are now in deep voodoo, I'll tell you that.

MIKE WALLACE: I'm Mike Wallace.

SAFER: I'm Morley Safer.

BRADLEY: I'm Ed Bradley.

STEVE KROFT: I'm Steve Kroft.

LESLEY STAHL: I'm Lesley Stahl. Those stories and Andy Rooney, tonight on 60 Minutes.

Kissinger

WALLACE: Isn't it curious that four living former presidents of the United States together don't appear on television as often as one living former secretary of state? You can't turn on a television set during a foreign policy crisis without finding Henry Kissinger on CBS, PBS, NBC, ABC, CNN or C-SPAN.

But what does he do when he's not on television? Well, through a consulting firm that he calls Kissinger Associates, he sells advice to a gold-plated list of corporate clients, sometimes about how to do business with the very same governments, the same leaders, that he talks about on television.

Is there a conflict there? Does Henry Kissinger ever use his fame and connections, his public appearances, to advocate public policies which serve his own financial interests as well as those of his clients? And is he selling his clients not just advice, but also influence and access?

That's what we wanted to talk to him about, but this time he didn't want to go on television, not unless we played by his ground rules; in effect, he wanted to control the editing. So we decided to go ahead without him.

[voice-over] After many years of public service, Henry Kissinger told me, he was several hundred thousand dollars in debt. Today, as a public/private figure, he is reportedly worth more than $30 million. How did he do it? Well, for starters, he gives speeches, at up to $40,000 a throw. He nets about a million a year from that. He collects fees for sitting on the boards of some of America's biggest companies, including CBS, American Express, Union Pacific, Revlon, Macy's. That earns him probably another quarter-million a year. He writes 20 columns a year for the Los Angeles Times syndicate, like this one shortly after the Tiananmen Square massacre ["The Caricature of Deng as a Tyrant Is Unfair"], for which he collects up to half a million dollars annually.

But the lion's share, between $3 and $5 million a year, comes from Kissinger Associates, a company that he formed in 1982, six years after he left the government. His client list, while a closely guarded secret, is known to include, at any one time, about 30 of the largest companies in the world, American Express, Coca Cola, Anheuser Busch, H.J. Heinz, Volvo, Arco, Hunt Oil, Chase Manhattan, the American International Group (AIG), and Freeport McMoRan, an international mining company. Each pays Kissinger Associates fees between a quarter-million and a half-million dollars a year.

WALTER ISAACSON: These are hard-headed people. They're not going to be spending half a million dollars a year if they aren't getting something out of it.

WALLACE: [voice-over] Time magazine senior editor Walter Isaacson has spent five years researching and writing Henry Kissinger's unauthorized biography. Isaacson had the cooperation of some of Kissinger's clients. He says that what they get is foreign policy advice, strategic insights and, sometimes, extraordinary access.

Mr. ISAACSON: There's only one consultant in New York or Washington who can travel with you to China, and you can have lunch in the Great Hall of the People with Deng Xiaoping, and that's Henry Kissinger.

WALLACE: [voice-over] That happened with one of his clients in 1989, only five months after the Tiananmen Square massacre. With diplomatic relations badly frayed between China and the U.S., Dr. Kissinger flew to Beijing with his client, Maurice Greenberg, chairman of the American International Group, AIG, and in Beijing they had lunch with China's paramount leader, Deng Xiaoping. By the time Greenberg left China, we've been told, AIG had an agreement to expand its business there, this at a time when the Chinese wouldn't even let the U.S. ambassador, James Lilly, meet with Deng Xiaoping.

JAMES LILLY: I tried to see him, and I was told that he was unavailable, he was retired.

WALLACE: And yet Henry Kissinger went—

Amb. LILLY: Well, I was— I was—

WALLACE: —with Maurice Greenberg—

Amb. LILLY: —yes.

WALLACE: —and he sat down and had lunch with Deng Xiaoping.

Amb. LILLY: Well, you see, I was— I was the heavy. I was the representative of the United States government, which had imposed sanctions on China, and my embassy was surrounded by troops with helmets and guns, and I was not— I was not their favorite boy.

WALLACE: [voice-over] The extraordinary access that Kissinger is able to give his clients is based on the contacts and relationships he established while in government as national security adviser and secretary of state under two presidents.

Mr. ISAACSON: Kissinger has a nice web of people around the world he has known for years, people who have come to power since he left office, but he's formed connections with. That's how he makes his money. He has a nice seamless web of interests and influence.

WALLACE: [voice-over] And Kissinger Associates has been a revolving door for people like Brent Scowcroft and Lawrence Eagleburger, who worked for Kissinger in the Nixon and Ford administrations. Scowcroft and Eagleburger left government to work for Kissinger Associates, and then they left Kissinger Associates to return to government, Scowcroft as national security adviser to George Bush, and Eagleburger as number two man at the State Department. Both men are still close to Henry Kissinger.

For example, just six days after the Tiananmen massacre, Scowcroft flew on a government plane to spend the weekend at Kissinger's Connecticut estate. He listed this trip as official business.

Henry Kissinger's "seamless web" of interests and influence came into play in Kissinger Associates' dealings with Iraq. Ken Timmerman, publisher of Middle East Defense News, who wrote the book, The Death Lobby: How the West Armed Iraq, says that Iraq's biggest problem in late 1988 was money.

KEN TIMMERMAN: Iraq was bankrupt at the end of the war with Iran, and was saddled with about $35 billion worth of commercial debt and again as much, another $35 billion, in debts to the Arab world.

WALLACE: Seventy billion dollars?

Mr. TIMMERMAN: Seventy billion dollars. And Iraq was also spending 50 percent of its GNP on weapons, and weapons manufacturing.

WALLACE: Right. So?

Mr. TIMMERMAN: So they needed to somehow restructure their debt to regain the confidence of western banks.

WALLACE: [voice-over] Iraq needed money badly, and in June of 1989, less than a year after the end of the Iran/Iraq war, a delegation of U.S. business executives from a group called the U.S.-Iraq Business Forum was invited to Baghdad to discuss, among other things, how Saddam could get easier terms on his loans, so he could borrow even more money. This was during the time the U.S. was covertly supporting Iraq as a counterforce to Iran. At least one Kissinger client was in the group, and Kissinger Associates' senior economist, Allen Stoga [sp?], was part of the group, too. Marshall Wiley, a former U.S. ambassador to Oman, headed the delegation. We asked him, why Allen Stoga?

MARSHALL WILEY: I'm sure his association with Kissinger had— was probably the primary reason why he was invited to go along.

WALLACE: [voice-over] And what did Stoga do in Baghdad?

Mr. WILEY: He talked generally about the feasibility of debt restructuring for Iraq and—

WALLACE: In other words, he was giving them advice.

Mr. WILEY: Yeah. As we all were. That was one of the purposes of our trip.

WALLACE: [voice-over] Joe Conason wrote about Kissinger Associates' involvement in pre-Gulf-war Iraq for the magazine The New Republic, and the key element in Conason's story concerned Allen Stoga's trip to Baghdad.

JOE CONASON: I believe that the U.S.-Iraq Business Forum wanted a representative of Kissinger Associates along because it gives them greater weight. I also believe that they wanted someone who they know has connections to major banking interests.

WALLACE: [voice-over] And Kissinger Associates did have a longstanding relationship with a major banking interest: the Banca Nazionale del Lavoro, BNL, a leading Italian bank with branches in the United States, which would prove to be the vehicle through which Iraq would get its major infusion of cash. BNL had been a client of Kissinger Associates from 1986 to '88, and Brent Scowcroft, at that time vice chairman of Kissinger Associates, met three times to give advice, as he put it, to the BNL board of directors. Kissinger himself was a member of BNL's international advisory committee from 1985 to '91.

BNL's branch in Atlanta had been lending Saddam big money, supposedly for agricultural products, because it was against U.S. law to lend Saddam money for military equipment. But the Justice Department discovered that the money was going instead, illegally, for arms, and they seized the bank's records. Nonetheless, Deputy Secretary of State Lawrence Eagleburger, formerly of Kissinger Associates, wrote this 1989 memo proposing even larger "agricultural loans to Saddam." It is unmistakably clear from Eagleburger's memo that he was aware BNL was already under investigation because its previous loans had been used for military supplies.

Well, that investigation continued and in February of 1991, it resulted in a 347-count indictment against a number of former BNL employees. But Kissinger Associates' involvement with BNL and Iraq, and Kissinger's membership on BNL's international advisory committee didn't become public for another four months, until the House Banking Committee investigated BNL and those illegal loans. Representative Henry Gonzalez of Texas is chairman of the House Banking Committee.

Rep. HENRY GONZALEZ: Mr. Kissinger held this position during the height of the biggest banking scandal in United States history, $4 billion in unreported loans to Iraq by the Atlanta branch of the Banca Nazionale. Many Kissinger Associates clients were doing business with the Iraqis as a direct result of the unreported $4 billion in BNL loans to Iraq. Volvo, whose chairman serves on the Kissinger Associates board of directors, was doing big business in Iraq, and it was a beneficiary of BNL loans.

WALLACE: [voice-over] Henry Kissinger told The Financial Times of London that he had resigned from the BNL advisory committee just days before the 347 indictments were handed down because, he said, "I don't want to be connected, I don't want to be asked about this sort of question." But in fact, Henry Kissinger did not resign from the BNL advisory committee until August of 1991, some six months after those BNL indictments were handed down.

Kissinger also told The Financial Times, "I didn't have any idea of what BNL was doing in Iraq," but Ken Timmerman of Middle East Defense News thinks that there is no way Kissinger could not have known about what BNL was doing, because some of his clients were involved in the build-up of Iraq's military.

Mr. TIMMERMAN: I don't think Kissinger could not have known, with his contacts in the intelligence community and his contacts in the companies that were actually doing the building.

WALLACE: And the fact that Brent Scowcroft and Larry Eagleburger, ex-Kissinger Associates people, were now at the top of the Bush administration.

Mr. TIMMERMAN: Frankly, you couldn't be better plugged-in than that.

Mr. CONASON: he only thing that could happen if you reschedule Saddam Hussein's debt was that he was going to buy more weapons, and that's what he did.

WALLACE: After your piece was published in The New Republic, Henry Kissinger wrote The New Republic a letter in which he claimed, "I have read with surprise and outrage an article in your edition of October 2. The piece is alive with false allegations about my consulting company's activities in Iraq which, in fact, are non-existent." True?

Mr. TIMMERMAN: Absolutely false. Allen Stoga was in Baghdad; that means he was in Iraq. That means he was engaged in consulting activities in Iraq.

WALLACE: To "listen and learn," says Henry Kissinger.

Mr. TIMMERMAN: No. No. Ask the people who were on the trip and, for that matter, ask Allen Stoga, if he'll come on camera, what he was doing there. Was he just a tourist who got to sit and listen to Saddam Hussein for two hours? Absolutely not, and no one who has ever been in Baghdad, no one who knows anything about Iraq, would believe for a moment that Allen Stoga was there to listen to Saddam Hussein. Saddam Hussein was listening to Allen Stoga.

Mr. WILEY: Kissinger's man Stoga was there at the request of the Iraqis, to go along at this delegation, and I am certain one of their motives was to find out more about what was going on so they could advise their clients. Another motive was to participate in the discussion, along with the rest of us, with the Iraqi government on what the problems were, and I see nothing wrong with this, no.

WALLACE: We were surprised when we got a letter about the Conason article from the publisher of The New Republic, Martin Peretz. Peretz is an old and close friend of Henry Kissinger's. Peretz said that he hadn't given Conason's piece "the scrutiny which I should have given it before." He wrote us that the editors of The New Republic regretted retailing this story. And then Peretz apparently had second thoughts about his second thoughts, and he had his lawyer call us to ask us not to use the letter in any way.

[voice-over] But The New Republic article wasn't the first time Henry Kissinger revealed his sensitivity about criticism of his consulting activities. In 1989 The Wall Street Journal had chided him for his dual role as a commentator and businessman dealing with the rulers of the People's Republic of China. Al Hunt is Washington bureau chief of The Wall Street Journal.

AL HUNT: I have never seen the kind of reaction that I saw with Henry Kissinger. There have been people who have been even madder about pieces, and people who probably had more cause to be angry about pieces, but usually they have quarreled with the facts, they have said it was, you know, it was inaccurate, et cetera. Dr. Kissinger never suggested it was inaccurate. What he basically said was that we didn't have the right to address the issue.

WALLACE: [voice-over] The Wall Street Journal story revealed that Henry Kissinger and a number of his clients had set up a $75-million corporation called China Ventures to make investments in China. One of China Ventures' partners was the China International Trust and Investment Corporation, the official investment agency of the Chinese government, widely known to be staffed by various family members of the Chinese ruling elite. The Wall Street Journal pointed out that when Kissinger went on television to comment on the Tiananmen massacre, his financial relations with China were never mentioned.

Kissinger didn't like The Wall Street Journal story, and he said so when he appeared on the MacNeil/Lehrer NewsHour.

Dr. KISSINGER: [MacNeil/Lehrer NewsHour] I think it's outrageous to imply that my views would be influenced by economic considerations, and I want to make— as the man who took the secret trip to 1325015-000-6333

China, I don't need economic motives to have a position on China.

JIM LEHRER: Well, I was going to ask you about that later, but—

Dr. KISSINGER: It is a disgraceful story.

Mr. LEHRER: —yeah— and— but it's—

Dr. KISSINGER: It's a shameful story.

Mr. LEHRER: —yeah, but—

Dr. KISSINGER: I mean, we ought to be able to have our debates on the merit of the issues, as you pose them, without always attacking the motives of the people who have positions.

WALLACE: [voice-over] And later, on CNN's Crossfire, he told host Michael Kinsley that, after Tiananmen, he had suspended his China Ventures business enterprise.

MICHAEL KINSLEY: [CNN] But is The Wall Street Journal incorrect in saying that you did have business interests that were threatened and, in fact, put on hold by the Tiananmen Square massacre, and that you do have — not that this necessarily interests— that you do have business interests that would profit from a restoring of normal relations with China?

Dr. KISSINGER: Absolutely not.

Mr. KINSLEY: That's completely false?

Dr. KISSINGER: It is substantially false. I suspended these— these— any actions that raise a question of where the Chinese government might benefit, I suspended them, not anybody else, the day after Tiananmen—

Mr. KINSLEY: Well, every business— every business— every American business contact in China was suspended.

Dr. KISSINGER: Absolutely not, almost— most— 95 percent of American businesses continued in China unchanged.

Mr. KINSLEY: So, have you unsuspended—

Dr. KISSINGER: And—

Mr. KINSLEY: —wait, let me ask, have you unsuspended them?

Dr. KISSINGER: —they're still suspended.

Mr. KINSLEY: They're still suspended? But why, if you're urging that we renew—

Dr. KISSINGER: Because— precisely to prevent smart-alecks from creating the impression that my opinions are for sale.

Mr. HUNT: He went absolutely ballistic. He called virtually everyone who was quoted in the story, and asked them to recant what they had said afterwards.

WALLACE: [voice-over] One of the people quoted in the story was Peter Jennings, who had used Kissinger as an expert on an ABC News special the day of the Tiananmen massacre.

Dr. KISSINGER: [ABC News] I wouldn't do anything, since I think what President Bush did yesterday, the statement he made, seemed to me exactly right. He deplored the action, he called on the government to return to the path of conciliation and dialogue, and I believe that this is the wisest course to take.

Mr. HUNT: And Peter told us that if he had known that Dr. Kissinger had had the kind of business ties that he had in China, he would not have used him as an analyst on ABC to talk about U.S. policy toward China. And Dr. Kissinger called Peter Jennings and, in essence, talked about the good, long relationship he had had with ABC and suggested that Peter say that he was misquoted or it was taken out of context.

WALLACE: And Peter wouldn't?

Mr. HUNT: And Peter told him to go fly a kite, or something to that effect.

WALLACE: [voice-over] Peter Jennings confirmed the story.

So where do we come down? What's the bottom line on Kissinger Associates? We go back to Walter Isaacson, the man who has spent five years writing a Kissinger biography.

Mr. ISAACSON: People aren't just paying for the foreign policy advice, or the strategic insight. They're paying for the name Henry Kissinger. They're paying for the aura that comes around Henry Kissinger. They're paying for the fact that Henry Kissinger can land with them in Malaysia, or in Beijing, and that cabinet ministers will come out and want to see him. So what they get is a whole package, and I don't think we have to characterize it as being excessively sleazy or a paragon of virtue.

WALLACE: As we said, Henry Kissinger declined to sit for an interview unless we went along with his ground rules, ground rules about controlling the editing that have been traditionally unacceptable on 60 Minutes.

But during the course of our reporting, we did hear several times from his Washington attorney, Lloyd Cutler who, by the way, was White House counsel under Jimmy Carter. Mr. Cutler wrote us this in respect to Dr. Kissinger's activities with Iraq.

"Dr. Kissinger," he wrote, "was a vigorous public critic of Saddam Hussein's behavior before and after the Gulf war. As for China, you heard Dr. Kissinger himself defend his conduct, both with Jim Lehrer and Michael Kinsley."

Finally, on Dr. Kissinger's behalf, Lloyd Cutler wrote us: "In the light of his well-deserved reputation as a scholar and his considerable accomplishments as a public servant, I would think it outrageous to suggest that his published writings are designed to line his pockets rather than to advocate policies that he believes will best serve the public interest."

Spielberg

BRADLEY: If there were an Academy Award category, "best producer and/or director of money-making movies," Stephen Spielberg would win, hands down. Spielberg has either directed and/or produced six of the top moneymakers of all time. If there were category, "creator of blockbusters who isn't always taken seriously by some in his profession," he'd win that one, too.

News Items on Sergio Correa da Costa

- SECOND INTERVIEW WITH DEPUTY SECRETARY LARRY EAGLEBURGER -
- (PD/BIR at Charlottesville, Va. on 11/24/91) -
- (Reproduced from Tape) -

This was a pretext call done with the name of [redacted] b6 b7C from Business International Review on the above date.

Q. Is this Secretary Eagleburger?

A. It is...

Q. (Read October 7, 1988 letter from Kissinger Associates [redacted] b6 b7C to BCCI [redacted] about ongoing talks for contracting a business relationship. I also read the October 12 memo from [redacted] to BCCI international [redacted] about how [redacted] said Kissinger had recommended they hire Burson-Marstella to handle public relations on the October 11 bust of Tampa BCCI. I then ask if Kissinger Associates, Inc. usually renders such services for firms with which they are negotiating to become clients?).

A. No.

Q. Now in the Dec. 19 interoffice memo from [redacted] b6 b7C states: ``It would be of interest for you to know Mr. Scowcroft is the Nationational Security Designate in the Bush Administration and another Partner of Kissinger Associates is being tapped for Assistant Secretary of State in the Bush Administration.'' Now is that latter person you?

A. Yeah, but he got the wrong title.

Q. I do not remember when you were actually nominated? Wasn't it after the swearing in on Jan. 20, 1989?

A. It wasn't until after the Administration had come in, but I had pretty well cut out of Kissinger Associates by December.

Q. I seem to recall there was some discussion about what post you would get, that it was somehow not certain except that it would be a high-level one in the State Department.

A. Well, it was always only one. And by that time in December I had pretty much left Kissinger Associates.

Q. You mean in other words you were involved in transition activities?

A. Yeah. Yeah.

Q. Now [redacted]s last memo to [redacted] on Jan. 11 is sort of strange. b6 b7C It says he had lunch with ``the gentlemen'' and a talk in the same early-January dates referred to earlier for a meeting with [redacted] again... b6 b7C

A. Yeah.

Q. Then it says how ``they'' were well-aware of the BCCI situation, and had made ``certain `unofficial' recommendations'' as to how to deal with it. It said that [redacted] would meet with the gentlemen's senior partner, which presumably would mean Henry Kissinger, but he could only tell [redacted] about the recommendations face-to-face. Do you know what sor of recommendations [redacted] might have made? b6 b7C

A. I don't know. I have no idea. It's the first I've heard of it.

Q. So you think maybe this was something that [redacted] and perhaps Henry Kissinger were dealing with directly independent of other Kissinger Associates' staff? b6 b7C

A. All I can say is that I know nothing about it. I know nothing about it. If they were doing it...I know what [redacted] has said, which was that he discussed a business relationship with BCCI and then turned it down. The memoes you just read to me are the first time I ever heard of it. b6 b7C

Q. Yeah, from what [redacted] told The New York Times, the firm had a nibble, started to real it in, then threw it back. But, these memoes make it seem to be far more ongoing. b6 b7C

A. As far as I know they never signed a contract and never took BCCI as a client, but that's only what I read.

Q. Again, I'd like to ask, would your firm do services for a client before a contract has been signed as is claimed with Burson-Marsteller. I know an attorney aware of the situation who swears Burson-Marstellar did work for BCCI after the Tampa bust.

A. No...Not as far as I ever knew. Now the Burson-Marsteller thing though. You know. I don't know that they had a contract with Burson-Marsteller or not. They have have just said: `If you need a public relations firm, that's where you ought to go.' I don't know. I'm just guessing.

Q. It would have been nothing other than to say this firm did good work in banking?

A. Well, I know there had been earlier contacts between Kissinger Associates with Burson-Marsteller. Burson-Marsteller had been a client at an earlier stage.

Q. I recall the last time we spoke you said you had talked to Henry Kissinger about his being on the international policy board of Banca Nazionale del Lavoro (BNL).

A. I knew he was on it. I don't know when he was first on it, but I think he was on it when I came on board Kissinger Associates.

Q. Do you think his relationship with BNL pre-dated Kissinger Associates?

A. My very hazy recollection is he was probably on that board when I came on board Kissinger Associates.

Q. That's circa 1984?

A. I came in '84. I couldn't say whether it went back earlier. But, I know the advisory board that he was on, when he was on it, had Rockefeller and a number of other people.

Q. Was [redacted] on it? b6 b7C

A. He may well have been.

Q. Well, I think Kissinger Associates is referring all of these sorts of questions to Ambassador Bremer to think of a response.

A. Yeegads. He can have fun with it.

Q. But, of course, he was there for far less time than you.

A. He wasn't there long. He came on when I left.

Q. I cannot remember whether I mentionned this. You know several BCCI witnesses keep talking about evidence of a 'passthrough' from BCCI Tampa to your firm.

A. A which? That's the first I ever heard of it. What do you mean by a passwhatever?

Q. A bribe. Money transfer. Payoff. Excuse me, it's an old New York expression.

A. I don't know nuthing.

Q. Well, I didn't really think you would say you had, if you had. But, there are several people who claim that these documents exist and that they will come out soon.

A. Well, they'll have to come out then. If it's true, it's true.

- FIRST INTERVIEW WITH DEPUTY SECRETARY LARRY EAGLEBURGER -
- (PD/BIR on 11/17/91 at Charlottesville) -
- (Reproduced from Notes) -

From his home Charlottesville, Va. this weekend, which is near the estates of [redacted] and other families with ill-gotten wealth, Deputy Secretary of State Lawrence Eagleburger spoke about the growing scandal that involves BCCI/BNL links with Kissinger Associates. What follows is Eagleburger's responses, where the questions are implict: b6 b7C

``I've read some of the stories, and I see that [redacted] at Kissinger Associates, Inc. had been approached by the BCCI and that there was some discussion of taking them as a client in 1988, but Kissinger Associates, Inc. turned them down. I knew nothing about these negotiations at the time. Nor, do I know anything about the charges that [redacted] and Henry Kissinger suggested they should hire the public relations firm Burson-Marsteller after the indictment of BCCI staff in their Tampa, Florida branch.... I know nothing, even though, as you state, I was president of Kissinger Asssociates, Inc. b6 b7C

``It is true that Henry Kissinger was on the board of the BNL.... But, I never discussed it with Henry. And, I knew nothing about a connection between the loan officers and loans of my bank, LBS Bank of New York, with BNL Atlanta.... If there was LBS Bank business with BNL Atlanta, then there was business. But, I would like to get Rep. [Henry] Gonzalez's [D-Tex.] statement on that and the Federal Reserve Board reports upon which the LBS Bank-BNL Atlanta branch bank were based, because I knew nothing of this when I was on the LBS board.... It is true that Henry was on the BNL board, and, it may well be true as you say, that Brent Scowcroft went to Italy to brief them. We frequently did that sort of thing, whether or not a firm was a client.

``Also, when [redacted] made his trip twith the U.S.-Iraqi business forum to Baghdad, that you mention, I was already in office and I had no knowledge of his trip at the time. So, I have no firsthand knowledge whether [redacted] lied to the House Banking Committee [chaired by Gonzalez], when he said he went there as a tourist, no matter what Ambassador Marshall Wiley of the U.S.-Iraqi Business Forum says to the contrary. b6 b7C

``It is true, as you say the Boston Globe reports, that Kissinger Associates did hire the former Brazilian Ambassador to the U.S. Sergio Correa da Costa, as a consultant while I was president of Kissinger Associates.... I agree with you that this may have had something to do with our concern on behalf of clients in the debt situation in certain Latin American countries. That is why I believe that Henry directly, perhaps in collaboration with [redacted] who put together our financial picture on such matters, worked directly with da Costa.... b6 b7C

``Apart from suggestions in the press coverage, I have no idea when da Costa became one of three owners of BCCI in Brazil, but I suspect he got involved in this after he left the firm in 1988.''

Throughout the interview Eagleburger, whose first action was to get a cigarette despite chronic emphysema, seemed unusually anxious about the growing number of documents seized in BCCI/BNL raids, prosecutions, and released by those already under investigation, that are coming into the hands of congressional investigative committees and prosecutors.

<+<jf21>Kissinger Tied to BCCI Drug-Money Laundering Schemes<cm

<${Investigative Leads} has obtained copies of internal documents which show that Dr. Henry Kissinger and his employee [redacted] were deeply involved with the Bank of Credit and Commerce International (BCCI), when its Tampa, Florida branch was indicted for laundering $32 million from the Medelli@aan Cartel. b6 b7C

The documents, which were the basis of articles appearing in the Nov. 11 and 12, 1991 {Boston Globe,} also show that former Brazilian ambassador to the U.S. Sergio Correa da Costa was chairman of the BCCI Brazil branch at the same time that he was a special consultant to Kissinger during 1986-88. Correa da Costa is also alleged to have been a chief officer of Claymore International Bank in the Grand Cayman Islands, which was established with funds from [redacted] who had fled to Brazil after being indicted for cocaine and marijuana trafficking in Louisiana. [redacted]'s narcotics-trafficking enterprise was suspected by law enforcement officials of being linked to the same Medelli@aan Cartel partners of BCCI. b6 b7C

One thank you note, from former First American Bankshares chairman Clark Clifford, suggests that Kissinger [redacted] may have helped cover up the BCCI drug-money laundering scandal when it first broke, by arranging a plea bargain. Others, including Tampa BCCI attorney [redacted] have reported that BCCI did hire the public relations firm of Burson-Marstellar to aid the coverup, as the documents indicate Henry Kissinger himself had suggested. And the (D-Mass.) Senate Foreign Relations Subcommittee hearings on BCCI chaired by Sen. John Kerry (D-Mass.), a witness who had extensive financial dealings with BCCI frontman Ghaith Pharaon, has alleged that a payoff was arranged from Tampa BCCI through Clifford to Kissinger Associates for such services. b6 b7C

Ambassador L. Paul Bremer, who had headed the U.S. State Department Office to Combat Terrorism before joining the global influence-peddling firm of Kissinger Associates, Inc. in the late-1980s, has threatened journalists that they ``had better get a good lawyer'' if they print the story told in the documents. But Lawrence Eagleburger, who was president of Kissinger Associates at the time of Kissinger Associates negotiations with BCCI (until he was confirmed as President Bush's Deputy Secretary of State in March 1989), himself confirmed several parts of the story during telephone interviews with a journalist from his Charlottesville, Virginia home. This included Eagleburger ackowledging the possibility that Kissinger Associates may have opened doors with its old client Burson-Marstellar for BCCI, although senior partner [redacted] denies it. b6 b7C

The principal documents range from an Oct. 7, 1988 letter from Kissinger Associates chief economist [redacted] to [redacted] who was [redacted] BCCI's New York branch, and they include several memos from [redacted] to BCCI's number-two man in b6 b7C international operations at the time, [redacted] This record of [redacted]'s negotiations with Henry Kissinger et al. point to Kissinger Associates, Inc. having helped put a lid on the Oct. 11, 1988 bust of the Tampa, Florida offices of BCCI and nine employees. This indictment, which originated from a drug money-laundering investigation that U.S. Customs Commissioner William von Raab called ``Operation C-Chase,'' which traced BCCI drug money-laundering to the Medelli@aan, Colombia cartel. Before an outrageous plea bargain was reached between the Federal Reserve and the U.S. Justice Department allegedly with assistance of Kissinger Associates, prosecutors had subpoenaed 41 other banks that were also suspected of worldwide drug money-laundering.

<jf30>Kissinger's Dope, Inc. Bank Links<cm

Several of the banks whose records were subpoenaed were involved in business with Kissinger or his clients. One was Marine Midland Bank, which has been owned since 1978 by the Hongkong and Shanghai Banking Corp., whose involvement in illegal narcotics dates back to the 19th-century ``Opium Wars.'' {Executive Intelligence Review} has previously documented extensive ties between the ``Hongshang'' and Kissinger Associates, including the fact that, until his recent death, Hongshang director Sir Y.K. Pao was a member of the international advisory board of Chase Manhattan Bank, whose chairman and vice-chairman are respectively David Rockefeller and Henry Kissinger. This board steered Chase into extensive dealings with the Beijing regime, and Kissinger sought to protect those investments when he was a member of the President's Foreign Intelligence Advisory Board (PFIAB), telling President Bush to take no strong action for the June 3-4, 1989 Tiananmen Square massacre. Congressional hearings when Kissinger was President Nixon's national security adviser, also show Kissinger issued an injunction against U.S. intelligence naming mainland China as part of ``Golden Triangle'' opium and heroin production.

Another highlight is that Hongshang board member [redacted]) is believed to be a major financial backer for newspaper acquisitions, like the buyup of the London {Daily Telegraph} and the {Jerusalem Post} at several times book value, by Conrad Black's Toronto, Canada-based Hollinger Corp. Kissinger is a board member of Hollinger Corp. Then, the Hongshang also signed a global merger with the British-based Midland Bank PLC, which is not only a client of Kissinger Associates but has Kissinger's employee [redacted] on its board. Another of the 41 banks whose records prosecutors subpoened in the Tampa BCCI case were those of Edmond Safra's Republic National Bank, which has merged with American Express. Kissinger is on the board of American Express.

If the Tampa BCCI prosecution had allowed Commissioner von Raab to ``follow the money,'' going up a stepladder of prosecutions leading to establishment figures like Clark Clifford, Esq., whom {Investigative Leads} had already identified in 1988-1989 coverage as a co-owner with BCCI of First American Bankshares, Kissinger Associates and many of its clients would have been in big trouble. However, the commissioner testified to Sen. John Kerry's hearings on BCCI that an outrageous plea agreement was reached in the Tampa BCCI case. The Justice Department, under then-Attorney General Richard Thornburgh, and the Federal Reserve Board not only quashed the subpoenas of other banks' records, but said that the evidence Customs had gathered to date could not be used in future prosecutions.

While this plea bargain was being reached, [redacted] b6 reported in the Nov. 12 {Boston Globe} that [redacted] who is b7C b7D [redacted] and
[redacted] Kissinger
Associates. The {Boston Globe} has reported, that a note was discovered that chairman of First American Clark Clifford wrote in April 1989, addressed to [redacted] and to then-general counsel of the Federal Reserve [redacted] The note thanks them for meeting and discussing the BCCI case. Subsequent to the {Globe} article [redacted] told a journalist that he had met the New York head of BCCI, [redacted] who was then in negotiations with [redacted] on more than one occassion, and he had frequently met during this time with BCCI Brazil chairman and [redacted] Associates consultant Sergio Correa da Costa.

Yet, [redacted] chose to deny the charges of [redacted] b6 appearing in the{ Globe} categorically in an interview with the{ b7C
New York Times}. And, he told a journalist recently that he could not locate a copy of Clark Clifford's thank you note, suggesting this was proof that the note's contents were spurious. But, a growing amount of evidence implicates Kissinger [redacted], in having helped arrange the Tampa BCCI plea bargain, thereby protecting any business partners of Kissinger Associates from potential prosecution, if the case had been allowed to continue through due process.

<jf30>Don't Put It in Writing<cm

What follows are excerpts from the new documents; Kissinger Associates has threatened to sue anyone who reprints them: <pa

@sb^An Oct. 7, 1988 letter from Kissinger Associates' [redacted] b6 yesterday and, even more, your suggestion that BCCI might be interested in developing a relationship with Kissinger Associates.... I am reluctant to be more specific, at least on paper, about the kinds of consulting projects we undertake for our clients.... I agree that a next step should be for me to meet your management in London or New York.... I look forward to hearing from you soon. Best regards, [redacted]' <pa

@sb^From an Oct. 12, 1988 memo of [redacted] to [redacted]: ``Further to our recent conversation in London, I met with [redacted] who is one of three partners in Kissinger Associates, Inc. Subsequently, the developments in the United States took place [i.e., the Oct. 11 Tampa BCCI bust]. Judging by the high level of adverse publicity that is being generated by the media, it is imperative that a firm response be made....

``I received a call today from [redacted] who informed me that Dr. Kissinger recommends that a public relations offensive be made by us and in that context has suggested using Burson-Marstellar, a highly reputable public relations firm that successfully dealt with the First Chicago crises last year. Kissinger Associates, Inc. have indicated that they shall be happy to use their personal contacts with the firm and make necessary recommendations.'' <pa

@sb^From a Dec. 19, 1988 memo of [redacted] to [redacted]: ``I am in communication with [redacted] Kissinger Associates, Inc. Their response was they are interested in principle but would like to wait a bit longer. I will be meeting [redacted] the first week of January 1989....

``It would be of interest to you to know that Mr. Scowcroft is now the National Security Designate in the Bush administration and another senior Partner of Kissinger Associates [Eagleburger] is being tapped for Assistant Secretary of State in the Bush administration....

``You may agree that this association with Kissinger Associates, Inc. needs time to be cultivated. I am working in that direction.''

@sb^From a Jan. 11, 1989 memo of [redacted] to [redacted]: ``I had a lunch meeting with the gentleman [believed to be [redacted]-ed.] on Jan. 5, 1989 and a follow up telephone conversation on January 10, 1989. It was established that it is in our best interests for both parties to continue with the conversations. As such, the door for an eventual relationship remains open.

``They were far more knowledgeable of the details of our situation during this meeting and made certain `unofficial' general recommendations which I shall convey to you at our next meeting. I am meeting my contact's senior partner [believed to be Henry Kissinger--ed.] by the end of January with a view of discussing our overall worldwide activities.''

<jf30>Damage Control <cm

From [redacted]s Oct. 7, 1988 letter to [redacted]' where [redacted] says he is ``reluctant'' to place ``on paper'' precisely what Kissinger Associates does for its clients like BCCI to [redacted]s Jan. 11, 1989 memo to [redacted] where he appears to refer to [redacted] as ``the gentlemen'' and Kissinger as ``my contact's senior partner,'' it is clear that much was going on in-between the lines of these documents. Perhaps the most important for law enforcement to discover is what were the ``certain `unofficial' general recommendations'' that ``they'' (an apparent reference to Kissinger Associates) had made to [redacted], which [redacted] thought were so sensitive he had to speak to [redacted] face to face, rather than put them on paper. It is also notable from the memos that [redacted] were aware that top personnel of Kissinger Associates, Inc. would be playing a major role in the incoming Bush Administration, and the question is raised whether the the Jan. 11, 1989 memo, that was written nine days before President Bush was sworn in, indicated that some hope had been given by Kissinger Associates that the new Administration would aid in covering up the Tampa BCCI case. Afterall, Bush's Attorney General Richard Thornburgh was later shown protecting a longtime aide, [redacted], from prosecution for cocaine trafficking.

b7C

Asked what the ``recommendations'' might be, Deputy Secretary Eagleburger, who was still president of Kissinger Associates when the Jan. 11, 1989 memo was written, said: ``I don't know. I have no idea.'' However, ather than deny the memo, Eagleburger said he could not know, because he ``had pretty much left Kissinger Associates by December'' to join President Bush's transition team. This contrasts with Ambassador Bremer, who had not yet even joined Kissinger Associates, who has insisted that [redacted]'s memos are ``self-promoting inventions'' after the initial Oct. 7, 1988 [redacted] letter to [redacted].

As noted above, however, while Burson-Marstellar officials have denied ever working for BCCI, as [redacted]'s memo to [redacted] states Henry Kissinger had suggested, BCCI attorney [redacted] claims they did. And, Deputy Secretary Eagleburger has told journalists that it is possible Henry Kissinger did help BCCI hire Burson-Marstellar at the time, since the public relations firm was an old client of Kissinger Associates. So much for Ambassador Bremer's ``damage control''--including threats--on matters over which he can have no first-hand knowledge as a witness.

<jf30>Another Kissinger-BCCI Tie<cm

Deputy Secretary Eagleburger also confirmed for a journalist that Sergio Correa da Costa, who had been Brazilian ambassador to the U.S. until Nov. 3, 1986, was a very special consultant of Kissinger Associates for the years from 1986-1988:

``It is true, as you say the {Boston Globe} reports, that Kissinger Associates did hire the former Brazilian ambassador to the U.S. Sergio Correa da Costa, as a consultant while I was president of Kissinger Associates.... I agree with you that this may have had something to do with our concern on behalf of clients about the debt situation in certain Latin American countries, especially Brazil. That is why I believe that Henry--perhaps in collaboration with [redacted] who put together the financial picture on such matters--worked directly with Correa da Costa....'' b6 b7C

{Jornal do Brasil} reported on Nov. 16, 1991 that Correa da Costa had been one of the nominee owners of BCCI Brazil throughout the period that he was a personal consultant to Kissinger and, possibly, [redacted]. Interestingly, it was when Correa da Costa left Kissinger Associates, that the record of [redacted]'s talks with New York BCCI head [redacted] starts. b6 b7C

An article on Aug. 28, 1989, in {Jornal do Brasil} said that Correa da Costa then controlled two-thirds of the voting capital of BCCI Brazil, and he is its chairman. But, but control of the bank's finance capital was held by BCCI's international offices in London, then managed by [redacted]'s boss, [redacted]. The Nov. 16 {Jornal do Brasil} article is supported by documents released during testimony of [redacted] (e.g. including Tampa, Boca Raton, etc.) befoer Kerry's Senate Foreign Relations Subcommittee on Oct. 22, 1991. b6 b7C

One of the first documents dated May 6, 1986 is a memo from [redacted] to [redacted] in BCCI London, which states that ``Ambassador Da Costa Telephoned to introduce [redacted] ... [who] is a high net worth and a highly influential individual in Sa@ato Paulo, Brazil. He is chairman of two companies in Brazil, in which the President of Brazil has an interest and was a director until the time he became president. Ambassador Da Costa also informed me of his meeting with Dr. [Ghaith] Pharaon recently in Florida and then Dr. Pharaon informed him of our proposed acquisition in Brazil and the problems BCC was facing in Brasilia. Ambassador Da Costa has promised the Bank in any way he can and he has also asked [redacted] to use his association with the President of the Republic to assist BCC.'' b6 b7C

Another Dec. 4, 1986 memo from [redacted] of the Latin America Regional Office to [redacted] of BCC Grand Cayman is on the subject: ``Salary of Mr. Sergio Correa Da Costa.'' Written after Correa da Costa had ceased being Brazilian Ambassador to the U.S. to become a special consultant to Henry Kissinger, the memo states: ``You are requested to pay salary of Mr. Sergio Correa da Costa with effect from November 3, 1986. He will be paid a monthly salary of U.S. $12,500 ... which may please be credited to his account #0260075661 with BCC New York Agency under advice to us.'' b6 b7C

A Dec. 4, 1986 telex from BCC New York to a [redacted] via [redacted] in London lists the Brazilian shareholders of BCCI Brazil as: 1) [redacted], which is [redacted] (mainly to the U.S. and Japan), whose net worth is estimated at [redacted] million; 2) [redacted], who is [redacted] in a law firm having a net worth of $15 million and [redacted] b6 b7C which is Brazil's [redacted] and [redacted] b6 b7C Brazil; 3) and, Ambassador Sergio Correa da Costa, who is Brazil's most senior ambassador and who is presently employed as a ``partner of Henry Kissinger in Kissinger Associates New York and, consultant to Coudart Brothers, a very large law firm in New York.''

BCCI's appraisal continues that Sergio Correa da Costa ``is very close to President Sarney, where both individuals are members of Brazil's prestigious Academy of letters. The Ambassador comes from an excellent family and has land holdings thru his family. His net worth is in the U.S.|$5 million range.''

A list of international loans from BCCI (Overseas) Ltd. in Panama dated April 30, 1988 notes that Sergio da Costa received a loan of $1,563,723.85 that was ``parked by BCCI Miami.'' Often, BCCI gave such loans for persons to act as nominees, who were not expected to pay interest or principal, since the money was used for them to front for BCCI in bank acquisitions and deals.

Throughout the month of September, 1989 {Jornal do Brasil} ran a series of exposes, that linked Sergio Correa da Costa to the Jan. 1, 1986 creation in the Cayman Islands of Claymore International Bank, which Senate Subcommittee documents suggest overlap his dealings with BCCI starting in that year. Before demonstrating that link it is interesting that in a letter from Correa da Costa published Sept. 29, 1989 in the {Jornal} Correa da Costa, of course, denied the links with Claymore International, saying the bank had never been ``concretized,'' but admitted to participating in the capital of BCCI Brazil. As the {Jornal} noted, BCCI Brazil had twice been investigated by Brazilian federal police for aiding and abetting flight capital operations.

As for Claymore, {Jornal do Brasil} states it had begun to operate and that its main capital came from indicted drug trafficker William Reed Elswick, who had a $9.8 million balance in Claymore as of Dec. 31, 1988. Elswick, according to the {Jornal} had fled indictment in Louisiana on cocaine and marijuana trafficking charges, to set up shop in Brazil in 1983. He was assisted by Brazilian Pepsi Cola president [redacted] b6 and others. But, when Brazilian federal police seized him in 1985 b7C in compliance with a U.S. extradition request, the {Jornal} claims Elswick had to pay millions to attorneys who had influence with then-President Jose@aa Sarney to obtain a release and pardon. Among those said to be involved was a Lebanese [redacted], who had earlier helped Propaganda-2 Freemasonic member and Italian black nobility aristocrat Humberto Ortolani obtain Brazilian naturalization.

This creation of Claymore International Bank in the Cayman Islands with drug money took place while Correa da Costa was a personal consultant to Henry Kissinger and chairman of BCCI Brazil. According to the {Jornal}, the frontman for the founding of Claymore in January 1986 was Senator Alexandre Costa's [redacted] This is the same [redacted] b6 whom then Brazilian Ambassador to the U.S. had sought to b7C introduce to BCCI officials, while Correa da Costa himself was meeting with BCCI nominee Ghaith Pharaon. (See memo dated May 6, 1986 from [redacted] to [redacted] above). b6 b7C

- BCCI and Iranamok -

Indicted drug trafficker [redacted] is also reported by the {Jornal do Brasil} as having had an account in Euro Bank in Georgetown, Grand Cayman, that was administered by [redacted], who was [redacted] with a man who had served five years in prison for participating in the [redacted] gang. Euro Bank is featured prominently in new documents released during Sen. John Kerry's Senate Foreign Relations Subcommittee hearings with former BCCI executive [redacted], as one of several possible passthroughs explored by [redacted] for the $10 million he fronted to Director of Central Intelligence William Casey and Israel for their arms-for-hostages deals with Iran involving middleman Manucher Ghorbanifar. b6 b7C

As {Executive Intelligence Review} documented in an Aug. 2, 1991 article, ``BCCI Trail Leads to `October Surprise,'|'' Casey's CIA made extensive use of the BCCI. Moreover, Iranian gun-runner and banker Cyrus Hashemi, who with his brother Jamshid, had purchased arms for Iranian Defense Minister Admiral Madani, were both key players in October Surprise--i.e. the successful attempt by Reagan-Bush to block the release of U.S. hostages held in the U.S. Embassy in Teheran until after the 1980 election. In interviews with {EIR}, Jamshid Hashemi implicated George Bush personally in this operation. Cyrus Hashemi's bank, First Gulf Bank and Trust was a wholly owned subsidiary of the Luxembourg-based First Arabian Corporation, whose investors were the same as BCCI, including former Saudi Intelligence chief Kamal Adham, Saudi financier Ghaith Pharaon, and Lebanese financier Rogert Tamraz.

Sources associated with British SIS have alleged to {Investigative Leads} that the $10 million paid by Iran and ostensibly misdirected to the wrong account number really went to [redacted], [redacted] the Geneva-based Bank of New York-Itermaritime joint venture, which is run by [redacted] Having risen to [redacted] at Union Bank of Switzerland, [redacted] became [redacted] of the Swiss subsidiaries of both BCCI and Banca Nazionale del Lavoro, respectively BCP and Lavoro Bank, through which many investigators believe the greatest amount of inter-bank transfers, arms-deals, and narcotics-trafficking were arranged. Since the scandals involving BCCI and BCP, [redacted] resigned from BCP and Lavoro Bank, but has remained a [redacted] of Rothschild Bank in Zurich and a [redacted] of Rothschild Continuation in Zug, which was created as a holding company for continuance of N.M. Rothschild & Sons, Ltd. based in London. His employer, [redacted] is known to have extensive dealings with the Israeli Government and its intelligence services, while [redacted]'s business partner, [redacted] who made his money in shady oil deals, is believed to be an Israeli Mossad go-between with U.S. intelligence. b6 b7C

The new documents released by [redacted] to the Kerry Senate subcommittee start with a telex from [redacted] of BCCI b6 b7C

Grand Cayman dated March 27, 1986 to [redacted] b6
[redacted] of the International Division of BCCI London. It states b7C that ``a company which is under formation in the Cayman Islands'' approached [redacted]'s bank ``at the request of [redacted]'' to ask whether it could deposit $10 million for a credit line. In a return telex from [redacted] to [redacted] makes clear that he knows the ``company'' is Euro Bank (the same bank Correa da Costa's partner indicted drug-trafficker [redacted] is involved with), and [redacted] adds : ``In view of their [Euro Bank's] small size and because we do not know them we would not be interested in accepting their guarantee.''

However, further documents show [redacted] sought other b6 avenues through which to work his $10 million arms-for-hostages b7C deal with BCCI on behalf of Casey and Israel. In an unclassified deposition of [redacted] dated June 8, 1989, he states that [redacted] came back with a flow chart explaining how the $10 million ``would move through Triad International Marketing.'' While [redacted] does not mention in the deposition that item ``Y'' where the arms were to be purchased for $10 million was probably Israel, he did say that [redacted] would be involved in the sale of the weapons to Iran. The Iranians would then pay $11 million through [redacted] and the $1 million profit would be divided among Triad International Marketing and others, including $40,000 proposed for BCCI's assistance. As a result of this sales pitch, Floor says that BCCI helped start to draw up documents for creation of an entity, Trivert International, as well as a promissory note for [redacted] to owe the money to another entity named Vertex.

This is part of the as yet unrevealed financial manipulations involving [redacted]'s funding on behalf of DCI b6
Casey and Israel of the arms-for-hostages deals involving b7C [redacted] as go-between. Although it is an ``Arab Bank'' in name, BCCI is proud that it has done extensive business in the past with Israel. {IL} investigators are continuing to review documents relating to the BCCI-Kissinger Associates links and the tie-ins to the Irangate affair. Any subscribers interested in obtaining copies of any of the documents cited in this article should write to the Editor for details.

involved in the Bank of Credit and Commerce International (BCCI) b7C scandal dating back to 1988. The documents, which were the basis of articles appearing in the Nov. 11 and 12 {Boston Globe,} show that former Brazilian ambassador to the U.S. Sergio Correa da Costa was chairman of BCCI Brazil at the same time that he was a special consultant to Kissinger during 1986-88. One letter, from former First American Bankshares chairman Clark Clifford, suggests that Kissinger's [redacted] may have helped cover up the BCCI scandal when it first broke.

Ambassador L. Paul Bremer, who had headed the U.S. State Department Office to Combat Terrorism before joining the global influence-peddling firm of Kissinger Associates, Inc. in the late-1980s, has threatened journalists that they ``had better get a good lawyer'' if they print the story told in the documents. But Lawrence Eagleburger, who was president of Kissinger Associates at the time of its discussions with BCCI (until he was confirmed as President Bush's Deputy Secretary of State in March 1989), himself confirmed several parts of the story during telephone interviews with a journalist from his Charlottesville, Virginia home.

The documents range from an Oct. 7, 1988 letter from Kissinger Associates chief economist [redacted] to [redacted] who was then president of BCCI's New York branch, and include several memos from [redacted] to BCCI's number two man, [redacted] s negotiations with Henry Kissinger et al. point to Kissinger Associates, Inc. having helped put a lid on the Oct. 11, 1988 bust of the Tampa, Florida offices of BCCI and nine employees. This indictment, which originated from a drug money-laundering investigation that U.S. Customs Commissioner William von Raab called ``Operation C-Chase,'' charged that Tampa BCCI had laundered $32 million from the Medelli@aan, Colombia cocaine cartel. Before an outrageous plea bargain was reached, prosecutors had subpoenaed 41 other banks that were also suspected of worldwide drug money-laundering.

- Banks with Kissinger links -

Several of the banks whose records were subpoenaed were involved in business with Kissinger or his clients. One was Marine Midland Bank, which has been owned since 1978 by the Hongkong and Shanghai Banking Group, whose involvement in illegal narcotics dates back to the 19th-century ``Opium Wars.'' {EIR} has documented extensive ties between the ``Hongshang'' and Kissinger Associates in past articles, but one highlight is that Hongshang board member [redacted]') is believed to be a major financial backer for newspaper acquisitions, like the buy-up of the London {Daily Telegraph} and the {Jerusalem Post,} by [redacted] Hollinger Corp. Kissinger is a board member of Hollinger Corp. Then, the Hongshang also signed a global merger with Midland Bank PLC, which is not only a client of Kissinger Associates but has Kissinger's employee [redacted] on its board. Prosecutors also subpoenaed the records of [redacted] Republic National Bank, which merged with American Express. Kissinger is on the board of American Express.

If the Tampa BCCI prosecution had allowed Commissioner von Raab to ``follow the money,'' going up a stepladder of prosecutions leading to establishment figures like Clark Clifford, Esq., who was known in 1988 to be a co-owner, along with BCCI, of First American Bankshares, Kissinger Associates would have been in big trouble. However, the commissioner testified to Sen. John Kerry's (D-Mass.) hearings on BCCI that an outrageous plea agreement was reached in the Tampa BCCI case. The Justice Department, under then-Attorney General Richard Thornburgh, and the Federal Reserve Board not only quashed the subpoenas of other banks' records, but said that the evidence Customs had gathered to date could not be used in future prosecutions.

While this plea bargain was being reached, [redacted] b6 b7C reported in the Nov. 12 {Boston Globe} that [redacted] who is [redacted] has said that Henry Kissinger sent BCCI officials to consult with William D. Rogers. Rogers, who had been Assistant Secretary of State for Latin American Affairs under Kissinger and who is today a board member of Kissinger Associates, denies [redacted]s claims. But, the {Boston Globe} reported, a note has been discovered that chairman of First American Clark Clifford wrote in April 1989, addressed to [redacted] and to then-general counsel of the Federal Reserve John D. Hawke. The note thanks them for meeting and discussing the BCCI case. Did [redacted] help arrange the Tampa BCCI plea bargain, which protected many business partners of Kissinger Associates from potential prosecution?

The following are excerpts from the documents; Kissinger Associates has threatened to sue anyone who reprints them:

- Business which cannot be 'put on paper' -

@sb^An Oct. 7, 1988 letter from Kissinger Associates' [redacted] to [redacted] states: ``Dear [redacted] I enjoyed lunch b6 b7C yesterday and, even more, your suggestion that BCCI might be interested in developing a relationship with Kissinger Associates.... I am reluctant to be more specific, at least on paper, about the kinds of consulting projects we undertake for our clients.''

@sb^From an Oct. 12, 1988 memo of [redacted] to [redacted] ``I met b6 with [redacted] who is one of three partners in Kissinger b7C Associates, Inc. Subsequently, the developments in the United States took place [i.e., the Tampa BCCI bust].... I received a call today from [redacted] who informed me that Dr. Kissinger recommends that a public relations offensive be made by us and in that context has suggested using Burson-Marstellar, a highly reputable public relations firm that successfully dealt with the First Chicago crises last year. Kissinger Associates, Inc. have indicated that they shall be happy to use their personal contacts with the firm and make necessary recommendations.''

@sb^From an Oct. 14, 1988 memo of [redacted] to [redacted]: ``I just b6 met with [redacted]... I emphasized to [redacted] that our b7C conversations in getting our two respective organizations together have been going on for over a year and hence, have not been generated as a result of present circumstances.... I shall keep you duly informed of my next meeting with Dr. Kissinger himself which should be sometime next week.''

@sb^From a Dec. 19, 1988 memo of [redacted] to [redacted]: ``I am in b6 communication with [redacted]... Their response was they are b7C interested in principle but would like to wait a bit longer. I will be meeting [redacted] the first week of January 1989.... It would be of interest to you to know that Mr. Scowcroft is now the National Security Designate in the Bush administration and another senior Partner of Kissinger Associates [Eagleburger] is being tapped for Assistant Secretary of State in the Bush administration.''

@sb^From a Jan. 11, 1989 memo of [redacted] to [redacted]: ``I had a lunch meeting with the gentleman on Jan. 5.... It was established that it is in our best interests for both parties to continue with the conversations. As such, the door for an eventual relationship remains open. They were far more knowledgeable of the details of our situation during this meeting and made certain `unofficial' general recommendations which I shall convey to you at our next meeting. I am meeting my contact's senior partner by the end of January with a view of discussing our overall worldwide activities.'' b6 b7C

- Damage control -

The ``gentleman'' in the Jan. 11, 1989 memo from [redacted] to [redacted] who made ``certain `unofficial' general recommendations'' for BCCI, is thought to be [redacted] who had made an appointment with [redacted] for this time. His ``senior partner'' would be Henry Kissinger himself. b6 b7C

Asked what these ``recommendations'' might be, Deputy Secretary Eagleburger, who was still president of Kissinger Associates when the meeting occurred, said: ``I don't know. I have no idea.'' Rather than deny the memo, Eagleburger said he could not know, because he ``had pretty much left Kissinger Associates by December'' to join President Bush's transition team. But, Ambassador Bremer, who has even less first-hand knowledge, has insisted that Helmy's memos are ``self-promoting inventions'' so his boss will think negotiations with [redacted] continued after Oct. 7. b6 b7C

[redacted] who is [redacted] of the public relations firm Burson-Marsteller, also told the Nov. 13 {New York Times} that his firm has never represented BCCI. However, not only does one of BCCI's attorneys in the Tampa BCCI case swear that Burson-Marsteller did do public relations work for BCCI, but Deputy Secretary Eagleburger said it is possible, since Burson-Marsteller had once been a client of Kissinger Associates. b6 b7C

- Kissinger's consultant chairs BCCI Brazil -

Deputy Secretary Eagleburger also confirmed that Sergio Correa da Costa, who had been Brazilian ambassador to the U.S. until 1986, was a very special consultant of Kissinger Associates from 1986-1988:

``It is true, as you say the {Boston Globe} reports, that Kissinger Associates did hire the former Brazilian ambassador to the U.S. Sergio Correa da Costa, as a consultant while I was president of Kissinger Associates.... I agree with you that this may have had something to do with our concern on behalf of clients about the debt situation in certain Latin American countries, especially Brazil. That is why I believe that Henry--perhaps in collaboration with [redacted] who put together the financial picture on such matters--worked directly with da b6 b7C

Costa....''

As {Jornal do Brasil} reported on Nov. 16, Correa da Costa had been one of the nominee owners of BCCI Brazil throughout the period that he was a personal consultant to Kissinger and, possibly, [redacted]. Interestingly, when Correa da Costa left Kissinger Associates, [redacted] began talks with BCCI's [redacted] in New York. An article on Aug. 28, 1989, in {Jornal do Brasil} said that Correa da Costa controls two-thirds of the voting capital of BCCI Brazil, and he is its chairman. But, control of the bank's finance capital seems to be held by BCCI International of London, then controlled by [redacted].

Is it not amazing how the paper trail of a coverup often surfaces piece by piece?

<cmHenry Kissinger's Brazilian friends are once again being linked to drugs.

Since Sept. 24, {Jornal do Brasil} has been running a series exposing the Brazilian networks who protected American drug-runner [redacted] who escaped prosecution in the U.S. by establishing operations in Brazil. Those operations included setting up Claymore International Bank in the Cayman Islands using [redacted]s dirty money. Brazilian Congressman [redacted] is calling for a parliamentary inquiry into the charge that [redacted]s money was used to found Claymore International.

``Claymore is currently an inactive bank. But in its initial phase it counted on important names on its board,'' {Jornal} notes. ``The President of Claymore International was Sergio Correa da Costa, Brazilian ambassador in the United States from 1985-87, and an ex-partner of Henry Kissinger in a consulting firm in New York.... In the same period, Correa da Costa was also director of the Brazilian branch of the Bank of Credit and Commerce International, BCCI, which has already been accused twice by the Federal Police of attempting to send dollars out of Brazil illegally; last year, the BCCI of Miami was accused of being one of the leading financial institutions laundering money earned by the mafia by drug trafficking.''

While Correa de Costa claimed he had never been President of Claymore International, {Jornal} replied, on Sept. 28, ``In fact, two-thirds of the voting capital of the BCCI de Brasil, of which Sergio Correa da Costa is chairman of the board, formally belongs to Brazilians, but its president is Englishman [redacted] and 50% of its finance capital is from the Bank of Credit and Commerce International of London.''

Brazil. Those operations included setting up a bank, Claymore International Bank, in the Cayman Islands using [redacted]'s dirty money. A Brazilian Congressman, [redacted] is calling for a Parlimentary Inquiry into the charge that [redacted]s money was used to found Claymore International. b6 b7C Jornal notes: "Claymore is currently an inactive bank. But in its initial phase it counted on important names on its board.... The President of Claymore International was Sergio Correa da Costa, Brazilian ambassadopr in the United States from 1985-1987, and an ex-partner of Henry Kissinger in a consulting firm in New York." Jornal do Brasil's report hit something, for Correa de Costa sent a letter to the paper claiming he had never been President of Claymore International, but had just been invited to join the board of Claymore do Brasil, which never was concretized." He also took issue with report that he was a director of the Brazilian branch of BCCI, saying the BCCI has no branch in Brazil. - <BCCI IN BRAZIL: DISCLOSURES> -

CSM 8/9/91: Article reviews how employees of BCCI Brazil knew all along about the BCCi connections to the various implicated US banks such as First American, because it was common knowledge. Said one banker who worked at BCCI in 1988, the connection with First American "was transparent to the general banking community for a long time." Said another banker, who requested anonymity: "I never knew exactly what the relationship was, but I knew they had the same shareholders, and everybody else at BCCI knew, too."

More interesting in the article are the names of Brazilian prominents who held shares who sat on the board of Brazil's BCCI, described as not very large, with only 37 employees and $27 million in assets. It has been for sale for months, with no takers, and is planning to change its name.

"In addition to BCCI's one-third ownership of its Brazilian branch, a local trading company IAT owns another third. Sergo Correa da Costa, a former ambassador to the US, and Rio lawyer [redacted], share the remaining third. [redacted] a former [redacted] sits on the bank's four-man board." b6 b7C Says Jornal do Brasil, the bank is "a known specialist in actively participating in foreign exchange remittances" during a period in which Brazil was restricting money sent abroad.

"Those of us who had worked at traditional banks were amazed to see how openly they did capital-flight operations in the bank," said the former BCCI Brazil employee. "They even telephoned the black-market dollar dealer if the client needed to buy the dollars to be sent abroad."

KISSINGER ASSOCIATE SERGIO CORREA INVOLVED IN NARCO-LAUNDERING

SOURCE FOR ALL BELOW IS THE 5-PAGE 10/5 "Narcotrafico" report by SP in Rio. Most of her data is from Jornal do Brasil (JB).

JB of 10/27 reported Sergio Correa da Costa, who was Brazilian ambassador to the United States from 1985-87 [he was amb to the U.N. during the years before that--mds] is now active in two banks linked to money laundering. JB says that he is an "ex-partner of Henry Kissinger in a New York consulting firm." [It is mds and ggs recollection that Correa was a partner in Kissinger Associates, Inc., at least in 1987. We have no knowledge of if and when he left the firm.]

Correa wrote a letter published in JB 9/28 in which he denied its 9/27 report that he was a director of the Brazilian branch of BCCI, saying the BCCI has no branch in Brazil, but confirmed, "...I participate in the capital--within limits set by law-- of a bank constituted in Brazil, the Banco de Credito y Comercio de Inversiones of London." [This is Spanish, probably an error made by SP, but one which makes one want to have the Portuguese text for legal purposes-mds].

JB 9/28 writes, "In fact, 2/3 of the voting capital of the BCCI de Brasil, of which Sergio Correa da Costa is chairman of the board, formally belongs to Brazilians, but its president is Englishman [redacted] and 50% of its finance capital is from the Bank of Credit and Commerce Internacional [Intenational?] of London." Correa also denies in his letter that he was ever president of CLAYMORE INTERNATIONAL BANK of the Cayman Islands. He wrote, "What happened is that I was invited by Edmar Cid Perreira to join the board of Claymore do Brasil, which never was concretized. That happened in 1987, after having left the embassy in Washington." b6 b7C

JB 9/28 reiterates that Correa did provide services to Claymore. JB 9/27 reports Claymore International Bank was founded 1/9/86 in the Cayman Islands by Senator [redacted] [redacted] [relation to Correa da Costa?] and lawyer [redacted] It says it is presently inactive. b6 b7C

JB says two former Cayman Islands government [?] officials told JB that indicted drug trafficker [redacted] had a $9.5 mn balance in his account at Claymore International as of 12/31/88. JB says that [redacted] used to bank to bring in part of the money with which he established himself in Brazil. [This is incoherent, since the article also says that [redacted] fled to Brazil in 1983, after being indicted in Louisiana for leading a band which imported cocaine and marijuana to the U.S. via maritime transport. And, the bank was only started in 86. The report later states that [redacted]s money was used by lawyer [redacted] to found Claymore.] b6 b7C

JB and the Brazil narco report details Claymore's links to [redacted] (formerly [redacted] of Rockefeller's ADELA), [redacted] (now [redacted] at central bank). Also Pepsi-Cola [redacted] Lebanese [redacted] b6 b7C

Many of these folks helped [redacted] set up shop in Brazil. In 1984, [redacted] was [redacted] OF PEPSI-COLA. Once free, [redacted] went underground, where he remains. b6 b7C

Report has lots more on [redacted] the key Brazil-US-offshore lawyfirm. Deputy [redacted] (PSDB) has asked Congress for an investigation of her, JB reports. [redacted]s investment seminars b6 b7C were frequently attended by former US consul in Sao Paulo, [redacted] b6

Una vez mas, los amigos de Kissinger aparecen ligados al escandalo del narcotrafico. El 24 de septiembre el diario <cf2>Jornal do Brasil <cf1>comenzs una serie de revelaciones sobre el caso del narcotraficante [redacted] quien b6
escaps a la justicia en los Estados Unidos y traslads sus b7C operaciones al Brasil. El escandalo cobrs importancia cuando el congresista brasileqo [redacted] solicits una investiqacisn parlamentaria del alegato de que se uss el narcodinero de [redacted] para establecer el banco Claymore International en las Islas Caimanes.

``El Claymore es actualmente un banco inactivo'', seqala <cf2>Jornal do Brasil. <cf1>``Pero en su fase inicial conts con importantes nombres en su junta... El presidente de Claymore International era Sergio Corrja da Costa, embajador brasileqo en los Estados Unidos de 1985 a 1987, y ex socio de Henry Kissinger en un bufete de consultorma en Nueva York''. Luego aqade el mismo diario: ``En ese mismo permodo, Corrja da Costa fue tambiin director de la sucursal brasileqa del Banco de Cridito y Comercio Internacional, BCCI, al que la policma federal ya habma acusado dos veces de intentar sacar dslares ilegalmente del Brasil; el aqo pasado el BCCI de Miami fue acusado de ser una de las principales instituciones financieras lavanderas de dinero obtenido del narcotrafico por la mafia''.

Corrja da Costa respondis en una carta al <cf2>Jornal do Brasil <cf1>que nunca fue presidente de Claymore International, y que sslo lo habman invitado a incorporarse a la junta directiva del Claymore do Brasil, lo ``cual nunca se concretizs''. Tambiin discreps con el informe de que il habma sido director de la sucursal brasileqa del BCCI, diciendo que el BCCI no tiene sucursal en Brasil. El <cf2>Jornal do Brasil <cf1>respondis el 28 de septiembre: ``De hecho, dos tercios del capital votante del BCCI do Brasil, cuya junta directiva preside Sergio Corrja da Costa, pertenecen formalmente a brasileqos, pero su presidente es el inglis [redacted] y 50 por ciento de su capital financiero b6

EX-EMBAIXADOR RECEBIA SALARIO DE US$ 12.500 DO BCCI

As ligacoes do ex-embaixador Sergio Correa da Costa com o Banco de Credito e Comercio Internacional (BCCI), ...vam muito alem de sua participacao como acionista minoritario da subsidiaria brasileira da institucao. Ele prestava servicos para a rede internacional de BCCI.

Nas investigacoes americanas, porem, apareceu um memorando em que o entao coordenador das atividades do BCCI na America Latina, [redacted], instrui [redacted], do BCCI nas Ilhas b6

(OO: WMFO)

SA [redacted] and the writer have participated in a series of meetings in the past few weeks with representatives of the Department of Justice (DOJ). Such meetings have focused on investigative direction/priorities. As a result of same, it has been determined that investigative efforts in the next 30 day period will focus on First American Bank (FAB). Agents assigned to captioned matter will direct their investigative efforts, for at least the next 30 days, on issues/events pertaining to FAB. The only non-FAB activity will be the review of records at Miami, by one Agent on a rotating basis. Other investigative areas/responsibilities will be held in abeyance during the above time frame. Investigative priorities will be re-addressed within 30 days. b6 b7C

SA [redacted] and the writer have conducted a thorough review of events germane to the FAB investigation. It has been determined that the Agents assigned to this matter will form three teams. One team will focus on the pre-1986 time frame. One team will focus on the time period 1986-1987. One team will focus on the post 1987 time frame. The critical time frame is 1986-1987. The periods prior to 1986 and after 1987, will be used to build on events from 1986-1987. Due to the complexity of events, each team will work in concert with each other. b6 b7C

Each team will participate in the review of selective documents located at DOJ which came from :

(OO: WMFO)

On this date, I attended a meeting at 500-1st St., NW, WDC, for the purpose of determining what remains to be done to make the space comply with security requirements. Representatives of FBIHQ Space Management Unit, TSS, DOJ, GSA, the contractor and the landlord were also there. A tour of the premises resulted in a list of 8 discrepancies, only one of which--there being no sure way of locking the double doors from the hallway into the reception area--was deemed to be a disqualifier. The landlord and contractor accepted the list, agreed to correct all of the items as quickly as possible and, in particular, agreed to rectify the unacceptable situation with the entry doors by COB 5/1/92. Therefore, assuming no further problems are encountered, I have set Monday, 5/11/92, as the date to begin operating from 500-1st St.

Also on this date, in anticipation of the move:

1) OSM [redacted] was requested to: b6 b7C
a) initiate a purchase order for leasing 12 parking spaces in the garage at 500-1st St. for the remainder of FY 92;
b) post an opening for a squad secretary; and
c) arrange for mail service.
2) [redacted] TSD, ext. 5367, was requested to arrange with C&P to install the telephones. b6 b7C
3) SA [redacted] was requested to initiate relocation and installation of our computer equipment.
4) [redacted] Property Unit warehouse, ext. 115-3873, was requested to provide additional furniture.

[redacted] informed me that, although not all interested parties at FBIHQ have signed off on it, the proposal for the FBI to fund DOJ's participation has been approved. The funding will be done in the form of a money transfer from the FBI to an account held by DOJ, out of which DOJ will then pay its own expenses for everything other than rent. b6 b7C

Memorandum

To: [redacted] b6 b7C

From: [redacted]

Date: May 8, 1992

Re: BCCI

I would pursue many additional avenues as part of the C/A investigation. However, as we've discussed, it is just as important who is assigned to do the exploring. At a minimum, I would do the following:

1) Interview [redacted] b6 b7C who showed a high specificity of knowledge about BCCI within the NSC as early as 1981

2) Interview [redacted] b6 b7C. Start by having him give a complete exposition of the notes we already have, then ask follow-up questions, and pursue those leads. The notes may (or may not) indicate that the officials named therein were approached by BCCI.

3) Investigate fully the Hammond death and the frightened phone call to [redacted] b6 b7C Because of the size of the body, some argued Hammond wasn't dead, or at least that it was not his body in the grave. What was it that led to his phone call? What was going on w/i BCCI at the time? Among other things, [redacted] signs a waiver for his SSAnos in June 1990.

4) Fully explore the allegations from [redacted] b6 b7C and [redacted] including that Clifford [redacted] I have long felt that [redacted] offered us an opportunity to develop some significant evidence against C/A. They have each been interviewed, but in my opinion, the 302's are not comprehensive enough, nor have all leads been exhausted.

11) I would also consid[redacted] talking to [redacted] about his concerns at the time of the 1951 application and any suspicious acts or limits imposed on him: and to [redacted]

5) I feel the same way about the allegations surrounding Clifford [redacted] who claimed to [redacted] The related 302's suggest he may have been [redacted] As I read it, the matter was left with him [redacted] If there is any chance such documents exist, we should run it down. Also, if C/A do or did believe he had such documents I suspect [redacted], providing another possible basis for prosecution.

6) I would want to know whatever [redacted] has in the Iran-Contra files that might pertain to BCCI (in its broad, conspiratorial role). To my knowledge, we've received little information. I can't believe that knowledgable [redacted] investigators would not be able to find a treasure trove of info there. I suspect our requests have been too narrow.

7) I would interview the informants and former BCCI officials involved in the 1985 investigation in Los Angeles and the case involving [redacted] in Chicago, neither of which resulted in any charges being followed.

8) I would closely follow the investigations noted in the "Hidden Interests" memo of 2/28/92 from [redacted], particularly the "General Media" allegations. Were any of those fruitful, I believe they would engender incriminating info on C/A.

9) I would have you personally interview [redacted] including questions about visits made to him in the early 80's by [redacted] and by [redacted]

10) [redacted]'s mandate to investigate started with activities in mid-1985. I would want to question [redacted] & others about earlier use of BCCI by the [redacted], esp.

1325015-000-6405

Memorandum of May 8 (cont'd)

To: [redacted] b6 b7C

Fr: [redacted]

Dt: May 11

12) I would pursue [redacted], and the missing 1978 [redacted] report and the missing communications in 1985. [redacted] b6 b7C b7E in particular, seems to have repeatedly misrepresented his knowledge of the [redacted] info to reporters who questioned him before he testified in front of Senator Kerry. When he did testify, he was still suspiciously vague and claimed some of what he did recall was still classified

13) I would consider talking with representatives of the former shareholders of FAB-Virginia. Clifford never acknowledged he was a CCAH shareholder at the time and therefore could not have been the disinterested buffer he claimed to be between the shareholders and the foreign investors. I would look for a RICO predicate somewhere in these actions.

14) I would pursue the hiring of [redacted] by [redacted] b6 b7C That connection did not arise in a vacuum. How, and through what channels, did it occur? Similarly, I would investigate the connections of [redacted]

Re WMFO teletype to FBIHQ, dated 4/20/92.

The Criminal Investigative Division has established the Criminal Intelligence Section. This Section consolidated most of the major analytical entities, including Visual Investigative Analysis (VIA), under the purview of one Section Chief. The consolidation is to maximize the expertise of the existing analytical personnel in reference to a more comprehensive and involved mission. This new mission is inconsistent with traditional VIA applications, which has caused the duties and responsibilities of the VIA personnel to be redefined. Therefore, VIA as previously known will no longer be available for any investigations; consequently, your request for VIA assistance must be denied.

Questions concerning this matter may be directed to [redacted] FBIHQ, FTS 324-5718.

SA [redacted] and the writer have been conducting a comprehensive review of allegations relating to BCCI being investigated by the "Task Force." To better facilitate the investigation, four teams have been established to address specific aspects of the case. Three substantive investigative teams have been established. A documents/administrative team will be established when resources so permit. b6 b7C

Each BCCI Agent will receive outlines containing allegations and team structures. Said outlines cover the period 6/1/92 to 8/1/92. It is anticipated that investigative outlines will be prepared every 60 days. As previously set out, by SA [redacted] "Lead" forms will be disseminated to each Agent. b6 b7C

It should be noted that certain assignments/responsibilities for each Agent will be adjusted to better conform to the team structures. Each team needs to work in conjunction with the other teams, as numerous leads overlap and could impact on the teams differently.

It will be the responsibility of the Team Leaders to insure that all leads are prioritized and addressed accordingly. We will be flexible in making adjustments. It is requested that all Agents review the outlines and advise the writer of additional leads that should be addressed.

As set forth in writer's memo of 3/17/92, materials containing speculations of BCCI's role in terrorism and nuclear proliferation were forwarded to this squad from the White Collar Section. The allegations of each of the papers were summarized in the referenced memo. Generally, the materials consisted of papers authored by [redacted] in his capacity as [redacted] b6 b7C Each of the papers contain allegations and summary statements of wrongdoing on the part of BCCI. Most of these allegations have previously surfaced, and when mentioned in the papers are not accompanied by evidence of factual support. Similarly, no basis of knowledge accompanies the statements.

Writer met with SSA [redacted], Congressional Liaison Office, and provided him with copies of the articles. SSA [redacted] soon thereafter contacted writer and advised that he did not believe [redacted] should be contacted or interviewed in light of information [redacted] had discovered during inquiries he had made. [redacted] advised that writer should speak with SSA BOB BLITZER, Assistant Section Chief, Counter-Terrorism Section for additional details. b6 b7C

On 5/21/92, writer spoke with SSA BLITZER who indicated he was familiar with [redacted] and his writings. SSA BLITZER indicated the Congressional Affairs Office had received an abundance of the documents on nuclear proliferation which were being distributed "all over the hill." SSA BLITZER described these documents as being riddled with false information and inaccuracies. SSA BLITZER said that the articles have some good information carefully interwoven with falsehoods and reach wild conclusions. b6 b7C

SSA BLITZER confirmed that [redacted] SSA BLITZER speculated that the b6 b7C

On 5/8/92, four separate FD-160's, Indices Search Slips, were submitted for global searches. Attached to each of these FD-160's was a list of approximately 200 names, both companies and individuals. [redacted]. As such, this has become a monumental task.

Therefore, the purpose of this memo is to justify the reason for this task and to request that appropriate personnel be assigned so as to complete this search in an expeditious manner.

As a result of a plea agreement between the Department of Justice (DOJ) and the liquidators of Bank of Credit and Commerce International (BCCI), no distributions will be made by the liquidators to BCCI creditors without DOJ approval. Based upon DOJ's belief that a substantial amount of these funds are forfietable and/or will lead to important information for the criminal investigation, DOJ has requested the FBI to perform a computerized national search of each name. It is pointed out that many of the dollar amounts associated with these names are in the millions of dollars.

Attached are one of the four FD-160's. [redacted] still remains to be done. The other three FD-160's have previously been forwarded to Indices.

Specimens received: March 27, 1992

Q12 One U.S. Customs Service magnetic tape cassette marked in part "5/13/89"

Result of examination:

The piece of recording tape was remounted in a Maxell C30 housing. Two enhanced monaural copies were made of specimen Q12 on side A of separate Maxell C90 magnetic tape cassettes with Dolby B noise reduction encoding. Each copy was made in two parts.

In order to obtain maximum intelligibility, the enhanced copies should be played back using a high-quality cassette recorder and headphones, using Dolby B noise reduction as indicated on the cassettes.

Supervisory Special Agent [redacted] conducted the enhancement examination.

4. BCCI Holdings also owned and controlled Bank of Credit and Commerce International (Overseas) Limited (sometimes referred to as "BCCI Overseas"), a foreign bank established under the laws of the Cayman Islands.

5. The term "BCCI" means a combination of BCCI Holdings, BCCI S.A. and BCCI Overseas.

6. International Credit and Investment Company (Overseas) Limited (sometimes referred to as "ICIC Overseas") was a foreign bank established under the laws of the Cayman Islands.

7. Credit and Commerce American Holdings, N.V. (sometimes referred to as "CCAH") was a Netherlands, Antilles corporation, headquartered in Curacao. Credit and Commerce American Investment, N.V. (sometimes referred to as "CCAI") was a Netherlands corporation, wholly owned by CCAH. As more fully described below, CCAH and CCAI were formed in 1978 to acquire control and ownership of Financial General Bankshares (sometimes referred to as "FGB"). CCAH, CCAI and FGB were bank holding companies under the Bank Holding Company Act.

8. First American Corporation (sometimes referred to as "FAC") was a bank holding company under the Bank Holding Company Act. It was wholly owned by Credit and Commerce American Investment, N.V. and owned First American Bankshares, Inc., (sometimes referred to as "FAB"), a bank holding company under the Bank Holding Company Act.

9. First American Bankshares, Inc. was the successor to Financial General Bankshares. FGB owned a number of banks

(sometimes referred to as "subsidiaries" of FGB) with state and federal charters, including First American Bank, Washington, D.C. and First American Bank of New York (sometimes referred to as "FABNY").

10. First American Bank of Georgia (sometimes referred to as "FABGA") was the successor to the National Bank of Georgia (sometimes referred to as "NBG"), after NBG was acquired by Credit and Commerce American Holdings, N.V. and First American Bankshares, Inc.

11. NBG Financial Corporation (sometimes referred to as "NBGFC") was a corporation organized and existing under the laws of the State of Georgia. NBGFC was the holding company for the National Bank of Georgia from 1983 until 1987, when NBGFC was acquired by First American Bankshares, Inc.

12. Defendant CLARK M. CLIFFORD was a partner in the Washington D.C. law firm of Clifford & Warnke. He was the chairman of the board of directors of Credit and Commerce American Holdings, N.V. and its wholly owned subsidiary holding companies, Credit and Commerce American Investment, N.V. and First American Corporation. He was the chairman of the board of directors of First American Bankshares, Inc., the principal operating company of CCAH. He was an attorney for BCCI and a borrower from BCCI. He was an attorney for CCAH and subsidiaries of CCAH.

13. Defendant ROBERT A. ALTMAN was a partner in Clifford & Warnke. He served on the boards of directors of Credit and Commerce American Holdings, N.V., Credit and Commerce American Investment, N.V., First American Corporation, First American Bankshares, Inc. and three FAB subsidiaries --- First American Bank of New York, First American Bank of Georgia and First American Metro Corp. He was president of First American Corporation. He was an attorney for BCCI and a borrower from BCCI. He was an attorney for CCAH and subsidiaries of CCAH.

14. Agha Hasan Abedi was a principal of BCCI and ICIC Overseas.

15. Swaleh Naqvi was a principal of BCCI and ICIC Overseas.

16. Ghaith R. Pharaon was a Saudi Arabian businessman and purportedly a shareholder in BCCI. He was a BCCI borrower. He purportedly was the owner of Interedec (Georgia) Limited N.V. and through Interedec (Georgia) Limited N.V. and its subsidiaries purportedly owned NBG Financial Corporation.

Background

17. In or about December 1977 and January 1978, BCCI purchased nearly 20% of the shares of Financial General Bankshares, purportedly on behalf of four investors from the Middle East.

18. On or about February 17, 1978, FGB sued BCCI, Agha Hasan Abedi, the investors from the Middle East, and several others, alleging that the defendants had formed a secret group to acquire control of FGB without filing required disclosure statements with the United States Securities and Exchange Commission (sometimes referred to as the "SEC"). Before the litigation began, BCCI, Agha Hasan Abedi, and the four investors from the Middle East retained Defendants CLARK M. CLIFFORD and ROBERT A. ALTMAN as their counsel.

19. On or about March 18, 1978, the United States Securities and Exchange Commission filed a complaint against BCCI, Agha Hasan Abedi, and several others, alleging that the investors from the Middle East had acted as a group and had failed to file required disclosure statements. On advice of counsel, including advice of Defendants CLARK M. CLIFFORD and ROBERT A. ALTMAN, the investors from the Middle East entered into a consent agreement the same day, not admitting any violation but agreeing to make a tender offer for all shares of Financial General Bankshares.

20. Subsequently, Defendants CLARK M. CLIFFORD and ROBERT A. ALTMAN directed the efforts by their clients to acquire Financial General Bankshares. In the course of the state and federal regulatory proceedings that followed, Defendants CLARK M. CLIFFORD and ROBERT A. ALTMAN were put on notice of the regulators' concerns about the relationship between BCCI and Credit and Commerce American Holdings, N.V., and their concerns that BCCI not control or influence management or policies of CCAH or its subsidiaries.

21. On or about October 19, 1978, Defendant ROBERT A. ALTMAN, on behalf of Credit and Commerce American Holdings, N.V. and Credit and Commerce American Investment, N.V. (which had been formed to facilitate the acquisition of FGB shares), filed an application with the Board of Governors of the Federal Reserve System to become bank holding companies by acquiring all of the voting shares of Financial General Bankshares. The Board of Governors of the Federal Reserve System dismissed the application on or about

February 16, 1979, on the ground that if undertaken the proposed acquisition would violate Maryland law.

22. In or about July of 1980, the CCAH/CCAI investor group, represented by Defendants CLARK M. CLIFFORD and ROBERT A. ALTMAN, reached an agreement with Financial General Bankshares management whereby FGB agreed to support the proposed acquisition. This agreement permitted the investor group to resubmit an application to the Board of Governors of the Federal Reserve System.

23. On or about October 3, 1980, Defendant ROBERT A. ALTMAN, on behalf of Credit and Commerce American Holdings, N.V. and Credit and Commerce American Investment, N.V., resubmitted an application to the Board of Governors of the Federal Reserve System for approval to become bank holding companies by acquiring Financial General Bankshares. The application included the following representation: "BCCI owns no shares of FGB, CCAH or CCAI, either directly or indirectly, nor will it if the application is approved. Neither is it a lender, nor will it be, with respect to the acquisition by any of the investors of either FGB, CCAH or CCAI shares."

24. On or about December 11, 1980, Defendants CLARK M. CLIFFORD and ROBERT A. ALTMAN met with regulators from the Office of the Comptroller of the Currency, who were analyzing the application at the invitation of the Board of Governors of the Federal Reserve System. In response to concerns about the relationship of BCCI and Agha Hasan Abedi to the proposed acquisition of Financial General Bankshares, Defendants CLARK M.

CLIFFORD and ROBERT A. ALTMAN assured the regulators that BCCI would neither lend money to the proposed investors nor become involved in controlling FGB.

25. On or about March 12, 1981, the Office of the Comptroller of the Currency expressed the following views in response to the December 11, 1980 meeting:

> It has now been represented to us that BCCI will have no involvement with the management and other affairs of Financial General nor will BCCI be involved in the financing arrangements, if any are required, regarding this proposal. This commitment is critical, both now and in the future, since such a relationship with another financial institution would be a significant factor in appraising this application. This is especially important in light of the overlapping ownership which will exist between Credit and Commerce American Holdings, N.V., Credit and Commerce American Investment, N.V., and BCCI. Moreover, any enhanced direct or indirect affiliation or relationship between BCCI and Financial General would take on even greater significance in light of the fact that BCCI is not subject to regulation and supervision on a consolidated basis by a single bank supervisory authority.

26. On or about April 23, 1981, the Board of Governors of the Federal Reserve System conducted a hearing at which Defendants CLARK M. CLIFFORD and ROBERT A. ALTMAN represented the proposed investors of Financial General Bankshares. In response to a question about what precisely was BCCI's function in the FGB acquisition proposal, Defendant CLARK M. CLIFFORD gave the following response:

> None. There is no function of any kind on the part of BCCI. I think when the question was asked, having to do with what might occur in the future, I think someone may have given the answer, 'Well, that would depend upon the judgment of Financial

> General in the future.' I know of no present relationship. I know of no planned future relationship that exists, and other than that, I don't know what else there is to say . . . .

27. On or about April 23, 1981, Defendant ROBERT A. ALTMAN gave the following response to a question about the similarity of names between Credit and Commerce American Holdings, N.V. and Credit and Commerce American Investment, N.V. and Bank of Credit and Commerce International: "[O]ther than similarity in certain respects, there is no connection between those entities and BCCI in terms of ownership or other relationship."

28. In or about June of 1981, the investor group created a subsidiary of Credit and Commerce American Investment, N.V., FGB Holding Corporation (sometimes referred to as "FGBHC"), which joined in the CCAH and CCAI application to acquire Financial General Bankshares.

29. On or about August 25, 1981, the Board of Governors of the Federal Reserve System, based on the entire record, including the representations made by Defendants CLARK M. CLIFFORD and ROBERT A. ALTMAN as counsel for the applicants, issued an order approving the applications of Credit and Commerce American Holdings, N.V., Credit and Commerce American Investment, N.V., and FGB Holding Corporation to become bank holding companies by acquiring Financial General Bankshares.

30. On or about March 2, 1982, FGB Holding Corp. made a tender offer to purchase all the shares of Financial General Bankshares. The transaction was consummated on or about April 16,
